The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 12th September 1917 :—

No. 17 of 1917.

A Bill further to amend the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the 1882. Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Presidency Small Cause Courts (Amendment) Act, 1917.
Short title.

1882. 2. For the provisos in section 7 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, the following Amendment of section 7, Act XV of 1882. shall be substituted, namely :—

"Provided that—

- (1) no person shall be appointed to be Chief Judge of a Small Cause Court unless he is—
  - (a) an advocate of a High Court of Judicature established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, or 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 61.
  - (b) a vakil or attorney of one of the said High Courts ;
- (2) no person shall be appointed to be a Judge of a Small Cause Court unless he is—
  - (a) an advocate, vakil or attorney of one of the said High Courts, or
  - (b) a Judge of a Court of Civil Judicature of not less than 5 years' standing ; and
- (3), of the persons so appointed to be Judges, including the Chief Judge, not less than one-third shall be advocates of one of the said High Courts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Under section 7 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act of 1882, the only persons eligible for appointment to the office of Chief Judge of a Presidency Small Cause Court are advocates of a High Court. The present Bill enables the appointment to that office of vakils and attorneys who are already eligible for appointments as Judges, in the same courts, and removes an anomaly for which there is no justification, particularly in the case of vakils who are eligible for appointment as High Court Judges. The Bill will in no way affect the existing provision of the law that at least one-third of the Judges shall be advocates of a High Court.

One of the modifications which the Notification made in the Punjab Act was the addition thereto of a section repealing the Peshawar Canals Regulation, 1898 (IV of 1898), which then applied only in the North-West Frontier Province. As this was not a repeal by legislation, it is now proposed expressly to repeal the Regulation as from the date on which the Act of 1905 was extended to that Province.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of the Bill is to make necessary amendments of a formal nature in certain enactments and to repeal certain unnecessary enactments and an enactment which has ceased to be in force otherwise than by express repeal.

Reasons for the proposed amendments and repeals are sufficiently explained in the margin of the Schedule to the Bill.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 12th September 1917 :—

No. 19 of 1917.

A Bill to amend the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Act, 1913.

WHEREAS since the passing of the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Act, 1913, Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim has made a representation to the Governor of Bombay in Council to the effect that his original intention was that the Sinking Fund of Rs. 20,00,000 (twenty lakhs), referred to in the said Act, should be formed in a period of sixty years by carrying to the credit of the said fund annually and investing an amount equal to 00·61 per cent. calculated on the amount of the Sinking Fund to be so formed, and that the Repairs Fund of Rs. 2,00,000 (two lakhs), also referred to in the said Act, should be formed in a period of twenty years by carrying to the credit of that Fund annually and investing an amount equal to 3·72 per cent., calculated on the amount of the Repairs Fund to be so formed but that the said Act, owing to a mistake, provided that the said percentages should be carried to the credit of the said respective funds every six months instead of every year ;

AND WHEREAS under the orders of the Governor of Bombay in Council an inquiry into the matters aforesaid was directed to be held by the Advocate-General at Bombay who, after careful investigation and recording evidence, reported to the Governor of Bombay in Council that there had been a bona fide mistake in the drafting of the said Act and that the original intention of Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim was that the percentages of Rs. 00·61 and Rs. 3·72 and no more should be set aside each year ;

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to amend sections 7 and 14 of the said Act for the purpose of giving effect to the intention aforesaid ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy (Amendment) Act, 1917.
Short title.

2. (1) In sections 7 and 14 of the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Act, 1913 (hereinafter called the said Act), for the words "six months" wherever they occur shall be substituted the word "year."

(2) The said Act shall be read and construed as if the amendments hereby enacted had formed part of the said Act from its commencement.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is as follows :—

On the 20th July 1911, His Majesty was pleased to create Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim, Kt., a baronet. In order that his successors should worthily support the dignity of this honour, Sir Currimbhoy settled in perpetuity on himself and his successors considerable properties in Poona and Bombay valued at 20 lacs. The bulk of the income of these properties was, as Sir Currimbhoy desired, to be enjoyed by the holder of the Baronetcy for the time being. But he also wished to create two funds known respectively as the "Sinking Fund" and the "Repairs Fund." The object of the former was to create a further property of 20 lacs in 60 years, and that of the latter was to create a further property of 2 lacs in 20 years.

In order to make the Sinking Fund, Sir Currimbhoy desired that income amounting to 00·61 per cent. of 20 lacs (i.e., Rupees 12,200) should be annually set aside and invested by the trustees in British or Indian Government stock. To make the Repairs Fund he desired that income amounting to 3·72 per cent. of two lacs (i.e., Rupees 7,440) should be similarly set aside and invested. These percentages were based upon actuaries' calculations. The wishes of the Baronet were communicated to his Solicitor, who drafted a Bill known as the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Bill which was passed by the Legislative Council in 1913.

After the Bill had become law it was found that a mistake had occurred in the drafting. Sections 7 and 14 required the sums, which Sir Currimbhoy had wished to be paid annually, to be paid every six months. Sir Currimbhoy brought the mistake to the notice of Government. An enquiry was held which showed that Sir Currimbhoy's complaint was justified. The present Bill is therefore introduced to correct the error. As the trustees assumed the responsibility of making the payments annually and not every six months, clause 2 (2) of this amending Bill has been introduced to give retrospective effect to clause 2 (1).

"(a) the total number of Victoria Crosses awarded to Indian members of the Indian Expeditionary Force since the commencement of the World War and how many of these have been awarded to persons belonging to the Punjab; and

"(b) the total number of other military decorations awarded to Indian members of these Forces, and of these how many have been received by persons belonging to the Punjab?"

"(b) The total number of other military decorations awarded to Indian officers and men of these Forces is approximately 1,870, of which 908 have been given to persons belonging to the Punjab."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh asked :—

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[*Mr. Jinnah; Sir William Vincent; Khan
Zulfiqar Ali Khan; Mr. K. V.
Rangaswamy Ayyangar.*]The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah asked:—

3. "In view of the recent announcement and also the proposed visit of Mr. Montagu, and having regard to the feelings which have been aroused in the country by the internment of Mrs. Besant and her co-workers, do the Government of India propose to consider the question of their release?"

Release of

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"The Government of India are prepared to recommend the Government of Madras to remove the restrictions placed on Mrs. Besant and Messrs. Wadia and Arundale under the Defence of India rules, if the Government of India are satisfied that these persons will abstain from unconstitutional and violent methods of political agitation during the remainder of the war. In taking this course the Government of India are actuated by the confident hope that the recent announcement of His Majesty's Government and the approaching visit of Mr. Montagu to this country will have such a tranquilizing effect on the political situation as to ensure the calm and dispassionate consideration of the difficult problems which are to be investigated during his stay in this country.

"The Government of India are prepared, subject to the same conditions to take the same course in regard to other persons upon whom restrictions have been placed under these rules, merely by reason of their violent methods of political agitation."

The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah asked:—

"May I ask a supplementary question? Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take the cases of Muhammad Ali and Shaukat Ali into consideration?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"The Government are already considering the cases of Muhammad Ali and Shaukat Ali and are making enquiries in regard to them."

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfiqar Ali Khan asked:—

4. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state if they contemplate the creation of Tribunals or Committees for examination of internment cases under the Defence of India Act?"

Creation of Tribunals or Committees for the examination of
cases.

"(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to refer the case of Mrs. Annie Besant to one of these Tribunals?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) The Government of India are consulting local Governments as to the necessity for appointing such Committees or Tribunals.

"(b) If it is decided to appoint them, and should such a course be necessary, the Madras Government will doubtless consider the expediency of referring the case mentioned to the local Tribunal."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked:—

5. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving particulars relating to the number of superior gazetted appointments in the Secretariat of the Government of India held by non-civilians, their pay and status, and the number of such appointments held by Indians?"

Superior gazetted appointments in the Secretariat of the Government.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"A statement* giving the required information is laid on the table. It has been compiled on the assumption that by 'non-civilians' the Hon'ble Member meant officers other than those belonging to the I. C. S., and that the Army Department does not come within the scope of his question."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar; Sir George Barnes; Sir Robert Gillan; Sir William Meyer.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Tax on petrol.

6. “(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the imposition by the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act, 1917, of an increased tax on petrol has had the effect of conserving any petrol for war purposes, and if so, what amount of petrol has been so conserved ?

“(b) If the imposition of the increased tax has not had the desired effect, will Government be pleased to discontinue such imposition ?”

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

“I am not able as yet to state the effect of the increased tax on petrol, for the tax has not been long enough in force to enable any reliable estimate to be made of its effect on consumption.

“With regard to my Hon'ble friend's suggestion that the tax, if it should prove ineffective, ought to be taken off, I would point out that if taxation intended to check consumption proves ineffective, the normal remedy would be not to remit the taxation but to increase it.”

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Railway fares.

7. “(a) Have railway fares in India been increased recently and was the object of such increase to reduce the number of railway passengers ?

“(b) If so, what has been the reduction if any in the percentage of passenger traffic since the fares were increased ?”

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

“The reply to (a) of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the affirmative.

“As regards (b) all the information so far received shows that the enhancement of fares has resulted in considerable reductions in the numbers of passengers travelling, ranging from 8 to 25 per cent.”

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Indian indentured labour.

8. “(a) Is it a fact that as stated in the issue of the “Pioneer,” dated 14th February 1917, replies from all Local Governments, except Madras, have been received regarding Indian indentured labour ?

“(b) If so, will Government consider the advisability of laying them on the table now or soon after they are in receipt of the Madras Government's reply ?”

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

“Replies from all the Local Governments and Administrations regarding labour emigration to the Colonies, including that from the Government of Madras, have now been received and I lay these replies on the table. The Government of India before the recent Conference in London addressed a despatch on the subject to the Secretary of State, and they propose to publish this despatch with the Secretary of State's reply as soon as the latter is received.”

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

Commission on advances made by Bank.

9. “(a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to the controversy in the Madras newspapers about the propriety of the Presidency Bank's cashier charging a commission on advances made by the Bank ?

“(b) If so, is this practice of charging commission authorised ?

“(c) Has any step been taken to effect a discontinuance of the practice ?”

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

“The Government of India have seen certain articles in a Madras newspaper alleging that the cashier of the Bank of Madras at Colombo takes a

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar asked :—

10. "(a) Is it a fact that Dr. Marsden has been appointed permanently to the office of Dyeing Expert with the Government of Madras?" Appointment of Dr. Marsden as Dyeing expert.

"(b) If so, were the Government of India consulted before that step was taken?"

"(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence on the subject between the Government of India and the Madras Government?"

The Hon'ble Sir O. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The answer to questions (a) and (b) is in the affirmative.

"(c) The correspondence asked for is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur asked :—

11. "When travelling on Form 'E' on certain duties, do Indian officers of the Indian Army get the same concessions, in drawing railway fare from Government, as is allowed in the case of all other individuals who are entitled to travel on Form 'E'?" Travelling allowances of Indian officers.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"The only Indian officers of the Indian Army who travel on Form 'E' are Indian Aides-de-Camp. They receive the same concessions in regard to rail fares as British Officers of the rank of Captain. All other Indian Officers are provided with Railway warrants when travelling on duty."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur asked :—

12. "Will Government be pleased to state what progress has, within the last five years, been made in the postal system for quicker and more frequent postal deliveries to villages distant from postal towns and branch post offices?" Improvement of the postal system.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"During the five years which ended on 31st March 1917, the number of post offices increased from 18,801 to 19,409, that is to say, 608 new post offices were opened during this period, and the number of postmen and village postmen employed increased from 25,745 to 27,043, an increase of 1,298. Since the 31st March last 159 new post offices have been opened and 101 more postmen and village postmen have been employed.

"The opening of every new post office results in a better delivery service not only in the village where it is situated but also in the surrounding country. So far as the financial position permits it is the policy of Government to open new post offices and to employ additional village postmen where the new revenue is expected to cover the additional expenditure within a reasonable period."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

13. "Will Government be pleased to publish the opinions of Local Governments on the recommendations of the MacLagan Committee on Co-operation before taking final action thereon?" The MacLagan Committee on Co-operation.

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"The opinions* of Local Governments on the subject are placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan asked :—

The Bijnore District in the U. P. and the War Loan.

14. "(a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to a circular letter, dated the 18th April 1917, issued by Mr. L. M. Stubbs, I.C.S., Magistrate and Collector of Bijnore District, in the United Provinces, to a number of gentlemen of the Vaishya caste, in which he accuses them, as a class, of cupidity, timidity and stupidity as also of ingratitude, because their contributions to the War Loan did not come up to his expectations ?

"(b) Did Mr. Stubbs vilify a class, and by implication the gentlemen addressed, with the cognisance of the Local Government ? If not, what action has the Government taken against the official ?

"(c) Does not Government consider the contributions to the War Loan from the gentlemen who received this letter and other Vaishyas in the districts as forced contributions ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The matter is one on which the Government of India have no information and the question should more suitably be put in the Local Legislative Council."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Self-Government for India.

15. "Is it a fact that a circular was issued by the Government of India to Local Governments and Administrations in March last, or about that time, asking them to take any action, or adopt a particular attitude, towards the movement for self-government within the Empire or Home Rule ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay such circular on the table ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"A circular on the subject was issued : it was confidential, and the Government are not prepared to disclose its contents or lay it on the table."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Modification of the Indian Universities Act.

16. "Will Government be pleased to state, if they propose to take, at an early date, any steps to modify the Indian Universities Act so as to allow the Allahabad University to increase the number of its Fellows ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The question of the modification of the Indian Universities Act is under the consideration of the Government. But they are unable to say whether steps at an early date will be taken to carry it out."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Trade Commission for India.

17. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state what will be the special duties of Mr. Chadwick, the Trade Commissioner for India who will reside in England and what will be his emoluments and the total cost of his office ?

"(b) Will Government be further pleased to state if the Industries Commission have submitted any interim report and if it is in pursuance of that report that the above appointment has been made ?

"(c) If such report has been submitted, will Government be pleased to publish it for general information ?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Sir George Barnes; Dr. Tej Bahadur Saprú; Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The attention of the Hon'ble Member is invited to the Press Communiqué issued on the 14th of June 1917, in which it was stated that the principal function of the Trade Commissioner will be the assistance of Indian export trade. He will advise the commercial public in their search for fresh markets for Indian products and manufactures and establishing new commercial connections within the empire. He will also help Indian industrialists in their enquiries regarding machinery and processes of manufacture. He will work in close co-operation with the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade, and with the Director General of Commercial Intelligence in India, and will be a source of ready information to commercial men in the United Kingdom on Indian commercial and industrial matters. His office will be located in the City of London so that he may be in direct and immediate touch with merchants and others interested in Indian products and manufactures. As at present arranged Mr. Chadwick will draw two-thirds of the salary which he would draw if he were on duty in India, converted into sterling at the rate of 1s 6d to the rupee. I am afraid I cannot yet state what the total cost of his office will be, as details regarding staff and miscellaneous expenditure still remain to be settled.

"(b) The Indian Industrial Commission has not submitted any interim report as yet. The answer to this part of the question is, therefore, in the negative. The report of the Indian Industrial Commission will be published as soon as it is received by Government, but as the sittings of the Commission will continue till February, the report cannot be expected earlier than March or April next."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Saprú asked :—

18. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the grounds on which it has been considered expedient to bring out a Barrister-at-Law from England to hold the office of Advocate General of Bengal?" Post of Advocate General

"(b) Will Government be pleased to state if the gentleman who has been appointed to that office has any actual experience of Indian law and litigation, and whether he at any time regularly practised before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council?"

"(c) Will Government be further pleased to state why the Hon'ble Mr. B. C. Mitter, the present officiating Advocate General of Bengal, or any other leader of the Calcutta Bar, has not been appointed permanently to the vacancy caused by the appointment of the Hon'ble Sir Satyendra Prasanna Sinha to the office of a member of the Executive Council in Bengal?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The appointment of Advocate General, Bengal, is made by His Majesty under the provisions of section 114 of the Government of India Act, 1915, and the Government of India are not qualified to discuss the grounds on which a selection is made, nor have they any record of the Courts in which Mr. Gibbons has practised."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Saprú asked :—

"I beg to ask a supplementary question. Was His Excellency the Governor of Bengal consulted about this matter and, if so, what was his opinion?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"I must ask for notice of the question. I have no information available here."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Sir William Vincent ; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

Appointment of Mr. W. G.
Wood as Principal of Roorkee College.

19. "(a) Is it a fact that Mr. W. G. Wood was appointed to his present office of Principal of the Roorkee Engineering College, after retirement from his regular service in the Public Works Department ?

"(b) Had he any experience of teaching students and had he been at any time in his life in charge of any college in India ?

"(c) Was the Director of Public Instruction in the United Provinces consulted by the Local Government before Mr. Wood was appointed to his present office ?

"(d) Have Government received any representation from Mr. E. F. Tipple, Professor in the Roorkee Engineering College, protesting against his supersession by the appointment of Mr. W. G. Wood to the office of Principal ? Will Government be pleased to state why Mr. Tipple was superseded ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) Yes.

"(b) It appears from the answer given in the Legislative Council of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh on the 11th November 1916, in reply to a rather similar question put by the Hon'ble Mr. Chintamani, that Mr. Wood has had no previous experience as an educationist.

"(c) No.

"(d) The answer to the first sentence is in the affirmative. The answer to the second sentence is that the Local Government considers it eminently desirable that, in present circumstances, the Thomason Civil Engineering College should be under the control of a practical Engineer."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

"I beg to ask a supplementary question. What was the opinion of the Director of Public Instruction in the United Provinces ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"I have no idea ; I must ask for notice of that question."

Constitutional

20. "(a) Have the Government of India addressed any despatch to the Secretary of State regarding proposed constitutional reforms in India ? If so, have they received any reply from the Secretary of State ?

"(b) If the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to publish their own despatch with the minutes, if any, by individual members of the Executive Council, the despatches, if any, of Local Governments, and the despatch of the Secretary of State ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The attention of the Hon'ble Member is drawn to the answer to a question on the same subject asked by him in this Council on the 7th February last. Government have nothing to add to that reply."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

The Public
Commission.

21. "(a) Have the opinions of all Local Administrations been received on the Report of the Indian Public Services Commission ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay them on the table ?

"(b) Have Government asked for and received the opinions of any public bodies on the Report ? If so, will they be pleased to lay these opinions on the table ?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir William Vincent; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Sir George Barnes.]

"(c). Do Government propose to suspend any action being taken on the recommendations of the Commission till the more important public bodies in the country, particularly all the Provincial Legislative Councils, have been consulted in the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"The reply to parts (a) and (b) of the question is in the negative.

"As regards part (c) I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the statement made by Sir Reginald Craddock in dealing with the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on the 20th March last on the question of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. I would further draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to the answer given to a question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda on March 7th on the same subject.

"I think that it may be assumed that if important public bodies in the country desire to express themselves regarding the recommendations of the Commission, they and the Members of the Provincial Legislative Councils will have ample opportunity of representing their views to their Local Government or Administration."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked:—

22. "Will Government be pleased to state the monthly import of cotton-goods into India since the cotton duties were raised to 7½ per cent by the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1917?" Import of cotton-goods

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied:—

"I place on the table a statement* showing the total yardage of grey, bleached and coloured piece-goods imported into India and the total value of all cotton-goods, excluding twist and yarn, imported into India for the months of March, April, May, June and July of the current year. Figures for August are not yet available."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked:—

23. "Will Government be pleased to state the number of cotton mills now working all over India and what percentage of the requirements of this country are met by their outturn?" Cotton Mills

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied:—

"The figures showing the number of cotton mills in India for 1916 are not complete, but in 1915 there were 244 such mills. This is exclusive of mills which do not come under the Indian Factories Act, and also of mills in Native States and foreign territory. The latter numbered 25 for the year 1913-14 which is the latest year for which figures are available.

"The percentage of the requirements of this country which is met by the outturn of Indian Mills may be estimated as follows:—The total production of grey, bleached and coloured piece-goods in Indian Mills in the twelve months ending March 1917, less exports of piece-goods of Indian manufacture, amounted to 1,331,726,000 yards; the total import of grey, bleached and coloured piece-goods from foreign countries, less re-exports, during the same period amounted to 1,800,652,000 yards; so that it may be said roughly that the outturn of the Indian Mills represents about 42 per cent of the total requirements of piece-goods in this country."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[*Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi ;
Sir George Barnes ; Sir William
Meyer.*]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

Rise in the
cotton-goods.

24. “ (a) Has it been brought to the notice of Government that the prices of cotton-goods have recently risen nearly hundred per cent in several parts of India and that such extraordinary rise has caused great hardship among the agricultural, and poorer middle classes ?

“ (b) Are Government in a position to state whether the main reasons for this extraordinary rise in the prices of cotton-goods are the shortage of tonnage and artificial inflation of prices by powerful organisations ?

“ (c) Are Government prepared—

(i) to offer any special facilities for the greater importation of cotton-goods, and

(ii) to regulate the price of cotton-goods in the same manner that food prices are now controlled in England and those of wheat and jute are regulated in India ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

“ (a) The rise in the wholesale prices of cotton-goods in Calcutta at the end of March 1917 as compared with the period immediately before the outbreak of the war amounted to 86 per cent.

“ (b) The causes of the rise are complex, and to a certain extent problematical, but the main causes no doubt are, firstly, shortage of tonnage, and secondly, the rise in the price of cotton, to which may be added the fact that last year stocks in the country were below normal and the demand was brisk owing to a favourable monsoon.

“ (c) The allotment of freight space on British vessels is controlled entirely by the Shipping Controller in the United Kingdom. The Government of India are not prepared to ask His Majesty's Government to allow special tonnage facilities for the importation of cotton-goods. Nor are they prepared to regulate the price of cotton-goods in this country. I may add that the Hon'ble Member is incorrect in supposing that the prices to Indian consumers of wheat and jute are regulated in this country.”

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

allowance.

25. “ Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a short account of the exchange difficulty and the exchange compensation allowance granted to public officers since the days of Lord Dufferin ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

“ The Hon'ble Member will find the information for which he asks in paragraph 52 of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Public Services in India. I may add that exchange compensation allowance was introduced in the viceregalty of Lord Lansdowne and not in that of Lord Dufferin.”

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

One Rupee
Rupee
notes.

26. “ Is it in contemplation to issue one Rupee and two-and-a-half Rupee notes in India, and, if so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why their issue is considered necessary ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :— •

“ The Government of India have decided to issue Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ notes at important centres in India commencing experimentally with the Presidency towns, and in Mesopotamia. The reasons for this decision will be explained by me when I introduce, at a later stage of to-day's proceedings, a Bill to amend the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1910, and the Indian Paper Currency (Temporary Amendment) Act, 1917."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

27. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the total mortality in the Malaria. different provinces of India due to malaria since 1910 ?

"(b) What have been the steps so far taken by the Government in the different Provinces to combat this scourge, and what amounts have been spent by each of them annually for this purpose during the last ten years ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) It is impossible to give the figures asked for, as malaria cannot be distinguished in the vital statistics from other forms of fever.

"(b) As regards the first part, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given by the Hon'ble Sir Harcourt Butler to Mr. Ghuznavi on the 16th September 1914. As regards the second, Local Governments will be asked to furnish figures of the amounts spent on anti-malaria measures."

asked :—

28. "Will Government be pleased to state the amounts of money spent on Money spent education per capita of population in India annually and to state the corre- on educa- sponding figures for England, France, Germany, United States, Russia, Italy and tion. Japan ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The total amount of money from all sources expended upon education in British India amounted in 1915-16 to Rs. 0.456 per head of the population. It is impossible to give corresponding figures for the other countries named because figures for elementary education only are generally available and it is uncertain whether the method of calculation is the same as that adopted in India. The expenditure per head of the population on primary education in the countries specified has been reported to be as follows :—

	Rs.
India, 1911	0.079
England and Wales, 1911-12	10.000
France, 1911	3.364
German Empire, 1911	7.910
Japan, 1911	1.667
United States, 1913	16.57

The total direct expenditure in British India upon primary schools in 1915-16 was Rs. 0.115."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

29. "How much of the money spent on elementary education in India is Money devoted to recurring expenditure and how much to non-recurring, and how much spent on of the recurring expenditure goes towards the maintenance of inspecting staffs elementary in each Province ?" education.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS; HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair; The President.]

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given in reply to a question bearing on the same subject put by him on the 20th March last, and to the statement then laid down on the table. That reply and table give all the information available in this Department relating to the question."

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

His Excellency the President :—"First let me welcome you to another Session. You will already have heard from the Secretary in the Legislative Department that I am attempting this year to make the Simla Session more interesting, to admit resolutions, and to get forward with legislation. But all this, as I think Hon'ble Members will on reflection understand, can only be done under certain conditions. The administrative work of the departments has to be carried on and the situation of the Council Chamber is the reverse of convenient for the majority of Members. When you adjourn, you are far from your places of habitation, and any reasonable period of adjournment would practically be absorbed in passing to and fro. Hon'ble Members and Secretaries also have to get through their daily work, I propose therefore each day to sit approximately until 2 p. m. and then to adjourn until the next date of Session. In this way we shall get through, I hope, the greater part of our work and shall not put Members to an excessive amount of inconvenience. The large number of resolutions received will however make it difficult for us to achieve this unless, Members co-operate in expediting business. I have gone into the matter with the Secretary in the Legislative Department, who is, as you all know, exceedingly solicitous for the comfort and convenience of Hon'ble Members, and I hope that the arrangements he has made will meet with favour in your eyes. In any case, if Hon'ble Members are dissatisfied they have only to mention the matter to Mr. Muddiman and I shall be very happy to consider any representation which they may wish to make.

"Before I proceed to discuss larger questions, I should like to allude to the loss which the Council is shortly to sustain through the appointment of Mr. Bhupendranath Basu to the Council of the Secretary of State. Mr. Basu has been a conspicuous figure in this Council and has won for himself the esteem and regard of us all. The many Committees to which he was appointed, the attention which was always paid to his speeches, the cordial reception which has been accorded to his appointment, all testify to the high position which he had won for himself. Speaking for myself, my pleasure in suggesting his name to the Secretary of State was tempered by the sense of the loss which we should sustain through his appointment. On the other hand, I was most anxious that there should be on the Secretary of State's Council one who was in intimate touch with the latest political developments, and I am sure we can all agree that in Mr. Basu the Secretary of State has obtained an adviser who will be of eminent service.

"Sir Prabhashankar Pattani had only lately joined us, but equally I feel that in him the Secretary of State will find one whose long intimacy with Native States will enable him to advise with authority from the point of view of those States. His period of office also on the Council of the Governor of Bombay will have given him an insight into administration which cannot fail to be of value. I do not think that anyone who has come in contact with him can have failed to be impressed by his sagacity and earnestness of purpose.

"In recording then our sense of loss by the departure of these two eminent colleagues, we can, I think, congratulate ourselves that their services are not lost to India, but are merely translated to another and most honourable sphere

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

of usefulness in the cause of their native land. I must remind you in this connection that the Secretary of State has now three Indian Members on his Council. The presence of these Members in London will, I think, secure the full representation of the current political views in India when momentous questions of policy have to be decided.

"I now come to larger questions. It is just a year ago since this Council came together as a new Council and I presided over you as Viceroy for the first time. It was then early days for me to put before you my hopes and fears, my aims and aspirations. Moreover, I laid down for myself as a principle of conduct that I would make no promises of which I could not see the prospect of early fulfilment. It is one of the accusations which is sometimes brought against the Government that lavish promises are made; that days and weeks and months and years pass, and that the promises are not honoured. I shall not argue the point whether this can or cannot be described as a true bill. But for myself I shall ask you to judge my administration on work accomplished and not on promises made. And now let me put before Hon'ble Members in as clear, succinct and unvarnished a manner as possible what has been done during the sixteen months of my administration and what we hope to do. Dismiss from your minds any preconceived ideas as to motives. It is an old legal maxim that the law does not enquire into motives, but judges of a man's intentions by his acts. This is the principle on which I would ask you to arrive at your conclusions. You, Gentlemen, are here to co-operate with Government in its policy and administration. It is before you then in the first place that I lay an account of what my Government has done and is hoping to do.

"I think I may outline our policy generally as follows:—We put before ourselves three main tasks—

First.—To secure that the services of the Indian Army should not go unrecognised or unrequited, and that rewards to them should hold the foremost place.

Secondly.—That we should endeavour to remove any grievances, either sentimental or material, which we found to exist.

Thirdly.—That we should define the goal of British rule in India and map out the roads leading to that goal.

Let me take these tasks in order and examine what progress has been accomplished.

"First, then, with regard to the Army. I venture to think that Hon'ble Members and India generally will approve our determination to mark in as signal a manner as possible the services of those gallant soldiers who are upholding India's honour on the battle-fields of three continents. The pay of Indian officers, sub-assistant surgeons and non-commissioned officers has been substantially increased. The rates of battu allowed on field service have been raised. Ordinary pensions have been improved, while wound and injury pensions have been enhanced and made admissible under more generous conditions. The soldierly qualities of the personnel of our Mule Transport Corps, who have rendered such excellent service on every front, have been recognised and rewarded by the grant to them of combatant status, thus placing them on the same footing as other Indian soldiers. In addition to the above, the grant of free rations, which, in the case of Indian ranks, was formerly restricted to those serving in the field, has now been extended to all combatants serving in India. The value of this concession is equivalent to an increase of over 30 per cent to the sepoy's pay, and is thus in effect, a handsome addition to the latter. This concession should prove of great benefit to the health and physical development of the soldier, and, to judge from the stimulating effect which it has on recruiting and the favourable reports which have reached us, it has met with very general approval.

"Recent gazettes have shown that the individual gallantry and good services of Indian officers and men have been liberally and promptly rewarded, and we have now under consideration a scheme for the bestowal of land grants, or equivalent alternative rewards, on Indian soldiers who have rendered specially meritorious service, and we hope that it will be brought into operation before long. We have accepted the Commander-in-Chief's recommendations for the improvement of the lines of Indian troops, including the quarters of Indian officers, and these reforms should, when carried into effect, add greatly to the comfort of all ranks. We also have before us proposals for the replacement of the regimental hospitals of Indian troops by well-equipped and adequately-staffed station hospitals. These proposals, besides increasing the efficiency of the Indian Medical Service, will secure for the patients a higher standard of comfort and attention than is possible under present conditions.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[ The President. ]

"Hon'ble Members will recollect that Captain Ajab Khan at our last Session put forward several suggestions, for the Commander-in-Chief's consideration, in regard to various minor details affecting the contentment and well-being of the Indian soldier. I am informed that many of these suggestions have been adopted, while others are receiving sympathetic attention.

"As a memorial to the services of the Indian Army in the present war, we contemplate the institution of a school for the education of the sons of Indian officers. There is no body of men which have rendered more faithful and loyal service, and we hope that this school may not only enable the next generation to prove themselves worthy sons of their gallant fathers, but to start their careers with educational advantages which will enable those who show special ability and character to rise high in the service of their King-Emperor.

"Last, but not least, I may mention that we have forwarded to the Secretary of State a despatch embodying our proposals for opening to Indians British Commissions in His Majesty's Army, and we have been informed by him that His Majesty's Government accept our proposals, of which they had received the main outlines by telegram, in principle. As a mark of his approbation of their services during the war, His Majesty the King-Emperor has been pleased to appoint nine Indian officers to British Commissions with effect from the 25th August. I would remind Hon'ble Members that the question of Commissions is one that dates back to what I may describe as prehistoric times. It has been the subject of discussion by Government after Government, and Lord Curzon hoped that, by the institution of the Imperial Cadet Corps, he had taken the first step towards solving the difficulty. Years slipped by however, and nothing was done until we took up the matter again. I do not disguise from you that the problem bristles with difficulties. Nevertheless, we have grappled with them with a sincere desire to arrive at some practical solution, and the appointment of the nine officers referred to may be regarded as an earnest of the favourable attitude of His Majesty's Government towards our proposals. We now trust that our efforts to dispose of a problem, of which the solution is long overdue, will be met by goodwill on all sides. We ask for loyal co-operation on the part of those who see danger and difficulty in our policy, as also on the part of those who may be impatient of mere beginnings.

"Let me now turn from the Army to the second task which we set ourselves. There have been outstanding for many years matters which have been regarded as grievances by Indians. We felt, as a Government, that it was our duty to endeavour to remedy those grievances, and that no policy of reform would be complete which did not include an honest endeavour to do away with them. I will proceed to narrate what progress has been made in this direction.

"The position of India within the Empire has obviously the first claim on our attention. You will perhaps remember what Lord Hardinge said in his speech of 22nd September 1915 to this Council—

"From this statement of the actual constitution of the Imperial Conference you will see that the ultimate decision upon the representation of India at the next meeting of the Conference rests with the Conference itself. It is of course premature to consider the manner in which the representation of India, if admitted, should be effected, but prima facie it would appear reasonable that India should be represented by the Secretary of State and one or two representatives nominated by the Secretary of State in consultation with the Viceroy, such nominees being ordinarily selected from officials resident or serving in India."

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[The President.]

"The next step was taken when His Majesty's Government decided at the beginning of this year to convene a special War Conference in London, and the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Government of India, nominated His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner, the Hon'ble Sir James Meeson, and Sir Satyendra Sinha as his colleagues in the representation of India—a notable advance on the representation which Lord Hardinge foreshadowed. In alluding to this subject I said at our last Session—

"I am sorry to think that the enormous importance of the decision taken by His Majesty's Government stands in danger of being minimised and discounted by hasty and not very well-informed criticism. As the French proverb has it, 'it is the first step which counts,' and India has been admitted to-day for the first time to a place of honour at the Council table of the Empire. It marks a point in the history of India which, though it may not be seen in its true perspective to-day will, I have no hesitation in saying, be the beginning of a new chapter in India's history under the Imperial flag."

"I think I can claim to-day that events have proved me to be right.

"An Imperial Cabinet, it is now announced, is to meet once a year. India is to be represented in this Cabinet and one representative from India is to attend the Cabinet in the same way that one representative attends from each self-governing Dominion.

"The status of India in the Empire is thus fully recognised and an advance has been made such indeed as might have been hoped for, but was scarcely to be expected a year ago.

"Again, as regards the position of India in the Empire. The Dominion representatives have accepted the principle of reciprocity of treatment, and have commended to the favourable consideration of their Governments—three general principles.

First, that the facilities for settlement accorded to Indians should not be less advantageous than those allowed to subjects of other Oriental nations.

Secondly, that facilities should be accorded to educated Indians visiting the Colonies for travel and study as apart from settlement.

Thirdly, that Indians who have already been permitted to settle should receive sympathetic treatment.

"We in this country may regret that these principles do not go further, but I think Hon'ble Members will admit that a great advance has been made in this most important question. And let me bring to your notice in this connection a notable utterance in the Canadian Parliament. On 18th May last Sir Robert Borden said—

"I found it of very great advantage in discussing matters of common concern to India and ourselves that we had the representatives of India at the Conference. I invited the members of the Conference to meet informally at the hotel at which I was staying, and we had a free, full, and frank discussion of the whole situation in so far as the Dominions are concerned. India has had matters of difference, matters sometimes of controversy, with South Africa, perhaps also with Australia and New Zealand, and on some occasions with Canada. Sir Satyendra Sinha stated the case from the Indian standpoint with great ability and fairness, conspicuous moderation, and very deep feeling. His address to us was not the less impressive because it was so fair and so moderate. On our part, we spoke with equal freedom, equal frankness, and, I hope, with equal moderation. The net result was the resolution at which we arrived, and which I have read. Its basis is the idea that the self-respect of India shall be maintained by an agreement that whatever measures we enforce in regard to the emigration or the visits of Indians to Canada shall also prevail with regard to the emigration or visits of Canadians to India.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[The President.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"I do not think that any one in this House can dispute the fairness of that proposal. Upon certain other matters which we discussed I need not dwell to-day. I see nothing but good in the presence of India at that Conference, and I believe that there will be no objection in this House or in this country to having that great dependency of the Empire represented at future meetings. India has been splendidly loyal in this war and has contributed of her manhood and of her treasure for the purpose of enabling us to win it. We must take that all into account. Her civilisation is different from ours; it is more ancient, in some respects it may be said to be on a higher plane. There is more of idealism in their civilisation; more perhaps of materialism in ours. I am not disposed to discuss the question as to whether one or the other civilisation is superior; but I do say that the Indian civilisation is entitled to our respect, and that we must do our part in making the inhabitants of that great dependency of the Empire feel that they are not treated with contumely or injustice by the people of any of the Dominions. I believe that purpose will be carried out; I believe it will be materially assisted by the Conference which we had with the Indian representatives."

"I think we may congratulate ourselves on Sir Robert Borden's sympathetic speech and see in it a happy augury for the future.

"Again, in the abolition of Indentured Immigration we may claim to have satisfactorily dealt with another grievance. I think Hon'ble Members in the past scarcely realised the difficulties with which the Government of India had to contend in relation to this matter. Pledges had been given with regard to the maintenance of the system until a substitute had been found, which, though understood in India to mean abolition within a very short period, were understood in a very different sense in the Colonies. I had to be jealous of India's good faith in this matter, but I am glad to say that the action which we took in prohibiting emigration under the Defence of India Act, thus leading to abolition, is now fully accepted and understood by the Colonies and the Colonial Office, and for this removal of any misunderstanding we have to thank our delegates to the Imperial Conference, Sir James Meston and Sir Satyendra Sinha, who by their explanation of India's attitude at a meeting held at the Colonial Office were able to remove any suspicion of bad faith which might have attached to our action.

"I need not dwell at length on the well-worn theme of the cotton duties: This matter has been a source of grievance upon which British and Indians have alike expatiated for the past twenty odd years. That grievance has now in large measure been removed, and while of course we know that the action taken is to be subject to reconsideration when the fiscal arrangements of the different parts of the Empire come to be reviewed at the end of the war, I venture to prophesy, as I did in the case of Indentured Emigration, that such things, when once abolished, cannot be revived, and I need hardly say that the Government of India would offer the most strenuous opposition were such a course proposed. I think you may take it, that, in any fiscal changes which may be introduced after the war, the interests of India will be fully considered.

"There still remain two subjects of grievance, viz., Indian Volunteering and the administration of the Arms Act. In my speech on the Indian Defence Force Bill I said that "Volunteering, as we have known it under the Volunteers Act, 1869, is dead. It is useless to spend money on a military force which is bound to be ineffective under the conditions and nature of its existence." But under the Indian Defence Force Act we offered an opportunity for Indians to enlist and men have been enrolled and University Companies have been established at Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad. These corps, though not nearly as strong in numbers as we could have wished, will afford us some useful guidance as to the future. I can only regret that the experiment has not been more successful.

"And here, though the subject is not strictly germane to the matter in hand, I should like to congratulate Bengal on the battalion of regular soldiers which it has raised and those—Dr. Mullick in particular—who have been instrumental in raising it. I hear the very highest praise given to the keenness and zeal of the men, and I look forward to their proving their prowess against the foe.

“The question of the administration of the Arms Act is one which requires considerable and detailed examination. We have had it under examination now for some time and we are still awaiting the views of Local Governments on our proposals, but this much I can say that we as the Government of India will not accept any solution of this question which continues to base exemption on racial distinctions.

“I now turn to the third task, viz., Constitutional Reforms. At the very first Executive Council which I held as Viceroy and Governor-General, I propounded two questions to my Council—

- (1) What is the goal of British Rule in India?
- (2) What are the steps on the road to that goal?

“We came to the conclusion, which, I trust most Hon'ble Members will agree, was inevitable—that the endowment of British India as an integral part of the British Empire with self-government was the goal of British Rule, and His Majesty's Government have now put forward in precise terms their policy in respect of this matter, a policy which I may say that we as the Government of India regard in substance as practically indistinguishable from that which we put forward. With regard to the second question, after a careful and detailed examination of the ground, we arrived at the decision that there were three roads along which an advance should be made towards the goal. The first road was in the domain of local self-government, the village, the rural board, and the town or municipal council. The domain of urban and rural self-government is the great training ground from which political progress and a sense of responsibility have taken their start, and we felt that the time had come to quicken the advance, to accelerate the rate of progress, and thus to stimulate the sense of responsibility in the average citizen, and to enlarge his experience.

“The second road, in our opinion, lay in the domain of the more responsible employment of Indians under Government. We felt that it was essential to progress towards the goal that Indians should be admitted in steadily increasing proportion to the higher grades of the various services and departments and to more responsible posts in the administration generally. It is, I think, obvious that this is a most important line of advance. If we are to get real progress, it is vital that India should have an increasing number of men versed not only in the details of everyday administration, but in the whole art of government.

“I doubt whether there is likely to be anyone who will cavil at the general conclusions at which we arrived as to these two roads of advance; but agreement must not blind us to their importance. There is no better source of instruction than the liberty to make mistakes. The first and foremost principle which was enunciated in Lord Ripon's Self-government Resolution of May 1882, and was subsequently emphasised by Lord Morley and Lord Crewe in their despatches of 7th November 1908 and 11th July 1913, respectively, was that “the object of local self-government is to train the people in the management of their own local affairs, and that political education of this sort must take precedence of mere considerations of departmental efficiency.” We are in complete accord with that principle, hence our advocacy of an advance along the first road.

“Equally we realise the paramount importance of training in administration, which would be derived from an advance along the second road. There is nothing like administrative experience to sober the judgment and bring about an appreciation of the practical difficulties which exist in the realm of administration, and it is from this source that we may look forward in the future to an element of experienced and tried material for the legislative assemblies.

“We come now to our third road, which lay in the domain of the Legislative Councils. As Hon'ble Members will readily appreciate, there is no subject on

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[The President.]

which so much difference of opinion exists and with regard to which greater need is required for careful investigation and sober decision. I may say frankly that we as the Government of India recognise fully that an advance must be made on this road simultaneously with the advances on the other two, and His Majesty's Government, in connection with the goal which they have outlined in their announcement, have decided that substantial steps in the direction of the goal they define should be taken as soon as possible. Some criticism has been directed against the Government of India on the score that we have not disclosed the policy outlined in our despatch. I must remind Hon'ble Members that the decision on such a question rests, not with the Government of India, but with the authorities at home. Moreover, on the larger question of a declaration of policy, in view of its unique importance, I have steadfastly refused, in the face of much adverse criticism, to anticipate by any statement of my own the decision of His Majesty's Government, who alone could make a final and authoritative statement, and I was careful to warn Hon'ble Members in my opening speech to them last February of the likelihood of delay, owing to the grave pre-occupations of the Cabinet at home. Well, this however is, I hope, now immaterial, for His Majesty's Government have announced their policy and have authorised the Secretary of State, with His Majesty's approval, to accept my invitation to visit India and to examine the issues on the spot. I had invited Mr. Chamberlain to visit India some time back. He was on the point of accepting when his resignation took place. Immediately on Mr. Montagu's assumption of office, I expressed the hope that he would see his way to accept the invitation which I had extended to his predecessor, and I am delighted that the Cabinet have decided that he should accept. Some apprehension has been expressed lest the Government of India is about to be superseded temporarily by the Secretary of State. There need be no anxiety on that score. As I have told you, Mr. Montagu is coming on my invitation to consult informally with myself, the Government of India and others. He will make no public pronouncements of policy, and business between the Government of India and the Home Government will be conducted through the regular channels and the Council of India. There is no question of supersession, but the outstanding advantage of Mr. Montagu's visit is that he will now have the opportunity of making at first-hand an examination of the questions in issue, and for my part I shall leave nothing undone to enable him to receive all the suggestions of representative bodies and others which he may desire. In these circumstances and in view of Mr. Montagu's assurance that there will be ample opportunity for public discussion of the proposals which will be submitted in due course to Parliament, I would suggest to Hon'ble Members that the intervening time before his arrival might be spent in the quiet examination of the arguments to be placed before Mr. Montagu. For myself I am anxious that, when Mr. Montagu arrives, we—and in that pronoun I include all those representative bodies and others mentioned in the announcement—should have ready to place before him all the material which will enable him to form a reasoned judgment.

"I hope Hon'ble Members will not regard my advice as suspect, but I would press it on their attention. Is it too much to ask that, when Mr. Montagu arrives in India, he should find a calm atmosphere, suggested policies carefully thought out and supported by sober arguments and concrete facts, and a spirit of sobriety dominating everyone worthy of the issues to be examined ?

"I had intended to deal in my speech with Mrs. Besant's internment, but the answer to the question on the subject which you have just heard makes this unnecessary. I would only add that Lord Pentland's Government took action against her with the greatest reluctance, and after Lord Pentland had personally attempted to dissuade Mrs. Besant from the course which she was pursuing.

"There the subject must rest for the present and I revert to a survey of the practical activities of Government. I have described in former speeches our policy with regard to Industrial Development. In dealing later with the activities of the Munitions Board, I shall show what great hopes we entertain in this direction, and when on the termination of the war we have in our hands

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[The President.]

the report of the Industrial Commission, which we shall be able to compare with the experience we have derived from the working of the Munitions Board, I am confident we shall be in a position to make a great move forward.

"I had hoped to find an opportunity to deal at some length to-day with our plans in regard to Agricultural Education, but important as the subject is, it must give a place to more important matters. For the present I will confine myself to mentioning the fact that a Conference was held in Simla last June under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill whose absence from Council I may say we all regret; that conclusions were reached as to the means by which a real and permanent improvement in agricultural methods could be effected through the medium of education at schools and colleges; and that the recommendations of the Conference will be shortly referred to Local Governments.

"My summary of our activities would be incomplete if I did not allude to the subject of education. We are all agreed that a definite advance must be made in the sphere of education—especially of primary education. There is no direction in which an advance is more urgently needed, and it is especially essential in relation to real political progress; but for that very reason, as I think Hon'ble Members will readily see, it is not possible to indicate the actual line of advance. But I can assure you that we are fully alive to the urgency of the problem, and it is only the fact that there are other problems—intimately connected with this—awaiting solution, which prevents me from indicating our policy in this most important question.

"So far Hon'ble Members in listening to my speech might imagine that there was no such thing as a war in existence, and that my Government's time had been solely occupied with internal problems and had devoted no time or thought to the problem what India could do to help in the great struggle. I will now explain what we have done and what we are trying to do. In my opening speech to you at Delhi I said our motto must be "effort and yet greater effort." During the past six months that motto has been ever before us, and I can confidently say that we have done our best to act up to it. There are three directions in which we can help—materials, men, and money.

"As regards materials, we set up some six months ago a Munitions Board under Sir Thomas Holland, who reports progress to me every week. I am able therefore to give you of my own knowledge some account of the activities of the Board, and, if it proves somewhat long, you must excuse it on the ground of the real importance of people generally knowing the scope of our activities.

"Although certain scientific and technical services had been organised before the war, and individual experts had been employed by Local Governments for the purpose of facilitating the development of our natural resources as well as industrial enterprises, the Government of India have for some time been conscious of the fact that these efforts were more sporadic than systematic. They were nevertheless not without value as experiments necessary to establish the data required to formulate a more comprehensive policy. The marked success which has followed the organisation of research and demonstration work in scientific agriculture, and the assistance which has been given to the mineral industries by the Geological Survey are striking examples that encourage a bolder policy on similar lines for the benefit of other, and especially the manufacturing, industries.

"With the object of gathering together the results of recent attempts to assist industrial development, and for the purpose of formulating schemes for a more systematic policy, my predecessor appointed a Commission which has commenced its survey and expects to complete its investigations during this next cold weather.

"Meanwhile, special conditions arising directly from the war—the shortage of ocean transport facilities, the cutting off of supplies of many manufactured articles, and the necessity of economising man-power in the United Kingdom—

[ The President. ]

have induced my Government to anticipate the findings of the Industrial Commission by organising at once, so far as is possible under present circumstances, the resources of the country, with a view of making India more self-contained and less dependent on the outer world for supplies of manufactured goods.

"The Munitions Board was founded five months ago, with this main object in view, and its organisation has grown so rapidly along the lines originally planned that its activities now exceed in bulk those of most Government departments. Of the two main objects kept in view when this organisation was planned, the supply of essential stores for the armies in the field has necessarily been given precedence to the ultimate object of developing established, and of inaugurating new, industries in India. The primary object of the Munitions Board was immediately essential, while the accessory object was regarded as more distantly important. But experience has demonstrated the inventive fertility of necessity; and success beyond expectation has already followed attempts to manufacture in the country articles that formerly could be obtained only from abroad.

"In carrying out its primary object, the Munitions Board has gathered together the hitherto isolated fragments of other purchasing departments, and has welded them into a single organised machine for the purpose of regulating contracts and amalgamating demands, thereby buying on a larger scale, and preventing the competitive buying between various Government agencies which previously caused those disturbances of local markets that were neither good for Government nor for the commercial community.

"The early activities of the Board were necessarily confined to a re-grouping of the centrally controlled official machinery. In co-operation with the Local Governments, however, outposts have now been instituted in every province, and the frame-work having thus been established, the development and consolidation of the whole body should proceed on sound lines. It has been necessary hitherto largely to employ existing official agencies; but with the foundations now laid, it is hoped to be possible to obtain the co-operation of representatives of the non-official community in so far as this is consistent with their own competing commercial interests. A few members of the commercial community have already offered their full-time services, and others have undertaken part-time duties as members of local priority committees. With the consolidation of the organisation it is hoped that further representatives of the unofficial community will be able to take part in this new institution.

"In revising the indents made by Government officials on the Stores Department of the India Office, and in controlling the applications made by private importers for permission to import articles on the English list of prohibited exports, it has been found practicable to curtail numerous demands that were formerly made in ignorance of Indian resources, and thus to bring the would be importer into touch with the local manufacturer. The centralisation of information in this way has revealed the fact that numerous isolated demands, each made on a scale too small to tempt local enterprise, often form in the aggregate markets of a size sufficient to justify the organisation of new industries. To detect the existence of these and to assist private enterprise, a special branch of the Board is devoted to the collection and distribution of industrial intelligence. In extension of work of this nature, arrangements are being made for the distribution to colleges of research problems having a direct industrial value, the distribution of the problems being controlled so as to prevent unnecessary overlapping and duplication of work.

"It would take too long to recite all the activities of the Board, but I will give you one example to show the way in which our present war necessity is being turned to account for industrial development of a kind likely to become permanent. The simultaneous export of raw hides and raw tanning materials has often suggested to economists the desirability of developing the tanning industry in India. Hitherto, enterprises in this direction have been attended with but limited success. In order, however, to meet the War Office demand for leather, tanners in India have now been given orders on a scale that has encouraged them to reform their methods, and, by having to work regularly to a rigid standard of high quality, striking improvement in their work has already taken place. In order more fully to turn to account the various natural tan stuffs of India, the Munitions Board, with the generous consent of a group of Central Indian States, has taken over the tannery at Maihar to test new tan stuffs, new combinations of known materials, new processes, and the manufacture of concentrated tan extracts. The experimental work at this tannery is controlled by a Committee composed of members of the tanning industries and expert leather chemists. Those results which, on an experimental scale, appear to be successful, are being tested on a commercial scale at the Allahabad tannery, recently purchased for the purpose. The results, as they become established, will be published for the benefit of tanners in other parts of India, any of whom will be welcome to inspect the processes in actual operation at Allahabad. In co-operation with the Forest Department, the Munitions Board has organised the collection of those materials that are shown by the experimental work to be promising tan stuffs, and has arranged with the Railway Companies for their distribution at uniform and low rates of freight. A certain number of students are already being entertained as apprentices, and it is hoped later on to develop this side of the work by the formation at Allahabad of an institute in which the scientific aspects of tanning will be taught in conjunction with practical work on a commercial scale in the tannery itself.

"It is in directions like this that the work of the Munitions Board will grow until, at the end of the war its machinery should be ready to be utilised with practical effect in carrying out the recommendations of the Industrial Commission.

"Such in brief summary is the work of the Munitions Board, vital as regards our present necessities and pregnant with promise for the future, but I should be ungrateful if I were to pass on without recording my grateful recognition of the services of Sir Thomas Holland. His drive, the unusual width of his scientific knowledge, his business capacity and industry have converted what might otherwise have been a futile experiment into a practical working success. I sincerely trust that his services may long be spared to India, and that, after this war is over, he may be willing to inaugurate, what I believe has always been the dream of his heart, the industrial regeneration of India.

"I have outlined the activities of the Munitions Board. I will pass on to some details of our material output in other directions. The shortage of river craft, which hampered operations in Mesopotamia in the earlier phases of the war, has been overcome and a numerous and well-equipped fleet now plies on the Tigris between Basrah and Baghdad. The War Office has done much in the way of providing its personnel and equipment; but of the actual vessels now in commission, no less than 57 per cent have been supplied by India. Besides requisitioning existing river craft, we have been able to build or re-construct a number of steamers, launches and barges in India, and with improved arrangement for the towing of these vessels, the proportion of losses in transit to Basrah has now greatly diminished.

"It is an open secret that the last few months have witnessed great activity in the way of railway construction in Mesopotamia. The whole of the rails, sleepers, bridging material, engines, rolling-stock, and personnel required for the construction and working of these lines have been provided by India. We have also provided technical personnel and railway material in large quantities for Egypt and East Africa.

"Besides meeting the heavy demands of oversea railways, we have drawn largely upon India's limited resources in the matter of electrical plant and personnel, in order to equip the power stations which have been established at various places in Mesopotamia and provide the generating plant required for the electric lights and fans of general hospitals in the field.

"The Telegraph Department is another branch of our civil administration which has been called upon to meet the demands of the army in Mesopotamia and East Africa. Some 9,000 miles of line, with all the posts, stores, tools, instruments, officers and personnel required for their construction, maintenance, and working have been provided by it since the beginning of the war, and the workshops of the department have, in addition, carried out a great deal of miscellaneous work for the army.

" Our Farms Department has provided the experts, personnel, cattle and plant required for the military dairies which have been established in Mesopotamia, as well as the personnel, implements and seeds required for vegetable cultivation on a considerable scale. These measures, which illustrate how varied and numerous are the requirements of a modern army in the field, should, when fully developed, have a beneficial effect on the health of the troops which has already improved in a marked degree. General Maude reported, only a few days ago, that the general opinion of officers and men is that " they have never seen troops so well fed." The great decrease of scurvy, which is now almost a negligible cause of inefficiency, and the absence of other diseases due to malnutrition, afford eloquent testimony to the success achieved. I hesitate to be dogmatic in such a matter, but the evidence which comes to me from many sources justifies me, I think, in saying that our troops are now well cared for and liberally supplied, and the knowledge of this will, I feel sure, cause the liveliest satisfaction throughout India.

" Coming now to men; last October the Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer furnished me at my request with a memorandum on military and civil co-operation. It was full of valuable suggestions, and His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at once on his arrival took the matter into consideration; and after the question had been carefully examined by Army Headquarters, we determined to establish a Man-Power Board, whose duty it would be to collect and co-ordinate all the facts with regard to the supply of man-power in India. In close touch with this body, similar bodies have been set up in all the provinces with the object of keeping the central body informed as to local conditions.

" These measures, you will be glad to hear, have proved highly successful, for whereas before the war the annual intake of recruits for the Indian Army could be reckoned in thousands, it has now to be reckoned in tens of thousands, and to judge from the number of men now offering themselves for enlistment, there is every prospect of the present rate of recruitment being maintained. The extent to which our recruiting activities have increased will be appreciated when I tell you that, previous to the war, our average enlistment for the army did not exceed 15,000 per annum.

" The briskness of recruiting has enabled us to maintain a steady flow of reinforcements to the various fronts, and facilitated the raising of a number of new units. With the increase of combatant units, there has, of course, been a corresponding expansion of departmental services, such as engineer, medical, transport, ordnance, and supply personnel, to say nothing of organised labour which is now represented by some 20 labour corps in Mesopotamia and another 25 in France. Besides the above, upwards of 60,000 artisans, labourers and specialists of various kinds have been enlisted for service in Mesopotamia and East Africa, and some 20,000 menials and followers have been recruited and despatched overseas.

" To meet the demands created by wastage in the field, the raising of new units and the ever-increasing numbers of soldiers and followers under training in depôts, we have had to provide for a corresponding increase in officers. This has been, and is still, one of our greatest difficulties; but the Indian Army Reserve of Officers which consisted of 40 members at the beginning of the war now numbers over 3,000, and I take this opportunity to express my high appreciation of their services. Besides the demand for more combatants, there has been a great demand for additional medical officers. This has been met, partly by the withdrawal of some 350 officers from civil employment and, I am glad to say, by the utilisation of the services of Indian practitioners, of whom no less than 500 have accepted temporary Commissions in the Indian Medical Service. These satisfactory results have been largely due to the energetic efforts of Surgeon-General Sir Pardey Lukis, assisted by the Inspectors-General of Civil Hospitals serving under Local Governments. The Civil Medical Department has also rendered valuable assistance to the Army in the manufacture and supply of stores, drugs, vaccines, sera, and quinine for oversea expeditions, most of which, but for the assistance so promptly and efficiently rendered, would have been imported from Europe or America.

"But I must not pass from this subject without alluding to the continued loyal and effective services rendered by the Ruling Princes and Chiefs.

"Their Imperial Service Troops, to which must now be added the Imperial Service Camel Transport Corps from Bhawalpur and Khairpur, are serving beside our own in almost every theatre of our operations, while money and contributions in kind are constantly being offered for the acceptance of Government. The Nizam's munificent gift of £100,000 towards the anti-submarine campaign shows how truly His Highness has appreciated the important factors in the struggle and the conditions which have brought the peril by sea to the very gates of India. His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala has presented a flotilla of motor launches for Mesopotamia at a cost of over one lakh of rupees, and His Highness the Maharaja of Kapurthala has given motor ambulance launches for the same destination. Aeroplanes have been purchased for Government by the Feudatory Chiefs of Bihar and Orissa, while contributions towards the cost of the war have been made by the Maharajas of Indore and Bharatpur, the Maharana of Danta, the Raja of Dewas, and many other Princes. It was with very keen pleasure that I was able to announce that, in recognition of the great place which the Indian Princes hold in the Empire, His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner had been selected to be one of the representatives of India at the Imperial War Conference recently held in London. Those of us who know His Highness will agree that no better choice could have been made, and what we have heard from England amply confirms our opinion. Since his return to India, His Highness has again been called upon to assist Government in its deliberations, and as Members of the Central Recruiting Board, both he and His Highness the Maharaja Scindia have been engaged with my officers in solving the difficult problem of obtaining adequate numbers of recruits for all branches of the Indian Army. His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala as representative of the Chiefs of the Punjab, whose people have hitherto led India in the matter of recruitment, has also helped the board with his presence and advice. While sharing with us these Imperial interests, the Princes and Chiefs have also their own State questions and problems, and for the discussion of some of these I have invited Their Highnesses to another Conference at Delhi early in November next. I look forward to that opportunity of thanking them in person for the loyal, consistent, and generous support which they have ungrudgingly given to the Government of India in these times of stress and anxiety.

"I may mention a question of great importance affecting particularly the interests of the maritime States in Kathiawar, which has recently been under the consideration of the Government of India. Hon'ble Members are, no doubt, aware that some years ago, it was found necessary in order to protect the revenues of British India to institute a preventive customs line at Viramgam. Complaints have been received from time to time of the detrimental effect of this line on the trade of the country and of the hardships caused to the travelling public. Negotiations were therefore undertaken with the Baroda Durbar and the Kathiawar States with a view to their adopting measures which would safeguard Imperial interests. These negotiations, I am glad to say, have now been successfully completed, and I hope that it may now be possible to take immediate steps for the abolition of the customs line. I would point out that this question has been outstanding for some twenty years and it is a great satisfaction to me to see it finally settled.

"I will now conclude with a brief survey of Finance and of Foreign politics.

"At the close of the Delhi session I emphasised the fact that it was the duty of all of us to secure the maximum response to the Indian War Loan. I can

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[ The President. ]

now express my satisfaction at the result achieved, the total receipts (including the Post Office section of the Loan and the Cash Certificates, but excluding Treasury Bills received in England) amounting to over £32 million. I hope that a substantial amount will still be added to this figure, as the Post Office section of the Loan does not close till the 15th October, while the Cash Certificates will remain on sale throughout the year. Apart from sums subscribed in British India, very handsome subscriptions have been received from many Ruling Chiefs and States, the largest contributions from Princes or Durbars being, Gwalior Rs. 88 lakhs ; Hyderabad Rs. 75 lakhs (besides Rs. 38 lakhs otherwise subscribed in this State) ; Mysore Rs. 35 lakhs (in addition to Rs. 37 lakhs otherwise subscribed in the State and in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore) ; Bhawalpur Rs. 40 lakhs ; Baroda Rs. 31½ lakhs, and Patiala Rs. 25 lakhs, while nearly Rs. 2 crores in the aggregate have been received from Chiefs and States other than those mentioned above. Not the least satisfactory feature of the Loan has been the response to the Post Office section of it : the amount received through this channel already exceeds £6 million (of which the Post Office Cash Certificates account for £4 million), or a sum larger than has been raised in India by the Government in any one year before the war. I am grateful to the efforts of the various workers who have contributed to this result, and I trust that, so far as the Post Office section is concerned, they will not relax their efforts.

“ As you are aware, the proceeds of the loan will be remitted to the Home Government in London as part of India's £100 million contribution to the war ; but a few words are necessary as to the manner in which the Loan receipts in India have been utilised. As I said in March last, every million that comes from India helps to ease the exchange difficulty, and the assistance which we have obtained has been of great value to us, particularly in view of the large increase in the war expenditure which it has been necessary to meet in India and Mesopotamia on behalf of the Home Government. This will greatly exceed the amount allowed for in the Budget estimates, which were based on the best data then available, and we now expect that the excess will practically swallow up the whole of the amounts so far received on account of the Indian War Loan over and above the £10 million assumed in the estimates for budget purposes. But for these additional receipts, therefore, the difficulties in arranging for the finance of the special expenditure which it has been necessary to meet, as well as for the finance of trade, would have been even greater than those we have now to face.

“ Moreover, the heavy military disbursements which we are making by no means exhaust our share of the financial burden which the war imposes. As indeed has been shown by the various urgent and insistent appeals for financial assistance which we have received, India is the financial pivot of the British Empire in the East. Thus apart from the expenditure in India and Mesopotamia to which I have just referred, she is also undertaking the finance of large quantities of wheat, jute manufactures, hides and numerous other essential commodities which she is supplying to Great Britain, to the Dominions and to the Allied Governments. She is also providing funds on a considerable scale to East Africa and Persia, and has had on various occasions to assist Ceylon, Mauritius and Egypt by remittances of specie and otherwise. Of course, we receive repayment for these services, but as it is not made in India, they necessarily constitute a continuing tax on our present resources here. While we are anxious to continue to meet these obligations to the limit of our capacity, the strain is necessarily a very heavy one ; and in spite of the substantial receipts from the War Loan, it has been necessary to reduce the weekly allotment of Council Bills from 120 lakhs to 90 lakhs with effect from the 1st August. I very greatly regret the difficulties to trade which this further restriction of facilities must necessarily entail. We are, however, doing what we can to alleviate the position by the measures which we have adopted for controlling the import of gold and silver. We have, I am glad to say, been able already to acquire a substantial quantity of gold under the Ordinance. This has helped to strengthen the reserve against our Currency Note issue and, in so far as it is in the form of sovereigns, will also be available for direct issue as currency if necessary. Where the gold is in the form of bullion, arrangements have been made with the Australian Government under which it can, if necessary, be coined into sovereigns for us in Australia. This arrangement is, however, obviously not economical, and I have great pleasure in announcing that the Home Treasury have agreed as a provisional measure, subject to reconsideration after the war, to our undertaking the coinage of sovereigns at Bombay, a branch of the Royal Mint being constituted there for the purpose. These arrangements will be given effect to as soon as possible, but the settlement of details will necessarily take a little time.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

“ Speaking last February of the North-West Frontier, I told you that the only discordant elements for the time being were the Mahsuds and the Mohmands ; that the punishment of the Mahsuds must stand over till we had the leisure to deal conclusively with them, and that the Mohmands were paying for their misdeeds by a close blockade. Since then the Mahsuds by flagrant acts of hostility, by attacks on our posts and convoys, and by incessant raiding, made it impossible for us to hold our hand longer, and an expeditionary force under the command of Major-General Beynon was in consequence recently pushed into the heart of the Mahsud country. The result of these operations was entirely satisfactory and the Mahsuds speedily tendered their complete submissions, accepting in full the terms dictated by my Government, even to the extent of surrendering the Government rifles which had fallen into their hands in the course of their previous engagements with our troops and Militia—a very real proof of their contribution. I trust a settlement so effected may relieve us from anxiety in this quarter for some time to come. In this connection it would be an ungrateful and ungracious omission on my part were I to fail to express our deep obligations to His Majesty the Amir, whose friendly influence served not only to discourage the Mahsuds, but also to steady the whole situation. Indeed, one of the very few happy results of this deplorable world-wide war has been that the ties of friendship between the Afghan Government and ourselves have been drawn closer, and our relations with His Majesty the Amir are marked by greater frankness, greater confidence and greater co-operation than ever before.

“ The Mohmands, too, chastened by the rigour of our blockade, have come to their knees and accepted the terms dictated by my Government.

“ Now although these two elements of discord have been so satisfactorily laid to rest, it would be obviously the height of folly to regard the frontier as no longer a potential source of danger or to relax our vigilance. So long as the disturbing influence of the war continues, so long as enemy agents can find their way into tribal territory, so long as fanatical preachers can play on the feelings of inflammable tribes, the situation must require careful handling and special measures of precaution.

“ It is for this reason that I have been constrained to rule out, during the present session of this Council, a number of questions touching the administration of the North-West Frontier. The connection between the peoples of the settled districts and their wild neighbours across the border is so intimate, the reaction of feeling between them is so acute, that often special measures are necessary to nip incipient trouble in the bud and for the maintenance of peace on our borders. The discussion of such measures in this Council would obviously be out of place at the present time and could only serve to hamper the frontier administration ; apart from the fact that to call for reports from our frontier officers on the various points raised, would be to burden already overworked officers at a time of anxiety with considerable avoidable labour. But I wish to assure you that the administration of the North-West Frontier is carried on under my own supervision, and that I am satisfied that no special measures have been adopted which are not justified by the peculiar circumstances of the province.

“ Well, gentlemen, that concludes my review of the policy and the activities of my Government in some of the many aspects in which our energies have been employed. The recital has necessarily been long, but I feel assured that all the questions dealt with have interest for some of you, while certain of the subjects I have touched upon are of vital importance to every Member of this Council, whether he sits as a Government official or whether he comes here as representing that great unofficial India now stirring into fuller political consciousness.

"Perhaps I need hardly tell you that my task in addressing you today has been easier, and more congenial to me personally, than on any previous occasion. My Government, through no fault of their own, but by the force of circumstances, have till recently occupied a position of much difficulty. Criticisms and misunderstandings have beset us, yet we were not in a position to speak. Now I am able to lift the veil and I feel that Hon'ble Members here, and those whom they represent outside, will realise from my narration that our administration has not been sterile, nor our policy illiberal.

"To day I can point to something accomplished, something done. The announcement now promulgated is a landmark in the constitutional history of India. It is not an edict which fixes and crystallises the Indian polity in a mould of cramped design. It is an announcement resonant with hope. It invites you forward at once along a stage of political progress and points you to a goal ahead.

"At this great epoch in your national evolution I earnestly appeal for co-operation. Let us look upon the bitternesses of the past merely as the growing pains of a great people straining towards fuller development. Believe me, the years of guardianship and tutelage have not been so barren as some would have us think. The pace of India's political growth as measured by the development of her political machinery may have seemed slow, but who would deny that meanwhile her intellectual, economic, and national faculties have gone on from strength to strength?

"For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,

"Seem here no painful inch to gain,

"Far back through creeks and inlets making,

"Comes silent, flooding in, the main."

"So much for the past, but what of the future? Do you for one moment think that in their relations with India the British people and the British Government will be guided otherwise than by those standards of justice and good faith which alone have kept India attached to the Empire and on which you have learnt to rely? From the King-Emperor down to his humblest subject, the British people are proud of the bonds which link them to India, and never more so than at this moment when the sons of India are fighting the battles of the Empire with such courage and devotion.

"Can anybody doubt that the persistence of these ties of affection is a matter of vital importance to the future well-being of India, and that it will be an evil day when those who are working together in this country are no longer inspired by their common share in a great and glorious page of history? But forgive me if I warn you—and this warning has no special application to any community, but includes British and Indian alike, the public leaders, and particularly the press representing every interest, and every class—forgive me if I warn you that sentiment is a delicate plant which withers beneath the rude breath of uncharitableness. It is only by constant and watchful regard for the feelings of others that a sweet and healthy sentiment for the Empire can be brought to blossom and bear fruit on Indian soil. Let it not afterwards be laid at the door of this generation that in these spacious times of Imperial regeneration we allowed the sense of imperial attachment, through any fault of our own, to lose its vitality.

"Of the Indian leaders I have a special request to make. It is that at the present juncture and throughout the difficult stages of transition which lie ahead of us they will believe in our good-will and in our sincerity of purpose. After all, whatever our differing points of view, we all have at heart the same thing—the welfare of India.

“The task we have to approach is no easy one. There are conflicting interest to adjust, grave difficulties to overcome. Who knows them better than yourselves? Heroic remedies endanger the body politic no less than the human organism. I doubt if there is among us here any man who could propound a scheme of reform in which he felt full confidence and satisfaction as possessing exactly what the best interests of India require with due regard to the circumstances of her development and her present position. The questions at issue must be approached in a spirit of reason and in an atmosphere of mutual confidence and co-operation. Let us then sit down together as friends, mindful of old historic associations, harbouring no mistrust, and let us examine these great problems solely from the standpoint of what is judicious, what is practicable, and, above all, what is right.

“It is indeed meet and proper that we should seek to put our house in order, but beyond our gates, stern and insistent, there still stands the great imperative of the war, Hon'ble Members will, I trust, realise from my words today that I have not in the past, nor shall I in the future, minimise the importance of the great question of reform. But we must not allow ourselves to forget for one moment that, far from India's shores, a question far more vital to the future of India is being desperately fought out; that the Empire is still calling upon her sons for their help, and that it is our first and paramount duty to throw our all into the scale. It is perhaps only natural from our remoteness from the scene of conflict that the call should sometimes seem faint and far-away, but I know that it has only to be sounded in clear notes for India's response to be as great and as ungrudging as of yore.”

CINEMATOGRAPH BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—“My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs. I do not propose to deal with the necessity for this legislation at any great length, for the increase of cinematograph exhibitions all over the world is a matter with which the Council is familiar; in fact the cinematograph is in many countries and will be soon in this country almost ubiquitous. Most other civilized countries have found it necessary to revise and supplement the existing law for the control of spectacular entertainments with special reference to this form of exhibition, and the position in India certainly calls for the introduction of similar legislation here.

“There are really two points to be considered. Firstly, the safety of the audience, and, secondly, the prevention of objectionable films being exhibited. As to the second of these questions, it is obviously necessary to guard against the exhibition of indecent and improper films or those which wound religious or racial feeling; indeed the Council probably knows that we have had experience in this country of films which are open to objection from one or other of these aspects. There is further the question of children to be considered. My Lord, it has been estimated that in the United Kingdom the daily average attendance at these cinematograph shows is about 3½ million, and a very large proportion of the spectators are children. For this reason strong representations have been made from time to time to His Majesty's Government to counteract the possible evil influence of these exhibitions upon children, the more so as the recent increase in juvenile crime has been directly attributed to their influence and the London County Council has already taken action to prevent the exhibition of films which may possibly have injurious results to children. The danger of these results in this country is not very apparent at present, but as at some of these

CINEMATOGRAPH BILL.

[Sir William Vincent.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

exhibitions the charge for admission is only one anna it is quite obvious that the risk of children in this country being affected similarly must tend to increase. We have then again to consider the question of the safety of the audiences in the matter of accommodation, ventilation, overcrowding, prevention of fires and the provision of suitable means of exit, the danger of fire being a matter of particular importance, having regard to the inflammable nature of the apparatus that is used in these exhibitions. These are the considerations which have prompted us to follow in respect of these exhibitions, though somewhat tardily, the example of Great Britain where a Cinematograph Act has been in force since 1909. I may say further that the adequacy of our law in India was challenged in Parliament so long ago as 1914. Since that time the Government of India has been in correspondence with the Secretary of State and local Governments on the subject. I think if it had not been for the preoccupation of the war the Bill which I shall shortly move for leave to introduce would have been brought before the Council before.

"It follows from what I have said that the legislation which we now propose has really two main purposes, to insure the safety of the audiences and to prevent the exhibition of objectionable films. I will endeavour to explain the existing law on each of these two points very shortly.

"The existing laws which enable local authorities to enforce protection against overcrowding fire and other dangers in places of assembly are scattered over a number of provincial enactments, the most comprehensive being found in the rule-making powers under the various Police Acts of the presidency towns and Rangoon. There are one or two provincial Police Acts and provincial Municipal Acts which also contain rule-making powers giving the authorities some powers of control. The provisions are however diverse and unsuitable to deal with the numerous travelling exhibitions which go about the country at present; nor do they cover the whole of India. We propose now to enact that no cinematograph exhibition shall be given in future except in licensed buildings and in conformity with the terms of the license, and that no license shall be granted unless the licensing authority is satisfied that adequate precautions are taken for the safety of the persons attending the exhibition. It is also proposed to give power to the Governor-General to make such general rules as may be necessary to give effect to these provisions of the law.

"Turning to the second object of legislation, we propose to take power to constitute authorities at certain centres to examine all films that may be imported into or manufactured in this country and to certify them as fit for exhibition or not, as the case may be. The existing law on the subject, to which I have already referred, was for the most part framed long before the cinematograph was dreamt of and is altogether inadequate to deal with films which for one reason or another may be objectionable. It is true there are certain general provisions of the law—I may refer to sections 292 and 293 of the Penal Code and section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code—which enable the authorities to exercise a certain amount of control in respect of this matter. We have also rules under the Presidency and Rangoon Police Acts but the whole of these provisions are unsatisfactory and ineffective for various reasons. In some cases they are punitive and not preventive and in others the authority which decides whether an exhibition is objectionable is a single local official whose judgment may differ very widely from that of a similar authority in another town. In the United Kingdom the difficulty is countered by public opinion. There is an unofficial Board of Censorship, to which it is said 50 per cent of the managers of cinematographs submit their films. There are also Vigilance Committees and the National Board of Censorship. In India, however, public opinion is not at present, at any rate, strong enough to undertake this duty in many places. We also feel that it is not satisfactory that the control over these matters should be entirely in the hands of local officials, and it is partly because we are averse to purely official control that we have refrained from amending the Dramatic Performances Act of 1876, so as to cover the cinematograph. The Act does give some powers of censorship, but it contains no provisions for the safety of audiences, and if we had attempted to amend it to meet modern requirements it would really have been necessary to recast it altogether.

CINEMATOGRAPH BILL ; POST OFFICE CASH CERTIFICATES BILL.

[Sir William Vincent ; Sir William Meyer.]

"The intention of the present Bill is to constitute central boards of censorship with powers to examine and certify all films and to provide for licenses to exhibit only such films as have been certified as suitable for exhibition by the licensing authority. We propose tentatively to insert in the rules a stipulation that not less than one-half of the Board shall be non-officials. The Boards will be set up at important centres, at first mostly at seaports, but subsequently will be constituted at other places if necessary ; but the object which will be kept in view throughout is a central and independent censorship in a few important places.

"I have now explained the broad lines and objects of the Bill and I need not go into details except to explain the object of one clause, clause 10. We think it is not unlikely that the system which we now propose for the cinematograph may ultimately be found more suitable for other forms of dramatic exhibitions and more suited to modern requirements than the somewhat antiquated Dramatic Performances Act of 1876. We have accordingly inserted this clause which will enable the Government of India to extend all or any of the provisions of the Bill with such modifications and adaptations as may be necessary to other classes of dramatic or spectacular performances. It is not the intention of Government to take any steps to utilise this power until the Act has been in operation for some time and we are in a position to ascertain how it works. The object of the clause is merely to provide a simple means of bringing our legislation on the subject of dramatic performances up to date, if, as we hope, the scheme which we now propose proves to be a success.

"In conclusion I may say that we do not intend to do anything more than introduce this Bill during the present session, and if the motion which I shall now make is accepted, the Bill will be published and circulated to all Local Governments for information, and it will again be examined in this Council, I hope, in the cold weather session in the light of the criticisms that are received. With these remarks, my Lord, I now beg to move for leave to introduce the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

POST OFFICE CASH CERTIFICATES BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to restrict the transfer of Post Office 5-year Cash Certificates and to provide for the payment of certificates standing in the name of deceased persons."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"A few words only are necessary by way of explanation in regard to the Bill I have obtained leave to introduce. As I stated in paragraph 89 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement, in view of the special privileges attached to these certificates, and in order to keep them in the hands of the class for whom they are meant and prevent them from being bought by speculators or large capitalists, Government will not allow transfers of the certificates except under the special permission of a Postmaster General. The condition of non-transferability therefore attached to the certificates from the first and each certificate has printed on it a statement to the effect that it is not transferable except with the permission of the Postmaster General. The position, however, is that in the absence of specific legislation the above condition would not be operative against the general right of transfer of all actionable claims conferred by section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act, and we have thought it desirable, in order that this restriction may not be a mere brutum fulmen, to validate it by legislation. I may mention that the same condition applies in the case of the very similar War Savings Certificates in England where a restriction on transferability is provided for in regulations made by the Treasury under the Statute which authorised the borrowing. I should also perhaps add that from the point of view of the holder this restriction on transfer does not impose any real disability inasmuch as he can obtain repayment of his certificate on demand at any time within its 5 years of currency at the post office at which it was issued. On the other hand, the restriction greatly increases his security as it enables us, in the event of the loss of the certificate, to give him a duplicate without risk to ourselves and without insisting on troublesome formalities. This would not have been the case if the certificates were readily transferable, and it was partly for this reason that we decided, when devising the certificates, not to adopt a bearer type of security which is necessarily not a very suitable form for the small private investor because of the risk of loss by theft, fire, etc.

"I may add that the sanction of the Postmaster General will be given to transfers for which satisfactory reason can be shown. But it will be withheld whenever attempts are made to take advantage of the ignorance of holders, e.g. (I quote an actual case) where a man was offered Rs. 3 for a Rs. 10 certificate.

"The restriction, as will be seen from the bill, merely applies to transfer inter vivos, and does not include transfers by operation of law, for example, in the case of insolvency. We have taken the opportunity to place the procedure for the payment of certificates forming part of the estates of deceased persons on the same footing as that prescribed by the Government Savings Banks Act for the payment of the amounts at the credit of deceased savings bank depositors.

"I now move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1910, and the Indian Paper Currency (Temporary Amendment) Act, 1917, which was passed at the end of last session."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, the Bill, which I have obtained leave to introduce, deals with three different matters—

- (1) The continuance of the Indian Paper Currency Amendment Ordinance, 1917, which was promulgated in April last.
- (2) The extension of the provisions of the existing Paper Currency Act in order to permit of gold being held as part of the Paper Currency Reserve, when held by us or on our behalf in any of the British Dominions, or in transit between a British Dominion and India in either direction.
- (3) The issue of Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ notes.

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Sir William Meyer.]

"As I shall explain shortly, the third measure differs from other paper currency legislation which it has fallen to me to lay before the Council since the war began, inasmuch as we do not propose the provisions relating to Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ notes as a purely temporary or emergency measure, but intend to place them permanently on the Statute Book. Before dealing with this question, I will, however, first refer to the two emergency measures embodied in the bill.

"The legislation with regard to these will as usual have operation only during the continuance of the present war and for a period of six months thereafter. It may be noticed that clause 1 (2) of the Bill only specifies clauses 6 and 7 as having this limited duration. The same limit will, however, also apply to the provisions of clause 2 as the Indian Paper Currency (Temporary Amendment) Act, 1917, which it is there proposed to amend, it itself a temporary measure.

"With regard to the first matter with which the Bill deals I may explain that we are not here taking any fresh power to make investments against our note issue, but are merely regularising the existing situation, as the Ordinance which was issued in April last ceases to be in force six months after its promulgation and it is desired to continue the powers which it confers. The present position with regard to the increased investment powers which we have taken during the war and the causes which have made them necessary are, I think, well known to Honourable Members and were summarised in my speech in this Council on 20th March last introducing the Bill which subsequently became law as Act XI of 1917. As I then said, the kernel of the situation is that the present conditions of Indian trade oblige us to satisfy large Council drawings by the Secretary of State at a time when we are also incurring heavy expenditure on behalf of His Majesty's Government, we are unable to meet these Council drawings from our Treasury balances, while it is impossible, by reason of the necessity for conserving the stock of gold in London for war and exchange purposes, to allow gold to be put into our Currency Reserve there as a substitute for rupees paid out in India, and though we are now getting some gold out here, this is not nearly enough to meet the situation. Section 3 of Act, XI of 1917, which we now propose to amend, prescribes a limit of Rs. 30 crores up to which currency notes may be issued against Treasury Bills held by the Secretary of State as part of the Paper Currency Reserve. These powers are supplementary to our regular powers of investment of Rs. 20 crores, of which 10 crores may be held in sterling securities. The Ordinance which it is now proposed to continue increased these supplementary powers by a further 12 crores, thus bringing the total permissible limit of our Paper Currency investment up to 62 crores, against our present note circulation of over 100 crores.

"To turn to our next proposal, the circumstances in which we desire to extend the power to hold gold as part of our Currency Reserve are briefly as follows. As is generally known, one of our great difficulties for several months past has been the heavy absorption of metallic currency in this country. We have met this to some extent by the purchase and coinage of large quantities of silver, but as those who have followed the recent course of prices will readily realize, the extent to which further purchases can be made at the present time is necessarily limited, and we have therefore been simultaneously endeavouring to strengthen our reserves by additions in the form of gold. By an Ordinance, which we propose to continue in the form of a Bill which I shall shortly move for leave to introduce, we have taken power to acquire gold imported into India, and have already obtained a considerable amount of gold in this manner. As Your Excellency has mentioned to-day the British Treasury has agreed to the opening of a branch of the Royal Mint in India for the coinage of sovereigns, but it will take a little time before arrangements are complete for the minting of sovereigns in India. In the meantime it may be convenient for us that banks or firms shipping to India gold (other than sovereigns) in order to place themselves in funds here to pay for exports from this country, should divert their gold to Australia where it can be coined into sovereigns for us at one of the Australian mints, and then forwarded to India. It will obviously facilitate such transactions and also the acquisition of gold generally if we are in a position to buy it in anticipation of its arrival. The object of the present measure is to enable us to treat gold so acquired as part of our Paper Currency Reserve as soon as it is tendered to the Australian Government on our behalf and before it actually arrives in India we shall then be able to pay for it without delay by the issue of currency notes. But at present we can, under the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1910, only hold in our Paper Currency Reserve gold coin and bullion which is either in India or in England or is in transit from India to England, or vice versa; and though we might in the first instance pay for the gold I have been speaking of from our treasury balances in India, such a course may not be feasible in present conditions especially during the busy season when we shall certainly have to face renewed pressure on our treasury funds. Clauses 6 and 7 of the Bill will therefore empower us to hold gold not only in Australia, but in any British Dominion or Colony, should occasion arise, as part of our Paper Currency Reserve, and will similarly enable us to retain as part of that Reserve any gold which we may ship to Australia or conceivably to any other part of the Empire in order to have it minted before arrangements have been completed for the coinage of such gold in India.

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Sir William Meyer.]

"The remaining clauses of the Bill legalise the issue of one rupee and two and a half rupee notes. I mentioned when I was introducing the Financial Statement last March how much we had been assisted by the expansion of our note circulation since the outbreak of the war. This expansion has since continued at an even more rapid rate. Figures for active circulation during the last month or two are not yet available, but during the last three years our gross circulation has increased by more than 50 per cent, namely, from Rs. 66 crores to over Rs. 100 crores. This expansion is largely due to the fact that the popularisation of our note issue has been part of our deliberate policy during this period, the most important factor, doubtless, having been the increased facilities for encashment which we have provided. Our smallest denomination of note, however, is at present the Rs. 5 note, and though this is of a considerably lower value than the smallest note in vogue in England, namely, that for 10 shillings, we think that the time has now come when we should take a step further forward and issue notes of the denominations of Re. 1 and Rs. 2½.

"I do not suppose that notes of these small denominations will be a prompt panacea for our currency difficulties, as is suggested in some quarters, but they should at any rate afford a real convenience, and it may reasonably be hoped that they will to some extent take the place of the silver rupee, not only in commercial centres and the larger towns, but also eventually outside these limits. Even our five rupee notes are too high a currency medium for the numberless petty transactions which take place daily all over the country; and the new notes will, we hope, supply the cultivator, the petty trader and the mill hand with denominations more suited to their requirements. It may be hoped, also, that the new notes will be in demand not only for payments of small amounts but also for rather larger transactions where our silver rupees are at present employed not merely because they are coin, but also because of the difficulties that must inevitably exist outside the larger centres in changing notes of the higher denominations. At the same time we must, as we have been warned in various quarters, proceed cautiously at the outset lest our new notes should meet with suspicion and not with liking. Accordingly our intention is, as I explained to the Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce the other day, to commence with the Presidency towns, keeping the notes in the first instance at the head office of the Presidency Banks who will be instructed not to force them in any way on payees but to give payees the option of taking payments in this form, and I repeat the hope I then expressed that business firms will co-operate materially with Government in giving the notes a good send-off by demanding them from the Presidency Banks. If the notes are found to be in demand we shall subsequently take similar steps at the larger branches of the Presidency Banks, and finally, if the results at these centres come up to our expectations, we shall extend the supply to district treasuries.

"We propose also to send supplies of the new notes to Mesopotamia where the population has for some time been accustomed to the use of minute paper money and where our existing notes have already obtained a widespread popularity.

"I may further mention that the bill expressly provides that the one-rupee and 2½-rupee notes shall be universal notes, that is to say, they will be legal tender throughout British India and will be encashable at any currency office.

"We shall also extend to them the extra legal facilities for encashment at district treasuries which are at present enjoyed by our existing notes. We have also under consideration, with a view to assisting the popularity of the new notes, the possibility of allowing their encashment, up to a limited amount by any individual, at post offices within the area of their original issue. The production of the notes has been put in hand, and it is at present expected that the first consignments will be ready for issue in India by about the beginning of November. I trust that, when they are issued, they will not merely be successful in themselves, but will also serve a useful educative purpose with regard to the conveniences of a note issue generally, and that they will consequently conduce to a further expansion of our note circulation as a whole.

"I now move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"My Lord, it is with considerable diffidence that I venture to make a few remarks at this stage, in connection with the Bill. I am perfectly well aware that it is a subject outside the range of my ordinary activities and, if I make any remarks, it is more with the object of getting new light thrown upon the matter, than in any spirit of hostile criticism. The outstanding feature of the situation seems to be this :—just before the outbreak of the war the total currency circulation is computed to have been between 240 and 250 crores of rupees and after the war we have increased it by 40 crores in the shape of notes and 36 crores in the shape of silver; that is 76 crores or about 33 per cent. In ordinary circumstances this would be an extreme step and would be bound to act in a very prejudicial manner upon prices and upon the trade of the country. But we are dealing with a situation which is critical and I hope therefore that it will be shown to us that it would have been impossible to meet the demands of the Government in the matter of purchases in India in any other manner than by inflating the currency which is likely to have a prejudicial effect upon the future. It is ordinarily understood that the total currency depends largely upon the volume and velocity of the trade. The foreign trade of the country has fallen considerably during the last few years. In 1912-13 it was 407 crores, in 1913-14 it was 431 crores, whereas after the war, in 1914-15 it fell to 318 crores and in 1915-16 to 328 crores. I am not aware of the figures for 1916-17, but there could not have been any improvement in ordinary circumstances, therefore, having regard to the total diminution in the foreign trade of the country, the existing currency was amply sufficient to meet the requirements of the country and any further increase would act prejudicially upon the trade prospects of the country, and even, taking a possible extension in the internal current trade of the country and in silver hoarding the increase was unnecessarily large; the absorption in 1915-16 was only 10 crores in notes and 9 crores in silver, that is, 19 crores, whereas we have increased it by 40 crores in notes and 36 crores in silver. The ordinary requirements of trade therefore could not have been the cause of this enormous increase in the currency of the country. The only way that I can look upon it is, I may be wrong—of course, but it is this, inasmuch as the British Government has not been able to send gold as would ordinarily have been done, the Government of India have had

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Rao Bahadur E. N. Sarnap.]

to find funds for large purchases; a mechanism had to be contrived; new money found by the addition of 40 crores of notes to the currency. If 40 crores was added, the recommendation of the Royal Commission had to be given the go-by; and the Government have increased their money by issuing notes in this country, resources against British treasury bills. In so far as India has assisted the government at home in any substantial degree we must put up with the inconvenience; as the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has told us that is the price which India has to pay. But the question that I would respectfully ask is this:—Having regard to the enormous expenditure that has been incurred by Great Britain in this war, does the investment of 30 to 40 crores in treasury bills make such a considerable difference to her, whereas it does make a considerable difference to India? In the case of England it would be a mere flea bite, but in the case of India it has resulted in the extension of the currency by 33 per cent. If this policy is indulged in we should like to know where we are and where we are likely to be after the war. That is one of the questions on which I have not heard a satisfactory answer and I hope the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer will be able to guide me correctly. Then there is another point. The Royal Commission's Report shows that if in the slack season the treasury contains 12 crores and in the busy season 18 crores no fresh coinage need be undertaken; I have not been able to find that the treasury balances at any particular periods fell short of the required minimum; but excluding the consideration of these large purchases on behalf of Government, for ordinary purposes there seems to be no case for any large coinage of silver.

"There is one other point, my Lord, to which I desire to invite the attention of the Council. The Council which was in session in February and March gave the Government power up to thirty crores of rupees to be invested in Treasury Bills. We should now like to know naturally what was the emergency between March when the session came to a close and the 18th of April, which compelled the Government to take further powers to the extent of 12 crores of rupees, having regard chiefly to the fact that the war loan was proving a success and large sums of money were coming in to the Treasury. The matter might have rested there but for the fact that the Government now propose to circulate one rupee and 2½ rupee notes in the country at an early date. I for one, as a matter of currency reform, might have welcomed this measure in peace time, because if the theories that are propounded by the currency reformers are correct, the expansion of the token currency should be of great use especially in the absence of any real banking system in this country and of the practice of issuing cheques to any appreciable extent. But there is considerable danger in taking in hand the proposal for the circulation of small notes during the time of war, because it would tempt Government further and it might also weaken the position of the Government in the estimation of the general public. The public might lose their confidence,—I hope they won't and there is no necessity for it,—but still this rapid expansion of the note circulation and giving rupee notes of small value to the public might induce them to believe that there is something wrong. I think, therefore, that it is not absolutely necessary to undertake this experiment during the time of the war.

"One difficulty which I foresee, is that we have been taken further away from the golden currency which was recommended to the Government by previous Commissions. The solution of that question was left in abeyance during the pendency of the war and has not been ultimately decided upon by the Government one way or the other, but I think that if the Government should circulate rupee notes, they would be practically adopting the recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission with regard to gold currency. But I am very glad that we are in a position to congratulate the Government upon their success in inducing the British Treasury to allow us to mint gold coins in this country. I hope that will take us a long way towards solving some of our problems until the currency position of India is put on a firm gold currency and gold standard basis."

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Sir William Meyer; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, I have no doubt that the Government have fully considered the advisability of introducing notes of the value of one rupee and of 2½ rupees before introducing this Bill, and in that view it would probably not be proper for us, non-experts as we are in these matters, to offer much criticism on the proposal at this stage. But I feel it my duty, my Lord, to emphasise the need for caution to which the Hon'ble the Finance Member has referred. If we were passing through ordinary times, the experiment of introducing notes of the value of one rupee and 2½ rupees might have been tried like any other experiment, but we are passing through critical times, and I do not wish that there should arise at this juncture a feeling in the minds of the general public regarding these small notes which would be the reverse of what the Government would like. The ignorance of the great mass of the people, we know, is very great. Notes of the value of five rupees have been in use, and I venture to submit that it would have been much better if the Government had met the requirements of the situation by multiplying the number of 5 and 10 rupee notes rather than introduced this experiment at the present time. But as the Government have decided upon that course, all I would say is that the experiment should be carried on with the utmost caution in order that the general public should be educated up to regarding these notes as legal and useful tenders and that there should not be any apprehension in their minds regarding the value of these notes. With these remarks I support the motion before the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"I am in emphatic agreement with my Hon'ble friend the Pandit in regard to his suggested caution in introducing the new notes. I think I made it quite clear in my speech that we should at the outset proceed with caution and confine the issue of the notes in the first instance to the head offices of the Presidency Banks. If they prove successful there, we shall gradually extend the supply to important branches of the Presidency Banks, and finally to the District Treasuries."

"The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, I think I may say, made some rambling remarks. The Hon'ble Member is a great student of statistics, but often brings them out in a form that surprises one. He told us for instance just now that the note circulation had gone up to 240 crores before the war."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I said the note and rupee circulation."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Note and rupee circulation. That, as my Hon'ble friend is aware, is a very different thing. I accept his explanation and need only add that the rupee circulation can only be very vaguely estimated. The note circulation was 66 crores before the war and is now about a hundred crores. But the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma shivered at the idea of inflation. I may remind him that one of the accepted doctrines of economists is that artificial inflation of paper currency only exists when the note circulation is not fully covered. Now we have covered every rupee of our note circulation—about 40 crores in metal and about 60 crores (I use round numbers for the sake of simplicity) in securities. The latter include short term Treasury Bills of the Home Government which we can realise practically at any time that we want to. As I explained to this Council on previous occasions, we regard this as the next best thing to gold. We cannot get gold for reasons which I have already explained more than once and I won't detain the Council by explaining them again."

"Then the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma says is the investment of all this money in Home Treasury Bills such a great thing to the wealthy British Government; might they not give it back to India? He has entirely misapprehended the situation. It is because we cannot in the face of the present war ask the British Government to send us out many crores in gold or ear-mark many crores in gold in London that we make this arrangement as regards Treasury Bills."

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL;
INDIAN TRANSFER OF SHIPS RESTRICTION BILL.

[Sir William Meyer; Sir George Barnes.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

“ Finally he asked why in April last, not so very long after the Council had dissolved, we issued an Ordinance. He would have liked us to have been prophetic and brought the necessity for this legislation before the Council. I will only say that we have to live very much from hand to mouth in these matters. If I had anticipated before the Council dissolved that we should have to invest more money I should certainly have brought in a Bill on the subject. It was an unexpected drain of rupees, and at the same time large Council drawings by the Secretary of State, which obliged us to take this course by Ordinance. The Hon'ble Member asks why could we not have taken the money from the War Loan which has accumulated in the Banks. For the very simple reason that we have promised, and I think the commercial members approve the promise, that we would not embarrass trade any more than we could help. We knew we were temporarily embarrassing trade in the interests of patriotism by this War Loan. We said we won't embarrass it further by suddenly drawing off the loan and that is why—much to the disquietude of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma but I believe with the general approval of the rest of the members of this Council—we left the money in the Presidency Banks.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN TRANSFER OF SHIPS RESTRICTION BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes :—“ My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to restrict the transfer of ships registered in British India. This Bill is another of the series of war measures which have been brought before this Council. Like the other war measures, its object is to bring the legislation of this country into harmony with that of the United Kingdom. In 1915 an Act was passed in the United Kingdom to restrict the transfer of British ships to persons not qualified to own British ships. The persons so qualified under the British Merchant Shipping Act of 1894 are, speaking generally, British subjects and Companies registered within the British Empire. The United Kingdom Act of 1915 applied to British ships registered in the United Kingdom and at foreign ports of registry and in any British Possession other than those mentioned in the Schedule to the Act. The exceptions named in the Schedule are British India, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and Newfoundland. Thus the British Act of 1915 does not apply to British ships registered in India. In August 1916 the British Act of 1915 was extended so as to apply to mortgages of ships as well as to actual transfers of ships, and among the persons not qualified to own a British ship or to hold a mortgage on a British ship was included a company which was in effect foreign controlled although registered within the British Empire. Now, my Lord, the object of this Bill is to extend the British Acts of 1915 and 1916 to British ships registered in India. The substantive part of the Bill is contained in the 3rd clause which provides that no interest in a British ship registered in British India under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, shall without the previous consent in writing of the Governor-General in Council be transferred to a foreign-controlled company or to persons other than persons qualified to be owners of British ships.

“ The only other clauses to which I need draw any attention are, I think, clause 4 which is a penalty clause, clause 5, which gives power to require particulars in certain circumstances, and clause 6 which deals with forfeiture. The second clause is entirely occupied with definition, a lengthy definition of the words

INDIAN TRANSFER OF SHIPS RESTRICTION BILL.

[Sir George Barnes ; Pandit M. M. Malaviya ; Mr. G. R. Lowndes.]

'British subject' and 'foreign-controlled company,' and the first clause deals with the duration of the proposed Act and provides that it shall remain in force during the continuance of the present war and for three years thereafter.

"I beg to move for leave to introduce the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes :—"I beg, my Lord, to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"My Lord, I would like to say a word about the definitions which have been put in this Bill so that when the Bill goes before the Select Committee the matter may be borne in mind. I am sure the Hon'ble Member will agree that a definition in a Bill by a reference to other enactments creates a difficulty in understanding it. For instance in section 2 'British subject' is defined as a person who is a natural born British subject within the meaning of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914. All the members of this Council have not an opportunity of looking up Acts 4 and 5 Geo. V to compare what the provision there is, and they cannot therefore comprehend what the definition means. So also in the same section in clause (d), "persons qualified to be owners of British ships" has the same meaning as in section 1 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894. There again 57 and 58 Vict. are not so easy to refer to. So also in the third section.

"I would request the Hon'ble Member and the Secretary to the Legislative Department to note this fact and consider whether it would not always be better considering that we are enacting a statute here, to reproduce the language of those sections in our Bills so that anybody who looks at the Bill may be able to understand what it means. I do not know, my Lord, I have not had time to look up these enactments, I do not know whether 'British subject' as defined here will include His Majesty's Indian subjects or not. I should like to be instructed on that point. I merely ask the question in order to have the matter cleared up."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. R. Lowndes :—"My Lord, the Hon'ble Pandit has raised a point as to what is called legislation by reference to another Act, which is often inconvenient but sometimes is almost a necessity. To take the first of the cases he has referred to, the definition of 'British subject' in the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, it is at least possible that very shortly after this Bill of ours is passed, the British Act, which is an Act for the whole Empire, will be amended. In fact we have considerable hopes that it may be. If so, it will be very convenient to be able to follow this amended definition rather than to have immediately to amend the definition in our Act in order to bring it into line with the amended British Act. As a matter of fact this is probably one of the most convenient instances of legislation by reference because supposing we expand the definition section in the Bill, which is already very long, by putting in the definition from that Act, I am afraid even the Hon'ble Pandit would be tired of it before he got to the end."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"May I know if 'British subject' as defined there includes an Indian subject of His Majesty?"

Hon'ble Mr. Lowndes :—"Certainly."

The motion was put and agreed to.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Sir William Vincent.]

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain.

"My Lord, the Bill which I now move for leave to introduce relates to a subject which is of very general interest, namely, the question of empowering our Civil Courts to afford relief in cases of unconscionable bargains between money-lenders and their debtors. The subject has been frequently before the Government of India and I think it will be useful if I explain very shortly some of the legislation in regard to it. Prior to 1855 under the Regulating Act, an English Statute of George III and various regulations of the Provincial Codes of Madras, Bombay and Bengal the maximum rate of interest leviable in this country on loans was 12 per cent. There were also similar enactments limiting the rate of interest on loans in Great Britain. In 1855 (a year after the Usury Laws were repealed in the United Kingdom) the Usury Laws Repeal Act was passed in this country and all statutory restrictions on the rate of interest on loans were thereby repealed.

"Further, Section 2 of that Act definitely provided that in suits in which interest was recoverable, it should be decreed at the rate agreed to between the parties, or in the absence of any such agreement at a reasonable rate. This enactment is in force up to the present day and, as far as I know, it is the only provision in the general law relating to interest on loans. My Lord, even if it is admitted that the usury laws were ineffective, it has also often been doubted whether their repeal effected any improvement in the situation. It has indeed been said by a writer of some repute that the 45 years between the repeal of the usury laws in England and the passing of the Moneylenders Act of 1900 may well be regarded as the golden age for unscrupulous moneylenders in the United Kingdom. And the same author tells us that in most of the countries, including England, where the usury laws were repealed, it has since been found necessary to afford borrowers some protection against unscrupulous moneylenders. It is not surprising therefore to find that this question was again agitated in India and in 1891 Lord Lansdowne's Government thought it necessary to direct the Commission appointed to enquire into the question of the Dekkan Agriculturists Relief Act, also to make special enquiry as to the expediency of amending the general law relating to contracts between creditors and debtors. That Commission recommended—

- (1) an amendment of the Contract Act so as to make a contract voidable when the creditor had taken undue advantage of the simplicity or necessity of his debtor;
- (2) an amendment of the Evidence Act throwing, when the parties were not on an equality, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction on the person who had an advantage; and
- (3) an amendment of the Usury Laws Repeal Act, so as to give the courts power to re-open unconscionable contracts.

Government did not accept these recommendations in their entirety, but after prolonged enquiries, in 1899, they introduced and passed the Indian Contract Amendment Act. This provided that a contract, consent to which was obtained by undue influence, was voidable at the option of the person whose consent was so obtained. The new law also defined what undue influence was, providing that when the relations between two parties to a contract were such that one party was in a position to dominate the will of the other and used that advantage unfairly, then the contract might be said to be induced by undue influence. My Lord, this legislation

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Sir William Vincent.]

relieved the situation somewhat, but it was not really effective, and practical experience has shown that it does not afford sufficient protection to debtors. In 1906, this was brought to the notice of Government by Mr. Justice Mitter of the Calcutta High Court in a minute, in which four Judges concurred, on this question of usury. He pointed out that the experience of 50 years had shown that even in Great Britain interference by law was needed to give relief against exorbitant interest and he referred to the report of the Committee appointed in the United Kingdom to investigate the subject and also the Money-lenders Act of 1900 in proof of this assertion. He described the mischief caused in India by the repeal of the usury laws, particularly in suits between money-lenders and ryots and he showed, if I may say so, conclusively, that the amendment of the Contract Act to which I have just referred was absolutely inadequate to meet the requirements of the situation. He urged, therefore, that civil courts should be empowered to grant relief in cases of extortionate demands by reducing the interest to a reasonable rate and by re-opening and adjusting accounts on the basis of these rates. The Government of India, however, even then decided that the time was not ripe for legislation. In 1913 the question was again agitated in the United Provinces Legislative Council by the Hon'ble Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain who described in vivid language the mischief which resulted to the body politic from it. He quoted numerous flagrant instances in which extortionate interest had been decreed and represented that the result of the law had been the ruin of hundreds of families in the United Provinces within the last two or three years. About the same time the Government of India were moved by the Administrator General of Bengal to reconsider the question of legislating on this subject, and Local Governments and various authorities were thereupon consulted. I think I may say that the result of these enquiries revealed a very serious state of affairs. I will only quote one or two opinions received by the Government of India. The Madras Government said that there was an overwhelming preponderance of opinion in favour of the view that our courts are at present compelled to give effect to unconscionable transactions and to enforce the payment of inequitable and extortionate demands. The Government of Bengal and the Calcutta High Court said that usury was a crying evil which called for immediate remedy, and I think I may say that these remarks really represent the considered opinions of most of the Governments consulted. Such a state of affairs is, in the opinion of the Government of India, not only morally indefensible but a source of grave political danger in that it seriously shakes public confidence in our administration and in our courts of justice. In this connection I may say that I read recently a review of a work by a German who was commenting on our administration. He stated that the failure of Government to deal with this question was one of the main blots on our administration and that it could not fail to have very serious political effects. My Lord, fas est et ab hoste doceri and I think there is great force in this argument. Theoretical arguments based on the sanctity of solemn contracts appeal very little in such cases, to a debtor. He argues that the judges have powers to do justice or if they have not that Government should vest them with the necessary powers.

"My Lord, if the opinions which I have cited have not convinced the Council, I should like to quote a few specific instances of the kind of decrees our courts are constantly forced to give. I will take some from the speech of the Hon'ble Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain to which I referred. Here is one, a suit of 1906. I will not cite the name of the creditor, though he deserves little sympathy, but the principal advanced was Rs. 800, and for this advance the creditor obtained a decree for no less than Rs. 2,06,365 or very nearly 258 times the principal advanced. Here is another case decided in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur in 1910. The principal advanced was Rs. 1,000 and the amount claimed and decreed was Rs. 17,000. Here is another one from Budaon in which Rs. 2,500 was advanced and the creditor obtained a decree for Rs. 39,000.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Sir William Vincent.]

[5TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"In a letter which is on record, Sir Amir Ali, now on the Judicial Committee, refers to a case from my own province, Bihar and Orissa, in which a claim for Rs. 32,000 was successfully made on the basis of a loan of Rs. 4,000 made eight years before the suit. I have recently examined some cases from the High Court of Bihar and Orissa which also show the ineffectiveness of our present law. Here is one. In 1900 a bond was given for Rs. 1,400. In 1912 a decree was obtained for Rs. 35,421 after the decree holder had been good enough to give up an additional claim to Rs. 11,000. Here is another case. A suit in which Rs. 1,375 was borrowed and Rs. 1,700 was repaid within three years of the loan. Nevertheless the plaintiff was able to get in the Subordinate Judge's Court a decree for Rs. 15,000 on the basis of his bond. I am glad to say this last suit was dismissed in the High Court on a technical plea of misjoinder of parties.

"My Lord, the evil is not confined to the agricultural classes. The enquiries made reveal that it is equally prevalent amongst others, including land owners of all classes and the domiciled Anglo-Indian community in particular.

"Similarly many young European officers in the service suffer severely from such demands, and the case quoted by the Administrator General is a very good illustration. The facts in that case were that on the 30th January 1907, Rs. 1,500 was advanced by a moneylender of Lahore to a Subaltern. The debtor repaid Rs. 1,460 of this sum in the same year, but on the other hand it is fair to say that the creditor paid certain insurance premia for some years on account of the debtor amounting to Rs. 812. The total amount advanced was thus Rs. 2,312. In return for this the creditor recovered altogether Rs. 4,700, and nevertheless in 1913 put in a claim to the Administrator General against the estate of the deceased officer for Rs. 24,177 in addition. I may remark that his claim for interest during one month of 1912 amounted to Rs. 1,419 or very nearly the full amount of the principal originally advanced.

"My Lord, I could multiply ad infinitum these instances of unconscionable bargains, to which the Courts are compelled to give effect under the present law, but I think that the cases I have cited are quite sufficient to show that some remedy is necessary if our Courts are not to be made instruments of oppression.

"My Lord, I have been told by some persons that even if the Courts may give wrong decisions in a few cases, they have at present all the powers that they need, and that all that is required is the effective administration of the law. This is disproved by practical experience and the fact is that unless the unfortunate debtor can prove definitely "undue influence," i.e., that his case comes under section 16 of the Contract Act, or that interest is claimed by way of penalty, under section 74, he has no remedy; or at least this is the interpretation placed upon the law by many of our best Judges and I think the tendency in this direction has been the more marked since the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Sundar Koer vs. Rai Sham Krishen, I. L. R. 34, Cal. 150. My Lord, in this connection I may say that I took the opportunity of consulting my Hon'ble colleague, Sir Sankaran Nair, on this question. He had, as the Council knows, a very distinguished career both at the bar and on the bench of the Madras High Court and speaks with great authority. He expressed his opinion (and I have his permission to quote it) that the law at present is inadequate to meet the requirements of the case, and that the legislation which is now proposed is urgently needed in the interests of justice.

"If anything further is needed to controvert this suggestion that the law as at present is sufficient, I venture to say that the cases which I have cited before the Council themselves are a sufficient answer. If the Courts find it incumbent on the evidence to give decrees of this kind, can it be argued with any show of reason that the law as it stands meets the requirements of the situation?

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Sir William Vincent.]

"Proceeding to the question of remedies for this state of affairs I may say three methods of dealing with this question have been suggested by various authorities:—

- (1) an amendment of the law limiting the rates of interest;
- (2) a law embodying the principles of (what is known as) 'damdupat'; and
- (3) a Bill giving the Courts in certain instances equitable powers to reopen contracts between moneylenders and their debtors and to ascertain what return was equitably repayable for loans made.

"For reasons into the details of which it is unnecessary to enter at any rate at present, the Government of India have decided that the first two remedies proposed were neither suitable nor likely to be in any way effective, and that the best chance of success lay in giving the Courts the equitable powers described in the third proposal. In taking this course the Government have followed the principle adopted in the United Kingdom in the Moneylenders Act of 1900. I do not think that it is necessary or expedient that I should waste time in discussing the details of the Bill at present. It will be circulated for opinion and ample opportunities will be given to all those who are interested in the subject to examine and criticise it. The details will also subsequently be carefully considered in Select Committee: all that I think it is necessary to do at present is to explain the general principle, which is a very simple one, namely that in proceedings for the recovery of a loan, or for the enforcement of an agreement or security, the Court, if satisfied by evidence that the return claimed is excessive, and that the transaction is substantially unfair, may reopen the contract and award the plaintiff a decree for that sum only which is equitably due, having regard to the circumstances of the case. I want the Council to note the fact that action under the law is not obligatory but discretionary, and that the Court can only take such action when it is satisfied that the transaction is substantially unfair, and that the return is excessive.

"I draw special attention to these provisions of the law, as they illustrate a point of great importance, namely, that it is not in any way the intention of Government to interfere with the ordinary business of the honest moneylender. The Government fully recognise that moneylenders are not only necessary but very useful members of society. In fact it may be said that without them the whole business of the country would be paralyzed. My Lord, moneylenders who are satisfied with a fair and reasonable return for their money have nothing to fear from this Bill and will not come within the purview of its provisions at all. It is only the extortioner who takes advantage of the needs of the borrower to force him to an unequitable bargain who will be penalised, and I do not think any one in this Council will maintain that such persons are entitled to any sympathy.

"It may be argued that the Bill places too much power in the hands of our Courts and that it will be impossible for them to administer it effectively and justly. But I think that the answer to this objection is contained in the letter of the Calcutta High Court, which I take leave to quote. Their Lordships say:—

"To use the language of the Parliamentary Select Committee the Courts should have power to go behind any contract with a moneylender, to enquire into all the circumstances of the original loan and of the subsequent transactions, and to make such order as may be considered reasonable. This will give the Courts full discretion to deal with each case according to its circumstance. It has been observed that this will lead to a variety of judgments. This is a difficulty which arises even where the Courts have no discretion. There must be some inconvenience attending every proposal, and the advantage of giving the Courts a free hand to deal with each case on the lines of natural justice greatly outweighs, in the opinion of the Chief Justice and the Judges, any objection to such a course.

[Sir William Vincent ; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

"Speaking for myself, I may say also that those who take the view indicated above, in my opinion underestimate the capacity of our civil Courts the great majority of which are presided over by Indians of high educational and legal attainments and proved ability and integrity. I do not however for a moment seek to minimise the difficulties of finding a satisfactory solution of the problem, or to make out that the Bill which I propose to introduce will prove a panacea for the evil it is designed to remedy. But I do say, however, that it will at least in many cases prevent our Courts from being made instruments of oppression, and I believe that in the great majority of cases it will enable them to do justice between man and man.

"My Lord, there are many difficult questions in connection with this Bill which will be discussed at a later stage but I do not wish to detain the Council any longer to-day and in conclusion wish only to say that I honestly believe that this Bill is one which will prove of real benefit in the administration of justice and that it will contribute to the prevention of oppression. I believe myself that it will remove a very serious blot on our present administration and I earnestly hope that it will commend itself to this Council.

"My Lord, I now move for leave to introduce the Bill which is entitled "A Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain."

"It is not intended to do anything more than circulate the Bill at present, and when we receive the opinions of the various authorities consulted, I think that the Council will be in a better position to criticise it than at this stage."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"My Lord, I welcome the Bill which has just been introduced in this Council as a piece of beneficent social legislation. Coming as I do from the United Provinces which has been frequently mentioned in the speech of the Hon'ble Mover, I can also add from my own personal experience a few examples just to show that this measure is urgently needed. My Lord, not many years ago in the Allahabad High Court I had a case in which it was found that as a matter of fact a sum of only Rs. 106 had been advanced while the bond mentioned that a sum of Rs. 916 had been advanced, and within a period of about twenty years the interest had swelled up to Rs. 2,93,000. It is difficult for me to calculate the rate of interest; but the lower court had granted the creditor a decree for only Rs. 1,100, and I was glad that the High Court set aside that decree altogether. Immediately after that there arose a case in which an Anglo-Indian member of the subordinate staff of the United Provinces Secretariat was the defendant. In that case a sum of about Rs. 1,500 or Rs. 2,000, I am not sure which, had been advanced by the creditor, who brought a suit within seven years for a sum of Rs. 35,000; and the poor man had to compromise for a sum of about Rs. 5,000.

"My Lord, I could quote a number of instances like these from my own province but I refrain from doing so as a number of them were carefully collected by my late friend Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain and they have been referred to by the Hon'ble the Home Member in the course of his speech. My Lord, as regards the question of remedy, there are various remedies which have been suggested from time to time, I do not think that it is desirable, either legally or economically, to adopt an artificial rate of interest as it may not meet the ends of justice in every possible case. I think the best example that this Council can follow is the English Moneylenders Act. I don't think there is any, the least, danger in investing courts with the discretionary powers proposed to be given. If the lower courts will go wrong there are the courts of appeal to set them right. There is only one thing more which I wish to say and, that is, that I feel that the Bill as drafted by the Hon'ble the Home Member does not go as far as I should like it to go. In fact, I should like to go the whole length of the English Moneylenders Act, I should like all moneylenders to be registered as in England, and I should also like a provision in the Bill that if an unregistered moneylender brings in a suit, the suit shall be dismissed ; this is a crying evil and in dealing with this matter I am glad to be able to bear out every single remark that has fallen from the Hon'ble the Home Member. I am an enthusiastic advocate of the Bill and I do not think that the doctrine of freedom of contract can be left to run its course uninterruptedly in a matter like this ; I think the stronger the measure is the better it will be for the protection of the masses and for the land owning classes. With these few words, my Lord, I strongly support the motion."

USURIOUS LOANS BILL ; PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; His Excellency the President ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.]

His Excellency the President :—" I understand that a good many Hon'ble Members would like to address the Council on this subject, and I therefore propose to adjourn the Council, but before the adjournment, the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair has to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to establish and incorporate a University at Patna. Unless the Hon'ble Member presents that Report today the Bill will not be able to be discussed on the 12th September. I will call upon the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair."

The Council adjourned to 11 A. M. on Wednesday, -12th September, 1917.

APPENDIX B.

No. 399-R. & A., dated Delhi, the 31st January 1916.

From—W. M. HAILLY, Esq., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., Chief Commissioner, Delhi,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 2-C.-155-16 (Land Revenue), dated the 4th January 1916, dealing with the co-operative movement.

2. The Delhi Province as now created contains no co-operative society. During the late settlement of the district efforts were made by the staff to push the movement, and the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Punjab, also made attempts to interest the agricultural community in the matter. These efforts met with no success, and the Deputy Commissioner has recently reported that conditions in the reduced area of the district are such that it seems unlikely that the need for starting societies will be recognized by the people concerned.

3. In the circumstances I do not feel that I can usefully reply to the question raised in the letter under reply.

No. 1399-R., dated Quetta, the 19th April 1916

From—The HON'BLE LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR JOHN RAMSAY, K C.I.E., C.S.I., Agent to the Governor General and Chief Commissioner in Baluchistan,

To—The HON'BLE MR. L. J. KERSHAW, C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture, Simla.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Revenue and Agriculture Department Resolution No. 2-C.-155-16, dated the 4th January 1916, in which the views of the Local Governments and Administrations are invited on those portions of the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India which deal practically with the Audit and supervision of Primary Societies and with Central and Provincial Banks.

2. In reply I have to say that no Co-operative Societies exist in Baluchistan, and I am therefore not in a position to offer any remarks.

No. <sup>236</sup>
XIII-14-2, dated Nagpur, the 27th June 1916

From—The HON'BLE MR. J. HULLAH, I.C.S., Third Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture, Simla.

With reference to the Government of India's Resolution No. 2-C.-155-16, dated the 4th January 1916, regarding the Report of the Committee on Co-operation, I am directed to forward, for the information of the Government of India, a copy of a letter No. C.-116, dated the 25th April 1916, from Mr. H. R. Crosthwaite, Registrar of Co-operative Societies in these Provinces, together with a copy of the Note accompanying it, which deals with those recommendations of the Committee which have been referred for the opinion of Local Governments. I am to say that the Chief Commissioner agrees generally with Mr. Crosthwaite's remarks, and this letter will therefore be confined to a few supplementary observations which Sir Benjamin Robertson desires to make.

2. In recommendation No. 8 the Committee remark that Government backing to a central cattle reinsurance society is unobjectionable. Mr. Crosthwaite's remarks are mainly a criticism of Recommendation No. 6, which has not been referred for opinion, and which questions the necessity of waiting for actuarial data before introducing cattle insurance. To give financial backing to any scheme thus started would, in the Chief Commissioner's opinion, be impolitic and unjustifiable, and would almost certainly result in heavy pecuniary loss to Government. It is understood that the Agricultural Conference which met at Pusa this year also held this opinion. But in any case the people of the Central Provinces do not as yet sufficiently realize the importance of veterinary science to render a system of cattle insurance feasible, and the Chief Commissioner considers that a distinct advance in this respect must precede the initiation of any such measure.

3. Recommendation No. 18 deals with the question of special encouragement to societies among the poorer urban classes. The Chief Commissioner, while agreeing that poor industrial communities may well be assisted by Government in order to rehabilitate their industries, cannot agree that their members should be recognized as co-operative societies so long as they are thus charitably assisted. Philanthropy may well be a motive for the efforts of co-operative organizers, but actual co-operation must be developed on a sound basis of business and not fed by charity. Until therefore, the members of a community, helped at the outset by charity, can show that they are capable of standing without such assistance, they should not be formed into co-operative societies under the Act or be financed by Central Banks.

4. Recommendation No. 51 has reference to the acceptance of deposits by primary societies. Mr. Crosthwaite does not deal specifically with the various suggestions contained in this recommendation, but he points out the difficulties of watching the action of primary societies in the acceptance of deposits from non-members. He shows that the present practice in the Central Provinces is to disallow absolutely the acceptance of such deposits, and the Chief Commissioner would recommend that no primary society be permitted to accept deposits from non-members until the Registrar considers it fit to do so, and then only subject to such rules and restrictions as the Registrar may lay down.

5. In recommendation No. 88 it is suggested that primary societies should be allowed to use their reserve funds in their own business. I am to commend to the particular consideration of the Government of India Mr. Crosthwaite's remarks in opposition to this suggestion. The Chief Commissioner would strongly uphold the Central Provinces practice under which the reserve funds are placed with the Provincial Bank, thus increasing the fluid resources of the co-operative movement as a whole. With reference to the Committee's remarks in the concluding part of paragraph 83 of their Report, it seems to the Chief Commissioner that the importance of fluid resources, and the desirability of extending the movement by increasing the resources of the central and distributing institution, namely, the Provincial Bank, are of much greater weight than the earning of larger interest by the primary societies by lending their reserve funds to their own members.

6. In Recommendation No. 183 it is suggested that officers of the Indian Civil Service should report, and withdraw when opportunity offers, any deposits which they may have in the Central Bank of the district in which they are serving. The Chief Commissioner is unable to concur in this suggestion. Apart from the inadvisability of excessive and invidious restrictions, inconsistent with the high reputation of the Indian Civil Service, Sir Benjamin Robertson would also urge the consideration that, especially in backward districts, private deposits by officers will give encouragement to and induce confidence in the co-operative movement. The effect of the withdrawal of an officer's deposit in the local bank, on his being posted to a district, could hardly be otherwise than unfortunate locally.

7. Recommendation No. 185 seems to be covered by the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, but there is no objection to re-enunciating the principle of the rule, with special reference to co-operative societies and banks.

8. In Recommendation No. 196 it is suggested that Local Governments should issue a rule empowering Registrars to rescind any resolution or act which deals with controversial opinions of a political or religious character. Mr. Crosthwaite promises, in his Note, to submit a draft rule, but, on reconsideration, the Chief Commissioner understands, he would prefer for the present not to have any rule on the subject. He has found that his control of the general working of societies is on the whole quite satisfactory and effective, and he suggests that, so long as matters work smoothly, prominence should not be given to the subject dealt with in the Committee's recommendation by the issue of a formal rule. The Chief Commissioner agrees that no rule of the kind indicated is at present advisable in the Central Provinces. Local Governments may be allowed a discretion to issue such a rule, but need not be required or advised to do so.

9. As regards Recommendation No. 197, the Chief Commissioner agrees with Mr. Crosthwaite in opposing the appointment of an expert co-operative adviser with the Government of India. In paragraph 202 of their Report the Committee observe that "the appointment of a single agent of this kind is naturally less expensive than a separate arrangement for each province." But obviously such an appointment will in no way meet the absolute need of an expert for each province. Further, when the stage of having either a State bank or an All-India Federal Bank, as the apex of the movement, is reached, the position of the Government of India's expert, if he intervenes, as he inevitably will, between the provinces and the apex bank, may very likely prove to be most embarrassing to the provinces.

No. C-116, dated Pachmarhi, the 25th April 1916.

From—H. R. CROSTHWAITE, ESQ., Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Central Provinces,

To—The Secretary to the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner (Agriculture Department), Central Provinces.

In reply to Mr. McDonald's letter No. 41-XIII-14-2 of the 2nd of February 1916, I have the honour to submit a note which I have prepared for the information of the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner. As the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner is aware I was attached to the Committee when the report was being written; and I must point out that very great difficulty was experienced in framing a report suitable for all Provinces. Indeed, a few of the Committee's recommendations are, to very great extent, influenced by existing practice in Burma or elsewhere, and cannot be maintained against informed criticism or in the light of experience gained in other countries such, for instance, as Japan,—even if continental practice be put on one side on the score that East is not West.

2. In general, the recommendations of the Committee are sound enough in so far as they deal with the lower stages of co-operative organization. But far too little is made of the absolute necessity for training non-officials themselves to do much of the work that is now being done for them in the higher branches of co-operative activity by the Registrars and their subordinate officers; and it is not clearly indicated that, if progress is to be sound and business safe, the scope of co-operative effort must be restricted until the structure of credit and banking has been consolidated and the Registrars have had time to educate a large number of co-operators. The tendency of the Report is to create the impression that a Registrar's control and guidance is an efficient substitute for national enthusiasm and for the control and guidance furnished by Federations of co-operative institutions, which, of course, it can never be. Supervision by Government, for the protection of its own particular interests and those of the community at large, there must always be. But if the trend of development in India is to be in the direction of a co-operative State bank, then Government is embarking upon a course which will, in a few years, saddle it with the gravest responsibilities in the shape of top-heavy finance based on hastily prepared foundations. The multiplication of co-operative concerns may, of course, be accelerated by the creation of a State bank; that is Prussian experience. But it is also Prussian experience that a State bank is not an unmixed blessing either to its founder, the State, or its clients, the co-operative institutions. Nor can we hope that typically Prussian methods, in keeping with the rest of the Imperial German picture, will mingle well with British ideas. The object of the Committee, namely the discount and re-discount of co-operative paper would be attained equally well, and even better, by an All-India Federal Bank after the Italian model; but before there can be such a bank there must be, down below, far more capital owned and accumulated by the members of co-operative societies themselves as well as firmly established provincial co-operative banks to federate and, also, in my opinion, non-official co-operators sufficiently trained and experienced to take a large share in the control.

A further serious difficulty lies in the nature of the paper which is to be re-discounted. The promissory notes of Agricultural Credit Societies are not sufficiently capable of speedy realization to furnish, by themselves, a convenient banking medium, and the advance bill of exchange, the transferable bond and the debenture find a welcome place in the co-operative banker's port-folio. Even these latter securities are only accepted where the co-operative idea is spread widely amongst the people and the machinery of co-operative banking is well understood by the private investor as well as by the big commercial banks. Before there can be any general co-operative system of advance bills of exchange, transferable bonds, or debentures, the Indian co-operator has a long distance to travel along the path of economic and educational development; and, further, much legislation will be necessary. On the one hand, in fact, the Committee inculcate caution and prudence; on the other hand, they end their report with a proposal which runs very far ahead of existing development, and leaves out of account intermediate ground that has still to be won and consolidated.

3. The recommendations of the Committee very frequently endorse or follow co-operative practice in the Central Provinces, and where they do so, it would serve no useful purpose to examine them. Accordingly, I have only included in my note recommendations with which it is necessary to express disagreement, or upon which comment may prove to be useful.

Note on the Recommendations specified in clause (b) of the Appendix to the Government of India's Resolution No. 2-C—155-16 of the 4th of January 1916.

Recommendation No 8.—"A central cattle reinsurance society is necessary, and Government backing to such an institution is unobjectionable."—There is a radical difference between the views expressed by the Committee on Co-operation and those expressed by the Agricultural Conference recently held at Pusa. The Committee on Co-operation urge that cattle insurance societies should be formed without any attempt to collect actuarial data of the mortality of cattle beforehand, with empirical premia, and without adequate means for applying prophylactic measures against contagious disease. The Agricultural Conference of Pusa took exactly the opposite view of the case. The Conference pointed out that no scheme of cattle insurance would be likely to prove successful unless it included insurance against rinderpest; that if rinderpest was included the rates of premia would probably be prohibitive; that the danger of rinderpest was so great in India that the risk of financial loss on a large scale was very formidable; and that climatic and other conditions in Burma, being peculiar to that country, rendered the results of any experiments in Burma of little value as a guide to a successful system of cattle insurance in India. Quite apart from the view of the case taken by the Agricultural Conference, with which I agree, I am firmly of opinion that the time is not ripe, as far as the Central Provinces and Berar are concerned, for any scheme of co-operative cattle insurance. What the people must master first of all are the elementary principles of co-operation; and there is no better school for teaching them than that of co-operative credit. We have only just begun to make progress with the co-operative education of the people. Further, the history of co-operation in other countries shows quite clearly that co-operative credit, when successfully organised and developed, itself leads to a demand for other forms of co-operation. The greatest danger which the co-operative movement has to face at present in India is one which it has also had to contend with in other countries. The tendency is to look to co-operation as a palliative, if not a remedy, for every economic ill. In particular, I would point out that experience in Austria has shown that when the State attempts to push co-operative cattle insurance on a big scale, heavy financial losses are incurred in every case in which the ground is not sufficiently reconnoitred and prepared beforehand. We are not yet ready in the Central Provinces and Berar for any scheme of co-operative cattle insurance. As regards hail insurance, however, we have actually begun to feel our way, and we are making an experiment on a small and cautious scale in the Sihora Tahsil this year.

Recommendation No. 12.—"The Agricultural Department should assist societies for distributing improved seed and implements provided experimenting is avoided. Control of such societies to rest for some time with the Registrar and not with Director of Agriculture."—Provided the liability of agricultural non-credit societies be kept absolutely distinct from that of Central Banks and credit societies, paragraph 13 of the Committee's Report (to which Recommendation No. 12 refers), embodies the result of the best continental experience. I do not quite see how the Director of Agriculture is ever to take over the control of the agricultural co-operative societies, and our aim should be to transfer the control not from one Government officer to another but to central co-operative organisations. In these provinces the liability of banking and credit institutions is kept strictly apart; that is to say, credit and non-credit liabilities never overlap. Central Banks sell agricultural implements as agents without any financial risk. They buy pure seed on behalf of credit societies as the agents of the societies, and in compliance with definite orders given by the societies. The society gives the order, the Central Bank advances the money to the society on the security of the unlimited liability, and then the Central Bank, acting as a convenient centralised agency, purchases pure seed in bulk on behalf of its constituent societies. The Registrar works in close touch not only with the Director of Agriculture but with each one of the Deputy Directors.

Recommendation No. 18.—"Societies among the poorer urban classes need special encouragement. Government help in the maintenance of an efficient clerical staff is justifiable."—This recommendation scarcely applies to the Central Provinces. In Bombay City the servants of India have organized, and are supervising and instructing a number of societies, the members of which belong to the poor castes. Class societies are, however, financially dangerous because the loans advanced are all subject to the same kind of risk. That it is to say, a society composed entirely of weavers is subject to special dangers which may threaten the society as a whole. In the case of mixed societies the risks are more evenly distributed. In the Central Provinces and Berar we have only two cities of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, viz., Nagpur and Jabalpur, and only 76 per mille of the total population reside in towns. One point which the Committee on Co-operation appear to have overlooked is that though societies for poor castes might be organized, it would, as a rule, be extremely difficult to persuade Central Banks to regard them as sound business propositions. I am strongly opposed to the grant of money by Government to such societies. In the first place, the fact of such a grant would be made use of by other co-operative institutions in search of financial assistance; and, secondly, I do not think that philanthropic motives ought to influence the decision as to whether a society is fit to be entrusted with a loan or not, no matter whether the money available be public or private money. Private philanthropists are, of course, at liberty to organize societies for poor castes and to finance them with the help of their friends. In brief, I would not stand in the way of the formation of societies for poor castes in the Central Provinces and Berar, but I would not recommend Government to interfere in the matter, nor would I advise co-operative banks to lend money to such societies.

Recommendation No. 50.—"A limit should be fixed to the borrowing power of society by the General Meeting once a year in the manner described in paragraphs 141-2 and this should be subject to Registrar's control".—Co-operative credit societies in the Central Provinces have from the very first fixed their borrowing power once a year in the General Meeting in the manner described in paragraphs 141 and 142 of the Committee's Report. This limit has not been subject to the Registrar's control. The whole object of this recommendation is to place authority in the hands of the Registrar; he is to reduce the limit, or in the words of Mr. English, the Burma Registrar, "to yield the money stick." The practice originates from Burma. I doubt whether the path to self-help lies this way. People must make mistakes if they are to learn; at the same time, Registrars generally appreciate the fact that this is so, and the plan makes for safety and obedience. The Congress of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks has now decided that in future the limit shall be subject to the Registrar's control. The Registrar will fix the maximum limit only and within this limit perfect freedom of action will be allowed to central banks and credit societies.

Recommendation No. 51.—“Deposits which the society is unable to use in loans to members should be transferred to Central Banks which should offer specially favourable rates for such money. Societies should not be prohibited from accepting deposits within their maximum borrowing power although in excess of the limit fixed for the local borrowings of individual members. They must be responsible to the depositors and cannot transfer their liability to Central Banks which however in event of their inability to accept such deposits should notify primaries. All deposits above their maximum borrowing power should be refused by societies.”—We have not yet been able to devise a system by which our co-operative credit societies can accept deposits from non-members with safety to themselves and to the whole banking system of which the societies form a part only. There is a serious practical difficulty in the way, viz., that of obtaining sufficiently reliable information as to the liabilities incurred by the credit societies in respect of the deposits accepted by them. Sufficient cover must, of course, be provided for all deposit liabilities incurred, whether by the primary societies, or by the Central Banks, or by the Provincial Bank. As we perfect our machinery we shall no doubt be able to allow credit societies to accept deposits from non-members. At present we have made a move in this direction, and have framed a by-law which allows primary societies to accept deposits from non-members subject to such rules and restrictions as may be laid down from time to time by the Registrar. Our present practice is not to allow primary societies to accept deposits from non-members at all but to refer all non-member depositors to the Central Bank which serves the area concerned.

Recommendation No. 78.—The rate of interest at present charged by societies on loans of their members is 12 per cent. No profits are distributed to the members of the rural societies and one-quarter of the interest charged is carried to reserve funds.

Recommendation No. 80.—“Punctuality in repayment vital. The system of accounts should show clearly what loans have been extended and which have become overdue. Extension for good reasons justifiable. System for showing overdues outlined.”—In the Central Provinces a member is supplied with a separate account for every loan he takes; and he has in his pass book clear information, which is kept up to date by the travelling accountants employed and paid for by the primary societies themselves. At the same time, I would point out that the remarks of the Committee on co-operation, as contained in paragraph 74 of their Report, omit to note the fact that the only reliable guide to the financial condition of a society is its turnover, that is to say, the total of its receipts and repayments from year to year and over a number of years. A glance at the two sides of a simple ledger account will generally reveal the truth. As regards the periods for which loans are granted, a guide to these is now embodied in our by-laws for primary societies. In general, we have not the least difficulty in stating exactly what sums are overdue. The whole question of punctuality bristles with difficulties which have again and again been the subject of comment on the part of expert authority. Excessive strictness in collection is held by some to be even more harmful than extreme leniency. If the credit society as a whole is made to keep its promises to the Central Bank—the failures of defaulting members being made good by their fellow members—then the society itself is likely to turn out what it is intended to be, viz., an efficient agency for the collection of dues from individuals. It is now the practice in the Central Provinces to refuse a Registrar's award to any society against one or more of its individual members, unless the society asking for the award is itself free from arrears due to the Central Bank. By-law 21 of the standard by-laws now adopted by the Congress of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks for all primary societies in the Central Provinces and Berar is reproduced below :—

“By-law 21.—As regards the period for which the society may grant loans to its members, the Panchayat shall observe the following principles :—

- (1) when a loan is made for a non-productive purpose it shall be repaid within two years ;

- (2) loans for seed, food, cultivation expenses, cattle fodder or the payment of rent or revenue shall be repaid immediately after the next ensuing harvest ;
- (3) loans for the purchase of carts or cattle or industrial or agricultural implements, for the liquidation of small debts, or for house building must be repaid with two or at the most three years ,
- (4) loans for liquidation of large debts, the purchase or redemption of land, or for expensive improvement of land must be repaid within three or at the most four years. The Panchayat shall scrupulously observe these principles and shall not grant more than one extension of an overdue kist ;
- (5) should it be necessary in the opinion of the Panchayat to grant a loan or to make an extension for a period not in accordance with the principles above expressed, the Panchayat shall refer the matter for the orders of the Circle Union or the Central Bank to which the society is affiliated and shall obtain and obey such orders which must be in writing.

Recommendation No. 88.—" Primary societies should be allowed to use their Reserve Funds in their own business, provided their ability to repay deposits on due date is secured."—In the Central Provinces it is recognized that co-operation does not begin and end inside the village and that the individual primary society is merely a single unit in a great credit organization. It is held, therefore, that it is the duty of each unit to contribute to the stability of the whole organization. There can be no stability unless adequate fluid resource is maintained. This adequate fluid resource cannot possibly be maintained without the co-operation of the primary societies, of the Central Banks, and of the Provincial Bank. Accordingly, vide paragraph 83 of the Committee's Report, it is in the Central Provinces that the reserve funds of primary societies are concentrated at the apex of the system. The Committee on Co-operation say that " assuming that co-operative societies are secure in respect of their fluid resources, everything points to the desirability of a primary society using its surplus assets in loans to members." In the Central Provinces, if the primary societies use their surplus assets in loans to members, the movement, as a whole, will be stripped of a very necessary part of its fluid resources ; and the inevitable result will be that the primary societies will collapse. The system followed in the Central Provinces is that followed in all continental countries, and is that recommended by Sir Frederick Nicholson and by every other authority on Co-operation. Personally, I am entirely opposed to the recommendations of the Committee is so far as they concern the employment of the reserve funds of primary societies. And not only am I personally opposed to its recommendation, but I am authorised, as the Governor of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks, to say that it is the deliberate opinion of the Union that a reserve fund invested in loans to members ceases to be a reserve fund at all. It is obvious that fluid resource, if it is to be of any use at all, must be absolutely fluid or, in other words, immediately realizable. Without the assistance of our reserve funds we cannot maintain sufficient fluid resources, therefore we cannot possibly invest reserve funds in loans to members.

Recommendation No. 89.—" To ensure the reserve fund growing as quickly as possible the margin of interest should be kept as high as possible until a society becomes independent of outside assistance."—By-laws 30 and 31 of the revised standard by-laws for primary societies as now adopted for universal use in these provinces are reproduced below :—

" By-law 30.—All net profits shall be put aside as the permanent and indivisible reserve fund of the society. The reserve fund of the society shall be invested in such manner as the Registrar of Co-operative Societies may direct from time to time. The purpose of the reserve fund is not only to provide the society and its future members with a permanent pledge on which to obtain credit but is to protect the present creditors of the society, against loss, to build up a fund from which an annual income may be derived to cheapen the rate of interest on loans to members of the society, to provide an emergency fund and, in the end, to furnish the society with its own working capital. Members of the society must clearly understand what the purposes of the reserve fund are, and they must also understand that it is only by patient and gradual steps that the society can attain to the ultimate goal of being in possession of its own working capital.

" By-law 31.—The reserve fund shall not be drawn upon without the sanction previously obtained of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Central Provinces and Berar. The reserve fund is the permanent and indivisible fund of the Society and in the event of the society's dissolution it cannot be shared out amongst the members but it will be utilized in accordance with the rules framed by the Administration under the Act which are given below :—

XIX.—The reserve fund of a registered society shall be indivisible and no member shall be entitled to claim any specified share in it.

XX.—On the dissolution of a registered society, the reserve fund shall be applied to discharging such liabilities of the society as may remain undischarged after the enforcement in full of the liabilities of the individual members of the society.

XXI.—Any balance of the reserve fund which may remain after making the payments specified in rule XX shall be applied to such local objects of public utility as may be selected by a majority of the votes of the members of the society (as they existed on the date of dissolution) assembled in general meeting and approved of by the Registrar. If within 3 months of the dissolution of the society the members fail to make a selection which is approved of by the Registrar, the latter shall credit the above mentioned balance of the reserve fund to the reserve fund of the co-operative society, if any, to which the society was affiliated or, if the society was not affiliated to any other society, shall place the said balance on deposit in some co-operative or other bank until a new co-operative society with a similar area of operations is registered, in which event it shall be credited to the reserve fund of such society."

Nowhere in their Report have the Committee on Co-operation made the proper distinction between reserves and reserve fund. In the Raiffeisen society—and the Raiffeisen model is that which we accept in the Central Provinces—the reserve fund proper is never invested in loans to members. Part of the profits, it is true, is devoted to a fund called the Foundation Fund, the purpose of which is to provide the society with its own working capital. We hope, in the end, that our societies will be able to provide their own working capital out of their profits. But before this distant goal can be reached, we have to provide, as I have already noted, adequate fluid resource for the protection of the whole movement. The rate of interest which is charged to members of rural societies is 12 per cent, and the present margin of profit all goes to the reserve fund. At present the tendency of money generally is to become dearer; and though the Provincial and Central Banks have not increased the rates of interest offered to depositors, no decrease in rate has been possible. Nor does such a decrease seem probable in the near future. 12 per cent, therefore, appears to be the rate at which members of societies will continue to borrow for the next few years.

Recommendations Nos. 94—105.—Recommendations Nos. 94—105 deal with the question of audit and supervision of primary societies. The paragraphs of the Committee's Report which are referred to are 88 to 98. These paragraphs embody our practice in the Central Provinces; and I have nothing to say except that I agree with the recommendations of the Committee. I would, however, like to point out that our non-official staff paid for by the movement itself out of its own funds and not by Government, is increasing with great rapidity. On the 30th June 1915, the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks was employing 126 men and paying a monthly salary bill of Rs. 5,926. It must not be imagined that the detailed control of the supervising staff is centralized either in the hands of the Registrar or of the Union. On the contrary, our aim in these provinces is to secure autonomy as far as possible in respect of primary societies and of Central Banks alike. The Central Provinces Union corresponds to the big Federations which exist on the continent. These are guiding, organizing, advising and co-ordinating institutions ; but they do not attempt to carry out local work in detail which can only be performed efficiently by local agency in full possession of local knowledge.

Recommendations Nos. 107—162.—Except as regards Recommendation No. 107, which concerns the system of guaranteeing Unions, paragraphs 101—161 of the Committee's report which are covered by the recommendations above referred to, are in no way inconsistent with co-operative practice in the Central Provinces. For instance, our primary societies seek loans and cash credits from Central Banks which are members of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks and are, therefore, under co-operative control ; not only that, but the societies themselves are shareholders in the Central Banks to which they are affiliated (Recommendation No. 109). Membership in our Central Banks is not confined to societies only but includes individual members of the middle classes (Recommendation No. 110). There is provision in the by-laws of all our Central Banks for the resumption of shares held by the individual shareholders (Recommendation No. 111). All servants of Central Banks must be licensed by the Governor of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks who is at present the Registrar. The Governor refuses to license any servant unless his salary is adequate (Recommendation No. 115). The staff employed by Central Banks does assist voluntary applicants in forming new societies (Recommendation No. 115). Central Banks do not grant loans to societies which are not shareholders in the Bank (Recommendation No. 116). Central Banks finance neither insurance societies nor non-credit societies (Recommendation No. 117). Our Central Banks are independent units and do not work as book banks. They handle cash, and must do so in order to do their work at all (Recommendation No. 118). Every shareholder in the Central Bank has one vote only (Recommendation No. 123). All our shares are fully paid up (Recommendation No. 124). The rate of dividend is not limited by rule but by by-law, and limitation of dividend is a condition prior to registration. Bonuses are, of course, not allowed (Recommendation No. 126). I have, I think, said enough to show that our practice is generally in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation.

Recommendation No. 122—Societies should ordinarily be required to take shares in their Central Bank in proportion to the amount of their borrowings from it.—In the Central Provinces we are attaining the object of the Committee but in a slightly different way. In order to spread the sense of association amongst the members of primary societies, every member of a primary society is bound to purchase one share of Rs. 5 in the Co-operative Central Bank to which his society is affiliated, for every complete Rs. 50 or fraction of Rs. 50 which he may owe to his society. In this way, the proportion of owned capital will maintain a steady relation to the borrowings from outside. This system has, after very long and careful discussion, been adopted by the Congress of the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks, and it cannot now be upset. It has the advantage, in my opinion, of enlarging the horizon of the individual co-operator and of teaching him, as I have already said, that co-operation does not begin and end inside his own village society. Stability of share capital is also secured.

Recommendation No. 132—"To meet all charges entailed by our recommendations Central Banks require a 3 per cent margin and primary societies the same"—I do not think that if primary societies co-operate, as they do in the Central Provinces, in the accumulation of fluid resources for the protection of the movement as a whole, that the 3 per cent margin indicated by the Committee is necessary in the case of the Central Bank as well as of the societies. As a matter of fact, our Central Banks have a margin of more than 3 per cent because, in calculating the margin, share capital and deposits must be taken into consideration as well as funds borrowed from the Provincial Bank. The smallest margin which Central Banks enjoy is that they earn on loans from the Provincial Bank. These they take at 7 per cent and pass on to their constituent societies at 9 per cent. On fixed deposits for one year they pay 6 per cent ; deposits for a period of less than one year are not accepted by Central Banks.

Recommendation No. 138—"Share capital plus reserves should be at least 12½ per cent of total liabilities."—In the Central Provinces share capital plus reserves must according to Union convention (which is binding on all Central Banks) be at least 12½ per cent of total liabilities. It must, however, be understood that temporary divergencies from this standard are almost inevitable in any system of rural credit banking. I should be disposed to fix a standard of 10 per cent as quite adequate, but the effort to increase owned capital should be continuous, and it must be understood that the greater the proportion of owned capital the greater the financial stability of the movement.

Recommendation No. 150—"Central Banks should not ordinarily institute proceedings against defaulting societies in Civil Courts, but should exercise pressure through their staff and finally apply to the Registrar to take action under section 36 of the Act."—I must confess I cannot follow this recommendation. It appears to me that Co-operative Central Banks are purely private institutions, and that the purport of the Committee's Report is to declare them to be private institutions. Why then should the civil courts be closed to Central Banks, if they wish to make use of them in order to recover dues from defaulting societies? I consider it most undesirable that pressure, of the kind indicated by the Committee, should be brought to bear upon the societies by the paid staff of Central Banks. And I also object to the suggested consequence of the Registrar's enquiry, namely, liquidation. The Central Bank is placed in the unenviable position of having to ask the Registrar to liquidate a society which might, quite probably, be brought to its senses by the use of milder means. Frequently the mere fact that the Registrar has issued an award against a society is sufficient to cause immediate payment of arrears. In making this recommendation the Committee are, I think, forgetting that Central Banks are expected to make recoveries from societies without the help of the Registrar. A too frequent use of the procedure laid down for the liquidation of societies would be just as pernicious in its effects as too frequent recourse to the civil courts. Why not leave the matter to the discretion of Registrars and of Central Banks instead of trying to lay down meticulous rules for the guidance of institutions which are based on independent self-help?

Recommendation No. 161—"The audit of the accounts of Central Banks may be entrusted to expert outside agencies or made by the Registrar's staff. Such banks should bear the expense of their own audit."—Central Banks are, in the Central Provinces, composed mostly of primary societies as shareholders. They pay extremely moderate dividends and, in fact, in some cases very small dividends. No other system of audit could satisfy the Registrar at present, except a system conducted by his own audit staff; for the audit of Central Banks is not only most important but is a special business with its own technicalities attached to it. A knowledge of local conditions and of local facts is also essential to the correct interpretation of figures. Moreover, there is, at present, no non-official agency available for the audit of Central Banks. In course of time, Central Banks will be audited by the Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks, that is to say, by their own Federation, but that time has not yet come; and meanwhile I am strongly opposed to that part of the Committee's recommendation which suggests that Central Banks should immediately bear the expense of their own audit.

Recommendations Nos. 164—178 deal with the subject of Provincial Banks. The only recommendations which appear to me to require comment are Nos. 167, 169, 175 and 176.

Recommendation No. 167.—In course of time societies will take a more intelligent interest than they do at present in the management of the Central Banks in which they are all shareholders. It would, at present, be most undesirable to attempt to give Central Banks representation in the management of the Provincial Bank. Before this is done our Central Banks must become far more co-operative than they are.

Recommendation No. 169.—On the advice of Sir Lionel Abrahams and of the Directors of the Allahabad Bank reserve liability was made a feature of the Provincial Bank on its first flotation. This reserve liability will, in due course, be turned into share capital paid up by the Central Banks themselves; for the by-laws of the Provincial Bank provide for the redemption of shares held by individual shareholders. I very much doubt whether reserve liability is unobjectionable in the case of shares held by Central Banks and societies. The guarantee afforded by reserve liability is always of an unsatisfactory nature, and any attempt to enforce it would cause disturbance. The Central Provinces Union of Co-operative Banks will prefer not to have any dealings in shares which carry reserve liability.

Recommendation No. 175.—This recommendation simply embodies the present practice in the Central Provinces ; but I would add that the Provincial Bank makes no charge whatsoever to Central Banks for providing the necessary cover. Such a charge becomes unnecessary if the reserve funds of the Central Banks and societies are made available for use as working capital to the Provincial Bank ; but, it must, of course, be pointed out that such an arrangement necessitates the deposit by the Provincial Bank with the Registrar of gilt-edged securities, such as Government Paper or War Loan Scrip, to cover the responsibility incurred by the Provincial Bank in respect of the receipt of reserve funds by it.

Recommendation No. 176.—I doubt whether this prohibition will, in the course of a year or two, prove to be practicable. There is not a single Provincial Co-operative Bank in the world which finds " co-operative business alone sufficient " (to use the words of Mr. H. W. Wolf) " to keep the pot boiling." It is, however, in the case of our own Provincial Bank premature to consider the question ; and I do not advocate any extension of business beyond strictly co-operative limits for the present.

Next with respect to Recommendations No. 180—187.—I do not agree with Recommendation No. 181. If the object of Government be to economise the use of money, then I recommend that the example of Germany be followed and that cheques be exempted from stamp duty. The cheque system makes for economy in many ways ; and it would be a great pity to take any step which might stand in the way of the commercial education of the people.

The next Recommendation which I take objection to is No. 183. I do not see why officers of the Indian Civil Service should be compelled to report the state of their private banking accounts with purely private banking institutions. The sooner we have done with the idea that an officer of Government must necessarily show undue official favour to a concern with which he has strict business dealings, the better. As a matter of fact, the inside business of every co-operative institution is known to the Registrar, and shady practices of any kind would speedily come to his notice. Any formal report by an officer of the Indian Civil Service appears to me to be superfluous.

As regards Recommendation No. 185.—This appears to me to be covered by the existing rules for the Conduct of Government Servants.

Recommendations No. 194—195 do not require any comment from me as these have already been the subject-matter of proposals by the Administration to the Government of India (vide the Administration's letter No. 527—XIII-14-33, of the 30th of October 1915).

With respect to Recommendation No. 196, I have framed a rule which will be submitted to the Administration, together with the proposed new rules under the Act.

As regards Recommendation No. 197, it must be remarked that the Committee contemplate the appointment of an expert co-operator "whose duties would be confined to making enquiries and tendering advice" (vide paragraph 203 of the Report). This officer would be available for the use of Local Governments, but would be attached primarily to the Government of India. "Such an officer would in no sense be entitled to give orders to Registrars and much less to Local Governments." "It would be more important for him to have a thorough knowledge of co-operation and actual experience of co-operative work in this country than an acquaintance with the details of banking methods." Personally, I do not think that enough is known yet about the trend of the co-operative movement in India, its possibilities, and its tendencies, to justify the immediate appointment of this expert officer. In the development of the co-operative movement it is necessary to work from the outer fringe inwards, to build from the bottom and not from the top. Thus the success of the primary societies has led to the successful development of Central Banks. The development of Central Banks has, in turn, led to the establishment of Provincial Banks; and in due course of time it may be expected that Provincial Banks will combine to form an Imperial Federation and an Imperial Federal Bank for the whole of India. In Germany, the Prussian Co-operative State Bank has not been altogether successful, and the most powerful Federations are now breaking away from what has been found to be its cramping influence. In Italy, on the other hand, the great co-operative banks have themselves combined to establish a Federal Bank, as well as a Federation for the purpose of mutual inspection, control, guidance, support, and representation. Of the two lines of development, the Italian is much to be preferred: and, although the two institutions just mentioned were only established in October, 1913, they have already met with very great success. On the other hand, the Prussian Co-operative State Bank, established by the German Government to prop up industrial co-operative societies with which the Schulze-Delitzsch People's Bank would have no concern, is compelled, against its will, to do six-sevenths of its business with agricultural institutions which are in open revolt against its bureaucratic and centralised authority. Even in Germany, the tendency has been to follow the school of Haas which advocates local autonomy (with, of course, Unions and Federations for general purposes) rather than the school of Raiffeisen which centralises the control of branch banks in one parent institution. Provided Registrars know their work and really understand the science and the business of co-operation the appointment of an expert involves dangers which cannot be overlooked. On the other hand, it cannot be too strongly impressed upon Local Governments and Administrations that the study of co-operation is in itself work which requires the attention of professional experts. Co-operative business and co-operative administration are matters which cannot be considered from the same point of view as the usual routine work of Government. I am certain that unless the proposed co-operative expert kept himself and his activities very much in the back ground, the whole vitality of the co-operative movement would be rapidly destroyed. First of all, the enthusiasm of Registrars would be sapped; and, secondly, non-official workers would cease to lend their support to an over-centralized movement. It may indeed be possible for a time to give co-operative institutions a semblance of natural life, even when the control resembles that exercised by the owner of a theatre of marionnettes. But true progress is not to be found in that direction, and I am afraid that the problem before Government cannot be solved by the substitution of a single co-operative adviser for the number of absolutely efficient experts necessary to fill the posts of Registrars in the various provinces. I must confess, however, that I find considerable difficulty in stating to Government my views, reasons and arguments in connection with co-operative matters of a technical nature, simply because the understanding of co-operation involves long study and much special knowledge. A doctor called upon to justify his views before other members of his profession would do so in language and by means of illustrations and references which the layman would find it difficult to comprehend. A Registrar, who is not an amateur, finds himself hampered in a discussion of co-operative questions, because if he expresses himself technically he becomes unintelligible. And unless he does express himself technically, and by means of references to well known systems and institutions, he finds it hard to make his points and yet avoid writing at intolerable length.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

2. The Chief Commissioner has carefully considered such of the recommendations made by the Committee on Co-operation in India as are placed by the Government of India in the Resolution under reference in classes (a) and (b). These recommendations seem to him to be eminently reasonable and practical, and they will be of the greatest assistance in the task of reorganising co-operative work in Assam and placing it on a sound basis. It was a matter of the utmost regret to the Chief Commissioner that he was not able in the current year's budget to find funds for the creation of the new post of Registrar, sanction to which was communicated in the Government of India's letter No. 1765,* dated the 15th October 1915, as no marked advance in the movement can be expected under existing arrangements.

3. The only remark which the Chief Commissioner desires to make on the recommendations included in class (a) is in connection with the latter part of recommendation No. 85. He submits that the issue of instructions to Courts by the executive Government, which appears to be suggested, would be liable to be regarded as an encroachment on the independence of the Courts.

4. The Chief Commissioner endorses all the recommendations included in class (b) subject to the following remarks regarding recommendations Nos. 8, 187 and 195:—

(a) Recommendation No. 8 is to the effect that a central cattle reinsurance society is necessary and that Government backing to such an institution is unobjectionable. The Chief Commissioner accepts this recommendation in principle, but considers that, in view of the special difficulties in the way of cattle insurance in Assam, it is very doubtful whether it will be possible to make any development in this direction in the near future. Assam cattle are generally very poor in quality and of low value. Rinderpest and other cattle diseases are endemic and often appear in epidemic form. In years of exceptional flood heavy mortality is liable to ensue. For these reasons it will be a matter of the greatest difficulty to devise a scheme which, while placing the insuring society on a sound financial basis, would tempt the ryot to insure. Until there has been a great improvement in the breed of cattle in this province and greater facilities have been provided for applying prophylactic measures, cattle insurance cannot, Sir Archdale Earle fears, take practical shape, and a central reinsurance society is, therefore, at present beyond the range of practical politics.

(b) The Chief Commissioner has ordered that Deputy Commissioners and Sub-Divisional Officers should ordinarily be ex officio on the management of central banks dealing with their district or sub-division. The Committee proposes in recommendation No. 187 that, while District or Sub-Divisional Officers may be Chairmen of central banks, they should not be given such a post ex officio, but should have a formal right to attend meetings of shareholders or directors. The Chief Commissioner regards it as undesirable on general principles that an officer in the position of a Deputy Commissioner or Sub-Divisional Officer should subject himself to election, and he is therefore of opinion that if such an officer is to be on the management of a central bank at all he should be given a place on it ex officio. If he is not placed on the management ex officio, he should, in Sir Archdale Earle's opinion, be merely given the formal right to attend meetings of shareholders and directors.

(c) As regards recommendation No. 195, I am to refer to my letter No. 4464-R., dated the 1st October 1915, in which it was explained that the post of a Development Commissioner was beyond the requirements of this province, and that the best means of securing co-ordination of effort between the Co-operative and Agricultural Departments in Assam would be by arranging that the same Secretary to Government should deal with both departments.

Views of Government on the Recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation.

Serial No.	No. of Recommendation.	Committee's Recommendations.	Views of Government.
		NON-CREDIT SOCIETIES.
1	8	A central cattle reinsurance society is necessary, and Government backing to such an institution is unobjectionable. ( Paragraph 12 of the Report. )	This Government agrees with the Committee.
2	12	The Agricultural Department should assist societies for distributing improved seed and implements provided experimenting is avoided. Control of such societies to rest for some time with Registrar and not with Director of Agriculture. ( Paragraph 13. )	This Government agrees with the Committee and is following the policy recommended.
		CREDIT SOCIETIES.
		A.—NON-AGRICULTURE.
3	18	Societies among the poorer urban classes need special encouragement. Government help in the maintenance of an efficient clerical staff is justifiable. ( Paragraph 19. )	This Government agrees with the Committee.
		PRIMARY SOCIETIES.
		COMPOSITION OF CAPITAL.
4	50	A limit should be fixed to the borrowing power of a society by the General Meeting once a year in the manner described in paragraphs 141-42, and this should be subject to Registrar's control. ( Paragraph 52. )	This Government agrees with the Committee. The borrowings of societies are at present limited by rule 8 of the Rules issued under section 43 of the Act, which runs as follows :— " 8. (1) A registered society may borrow, in accordance with law, from either members or non-members; and all borrowings shall be regulated by the by-laws : Provided that the issue of debentures by any such society shall be subject to such conditions as the Registrar may prescribe. (2) The maximum amount of borrowings of any registered society shall be determined annually at a General Meeting of the society, but may be revised at any subsequent General Meeting during the year. No registered society shall contract any loan beyond the maximum amount so determined and in force for the time being." To ensure control by the Registrar it is proposed to add a clause to this rule providing that the Registrar may revise the limit fixed by the General Meeting, and that, when he does so, the limit as revised by him shall not be exceeded.

5	51	PRIMARY SOCIETIES—contd. COMPOSITION OF CAPITAL—contd.	This Government agrees with the recommendation of the Committee, with the exception of the point about specially favourable rates for deposits by societies, which should in the opinion of this Government be left to the discretion of central banks.
		Deposits which the society is unable to use in loans to members should be transferred to central banks, which should offer specially favourable rates for such money. Societies should not be prohibited from accepting deposits within their maximum borrowing power, although in excess of the limit fixed for the local borrowings of individual members. They must be responsible to the depositors, and cannot transfer their liability to central banks, which, however, in event of their inability to accept such deposits, should notify primaries. All deposits above their maximum borrowing power should be refused by societies. (Paragraph 52.)
6	58	EMPLOYMENT OF CAPITAL. Loans to Members.	This Government agrees, and has provided for this by a rule issued under section 43 of the Act.
		The maximum borrowing power of a society, i.e., the limit up to which the society will pledge its credit, should be fixed by the General Meeting. (Paragraph 59.)
7	59	The maximum normal credit for each member should also be fixed at the General Meeting. Loans in excess of this limit should not be granted by the Committee without reference to the General Meeting. (Paragraph 59.)	In the opinion of this Government the advantages of this proposal are outweighed by the disadvantage of the tendency which would result of members to claim loans up to the maximum normal credit when not required, and of Committees to sanction such excessive loans. This Government therefore does not support this proposal.
8	67	The period of loans should be fixed at the time when they are sanctioned. Loans for non-productive purposes should be for periods not exceeding two years. For productive loans the main factor should be the object of the loan, and standards based on this should be prescribed; but the amount of the loan and the circumstances and repaying power of the debtor may also be taken into account. (Paragraph 64.)
9	78	Interest rates charged on loans should be included in the by-laws and made unalterable without the Registrar's sanction. As long as they are below those of the outside markets, they should not be pitched so low as to retard the growth of a reserve fund. (Paragraph 72.)	This Government agrees, and contemplates providing by a rule under section 43 of the Act that the rate of interest shall be included in the by-laws and be made unalterable without the Registrar's sanction.

		PRIMARY SOCIETIES—contd. EMPLOYMENT OF CAPITAL—contd. Loans to Members—contd.
10	80	Punctuality in repayment vital. The system of accounts should show clearly what loans have been extended and which have become overdue. Extensions for good reasons justifiable. System for showing overdues outlined. ( Paragraph 74. )	This Government agrees, but does not recommend an additional return to show overdue loans. In this Province every bank has a separate ledger for each member, and in the ledger the period of repayment for each loan is noted as well as the date of actual repayment, and it is not therefore difficult to ascertain the amount overdue.
		The Reserve Fund.
11	88	Primary societies should be allowed to use their reserve funds in their own business, provided their ability to repay deposits on due date is secured. ( Paragraph 83. )	This Government differs from the Committee, and thinks that permission for primary societies to use their reserve funds in their own business will unduly impair their ability to repay deposits on the due date. Having given due weight to the arguments that depositors in primary societies being in close touch with agricultural affairs can frequently be induced to agree to temporary renewals of deposits, and that by utilizing their surplus profits in their own business primary societies will more speedily build up their own capital sufficient for their needs, the Governor in Council prefers that the reserve funds of primary societies should be invested through central banks in a readily realizable form and as far as possible outside the co-operative movement.
12	89	To ensure the reserve fund growing as quickly as possible, the margin of interest should be kept as high as possible until a society becomes independent of outside assistance. ( Paragraph 84. )	This Government agrees.
		AUDIT AND SUPERVISION.
13	94	Constant audit and supervision is essential to success, and should be provided for. ( Paragraph 88. )	This Government agrees.
14	95	The term auditor and its derivatives should be confined to the staff chiefly engaged in audit, and the term supervisor and its derivatives to the staff chiefly engaged in supervision. The terms "inspection" and "enquiry" should be confined to the processes mentioned in sections 35 and 36 of the Act. ( Paragraph 89. )	This Government agrees.

PRIMARY SOCIETIES—contd. AUDIT AND SUPERVISION—contd.
15	9	Two controlling officers should be employed in each Province, and there should be a Registrar or Joint Registrar for every 1,000 or fraction of 1,000 societies registered. They should be well versed in co-operative literature relating to all countries, and should, if possible, have gained some personal experience of the subject in Europe. Necessary assistance should be given, but Assistant Collectors seconded for training not to be looked on as assistants. ( Paragraph 90. )	The opinion of this Government has been reported in Revenue Department letter No. 1607 T.—R., dated 13th October 1915. The Governor in Council is not at present ready to accept the view that a Registrar or Joint Registrar is required for every 1,000 societies, but is inclined to think that when the number of societies has further increased there may be need for a Joint or Assistant Registrar for each of the five Divisions of the Presidency. For the present the Governor in Council considers it desirable to create a temporary appointment of Joint Registrar for the double purpose of providing the requisite superior supervision and of training an officer to take the place of the Registrar. The Governor in Council regards experience in Europe as valuable but not essential.
16	97	The clerical staff of the Registrar and his assistants should be adequate. ( Paragraph 90. )	This Government agrees.
17	98	The audit should go beyond the bare requirements of the Act, and include an enquiry into all the circumstances which determine the general position of a society. ( Paragraph 91. )	This Government agrees.
18	99	The audit staff should be responsible to the Registrar and mainly controlled by him. Its primary object should be to assure Government that the societies started through its agency are developing on sound lines. ( Paragraph 92. )	This Government agrees.
19	100	A staff should be maintained by Government for undertaking super-audit, i.e., a separate and complete audit made at periods of two years or more. A Government auditor should audit about 100 societies per year, and should not be given educational or propagandist work to do. Recess and variety of work, however, are essential to prevent staleness. ( Paragraph 93. )	This Government agrees that Government should maintain a staff for undertaking super-audit. By a "complete audit made at intervals of two years or more" it is understood that on the occasion of his periodical audit the super-auditor will make a complete audit of the accounts of one year only. This Government agrees with the view expressed in paragraph 93 of the Report, that "super-audit" should consist of a separate and complete audit, and not of the mere testing of a previous audit by a percentage check; and, on the understanding that the periodical super-audit will be the audit of one year's accounts, agrees that a Government auditor could audit about 100 societies in a year. This however will afford full occupation

			throughout the year, and to prevent routine habits and staleness, the Governor in Council thinks that the Government auditors should be partially employed in the work which is technically described as "supervision" and "inspection", and that 80 societies should therefore be the maximum number which a super-auditor should be expected to audit in one year. The Governor in Council therefore doubts whether in the near future it will be desirable to have less than one auditor for every 200 societies: he deprecates however any proposal to prescribe a fixed number: much will depend on the results of the experiment of society-paid auditors, and until such auditors have been appointed everywhere the Government auditors will be required to carry out original annual audits for societies who have not their own auditors.
30	101	A staff should be maintained by the societies themselves for making the original audit. It should be such as the Registrar can rely on, and be controlled by him in consultation with the contributing societies. A single cadre should be formed for a whole Province, and maintained by a levy on the societies or by an enhancement of the interest charged to societies. (Paragraph 94.)	This Government agrees, and prefers a levy on societies to an enhancement on the rate of interest charged to societies.
21	102	Educational qualifications are not at present considered necessary for auditing and supervising staff. (Paragraph 95.)	This Government agrees that it is not desirable to specify minimum educational qualifications for auditing and supervising staff.
22	103	A regular form of audit report should be prescribed; but details should not be too minute. A copy in vernacular should be supplied to every society, and the original should be seen both by the financing agency of the society and the Registrar. (Paragraph 96.)	This Government agrees.
23	104	Government would be justified in contributing to the cost of the audit of societies with unlimited liability among low castes. In ordinary urban societies and in intricate cases Registrar should make special arrangements. (Paragraph 97.)	This Government agrees.

24	105	PRIMARY SOCIETIES— concl'd.  AUDIT AND SUPERVISION— concl'd.	In the opinion of this Government central banks should provide the staff for the supervision of the societies affiliated to them. The degree of control which is exercised by the Registrar over the supervising staff is shown clearly in the Registrar's Circular No. 19 of 1914 on this subject, a copy of which is attached. The system described in this circular is working well, and the Governor in Council does not consider that it would be safe under present conditions to relax the control of the Registrar.
		The societies themselves should provide the staff required for their own supervision. It should be controlled by them and not by the Registrar. ( Paragraph 98. )
25	107	CENTRAL BANKS.	This Government accepts the principles of this recommendation, but in view of the fact that the policy followed in Bengal is to create a central bank in each subdivision in which there are sufficient societies, the Governor in Council does not expect a rapid growth of unions.
		The decentralization of supervisory work secured by unions employing their own paid Secretary is very valuable. The system of guaranteeing unions employed in Burma as a link between primary societies and central banks is full of promise and should be tried elsewhere. Such unions should supply mutual supervision, assessment of credit, an agency for the recovery of loans and some form of joint guarantee for loans taken through them. ( Paragraph 101. )
26	108	It is advisable that primary societies should seek loans and cash credits not from joint stock banks but from central banks, which should be under co-operative control. ( Paragraph 102. )	This Government agrees.
27	109	CONSTITUTION AND MANAGEMENT.	This Government agrees.
		Central banks of which the shareholders are individuals should not be registered if they propose to grant loans to any other persons or institutions except to co-operative societies, or to undertake any outside banking business. The bye-laws should include provisions limiting dividends, and the directors should maintain an independent staff for assessing the credit of borrowing societies. It is the Registrar's duty to see that the contract between the central banks and societies is not unfavourable to the latter. In any case, this type of central bank should gradually disappear. ( Paragraph 105. )
28	110	Central banks of which membership is confined to societies, though desirable in themselves, are seldom competently managed and do not leave room for the help of the middle classes, and should therefore be postponed to a later stage. ( Paragraph 106. )	This Government agrees generally. There are however six such central banks in Bengal, and they are efficiently managed.

CENTRAL BANKS—contd.
CONSTITUTION AND MANAGEMENT—concl'd.
29	111	Central banks of which the membership includes both individuals and societies will usually be best fitted to Indian conditions, but provision should be made for gradually reducing the number of non-working individual shareholders. ( Paragraph 107. )	This Government agrees.
30	112	The area served by a central bank should be defined, and, as far as possible, should coincide with some administrative division, such as a district or tahsil, but should ordinarily be prepared within a reasonable time to deal with 200 or 250 societies. ( Paragraph 108. )	This Government agrees.
31	113	Provincial banks may possibly open local branches in places of independent central banks in areas where guaranteeing unions are well developed, but as a rule a system of central banks will be found more efficient. ( Paragraph 109. )	This Government agrees.
32	114	The management of co-operative finance being simpler than that of joint stock banks, a central bank may be competently managed by lawyers and professional men, though trained bankers should be secured on the Board when available. ( Paragraph 110. )	This Government agrees.
33	115	The manager and staff of a central bank, if paid, should be adequately paid. The Registrar should be satisfied that the supervising staff maintained by it is adequate and efficient. Such a staff may properly assist voluntary applicants in forming new societies. ( Paragraph 111. )	This Government agrees, and considers that to secure the conditions as regards staff the degree of control described in the remarks on Recommendation No. 105 is essential.
34	116	Central banks which admit societies as shareholders should grant no loan to any credit society which has not subscribed to a share. ( Paragraph 112. )	This Government agrees.
35	117	Non-credit societies should only receive loans if they subscribe to an adequate number of shares and offer sufficient security. Central banks should not finance insurance societies. ( Paragraph 112. )	This Government agrees.
36	118	There is no objection to central banks working as book banks, provided that they are exempt from undue responsibility for losses incurred in transit of funds. ( Paragraph 113. )	This Government agrees.

Serial No.	No of Recommendation.	Committee's Recommendations.	Views of Government.
		CENTRAL BANKS—contd. COMPOSITION OF CAPITAL.
37	119	There is no objection to the discontinuation on the part of the central banks of the practice of levying affiliation fees. ( Paragraph 115. )	This Government agrees, but would leave this to the discretion of central banks.
38	120	Shares. All shares in a central bank should preferably be on one footing. But if it is absolutely necessary in order to attract local capital, the shares assigned to individuals may carry preference as regards dividend but not cumulative dividend. ( Paragraph 117. )	This Government agrees.
39	121	It is simpler if the shares held by societies and individuals are of uniform value. ( Paragraph 118. )	This Government agrees.
40	122	Societies should ordinarily be required to take shares in their central banks in proportion to the amount of their borrowings from it. ( Paragraph 119. )	This Government agrees.
41	123	Every shareholder in a central bank should have one vote only. If there is a difficulty in raising capital, Local Governments may properly authorize individuals to hold shares in excess of the statutory maximum of Rs. 1,000, but otherwise the limit fixed by the Act should be adhered to. ( Paragraph 120. )	This Government agrees. In Bengal the statutory maximum has been raised to Rs. 5,000.
42	124	All shares held by individuals should be fully paid up. Reserve liability is permissible in the case of shares held by societies. ( Paragraph 121. )	This Government agrees in principle, though experience in Bengal has not been unfavourable to reserve liability for individuals.
43	125	Reserve liability should be restricted to the face value of the shares, and not to some multiple of it. ( Paragraph 122. )	This Government agrees.
44	126	The rate of dividend should be limited by rule. When most of the shares are held by societies, the maximum should be the same as the average lending rate. When the shareholders are chiefly individuals it should not exceed the average rate paid on deposits by more than 2 or 3 per cent. Bonuses should be prohibited. ( Paragraph 123. )	This Government agrees that the rate of dividend should be limited by rule and that bonuses should be prohibited. As regards the maximum rate of dividend (which is now fixed by rule at 12½ per cent. in Bengal), the Governor in Council, while recognizing the necessity of keeping it within reasonable limits, is not prepared to adopt a fixed standard for calculating the maximum, but would leave it to Local Governments to decide by rule from time to time what should be the maximum rate with reference to the circumstances of the Province. In most districts in Bengal there are loan offices in which all the leading men hold shares, and dividends of 50 per cent. are sometimes paid. The Governor in Council anticipates difficulty in attracting adequate capital if the rate of dividend is restricted by a fixed standard.

45	127	Deposits by primary societies in central banks should consist of (1) excess deposits received by them and passed on, and (2) small deposits for short periods. Reserve funds should not be deposited in them. (Paragraph 125.)	This Government agrees subject to the condition that primary societies should be permitted to deposit their reserve funds with central banks for investment in post office savings banks.
46	128	The opening of current accounts is deprecated, but in places where banking facilities do not exist may be permitted. A low rate of interest not exceeding 2 per cent. should be paid on such accounts, and the whole amount so held should be covered by cash or Government paper, irrespective of fluid resources kept to cover other liabilities. (Paragraph 127.)	This Government is not prepared to fix 2 per cent. as the maximum interest on current deposits, or to rule that the whole amount held as current deposits should be covered by fluid resource irrespective of fluid resources kept to cover other liabilities. In Bengal co-operative banks have to compete with the joint stock institutions known as loan offices, which freely accept current deposits and pay interest at from 3 to 4 per cent. The acceptance of current deposits by central banks has had the result of attracting fixed deposits. The Governor in Council therefore would not fix the maximum interest lower than 3½ per cent. He would also, as a result of experience, not insist on more than two-thirds of the amount held as current deposit being covered by fluid resource.
47	129	Savings accounts may be opened on behalf of members and non-members, provided that 75 per cent. of the amount so held is covered by cash or liquid investment, that the maximum accepted on one account is small, that notice of withdrawal is required, and that they are not allowed to become current accounts. (Paragraph 128.)	This Government agrees.
48	130	Central banks should make every effort to obtain deposits sufficient to meet all their needs, and may draw them from any area subject to such restrictions as may be found locally advisable. (Paragraph 129.)	In the opinion of this Government restrictions as to the area from which deposits may be drawn should be the rule and not the exception: the liability of outside depositors to panics makes restriction necessary.
49	131	The average period of deposits should not be less than the average period in which loans are repayable. In arranging to repay deposits, banks should not count on renewals or fresh deposits, but rely on stipulated repayments of loans, and should spread receipts and payments as far as possible over the whole year. (Paragraph 130.)	This Government accepts the principles of this recommendation, but they constitute an ideal which cannot always be attained. Loans are necessarily repaid chiefly at the time of the principal harvests, and this fact renders it impossible to spread receipts and payments evenly throughout the year.
50	132	To meet all charges entailed by our recommendations, central banks require a 3 per cent margin, and primary societies the same. (Paragraph 131.)	This Government agrees.

		CENTRAL BANKS—contd. COMPOSITION OF CAPITAL—contd. Deposits—concl'd.
51	133	Special care should be taken to repay deposits punctually. The intentions of depositors with regard to renewals should be ascertained in advance. ( Paragraph 132. )	This Government agrees.
		Loans to Central Banks.
52	134	Central banks should be allowed to regard the undrawn portion of any cash credit granted to them by a presidency bank as a fluid asset. ( Paragraph 134. )	This Government agrees.
53	135	Cash credits with joint stock banks of recognized stability also constitute legitimate fluid resource. The Registrar should introduce central banks to joint stock banks and furnish the latter with any information they require. Joint stock banks should be expected to examine the position for themselves and not to rely on Government support for repayment. ( Paragraph 135. )	This Government agrees with the recommendation, which is in accordance with the practice in force in Bengal.
54	136	Loans by central banks may with the Registrar's sanction be made to other central banks. Loans between central banks should cease as soon as a provincial bank is started. ( Paragraph 136. )	This Government agrees with the recommendation subject to the substitution of the words "be discouraged" for "cease."
55	137	Banks should raise capital by means of long-term deposits rather than debentures, unless in very special cases they are in a position to secure debentures on immovable property. ( Paragraph 137. )	This Government agrees.
		Proportion of Capital owned by Central Banks.
56	138	Share capital plus reserves should be at least 12½ per cent. of total liabilities. ( Paragraph 138. )	This Government is not at present prepared to insist on a higher proportion than 10 per cent.
		EMPLOYMENT OF CAPITAL.
		Loans to Affiliated Societies.
57	139	Central Banks should not grant loans to individuals, nor should they undertake any outside banking work. ( Paragraph 139. )	This Government agrees.

		CENTRAL BANKS—contd.
		EMPLOYMENT OF CAPITAL—contd.
		Loans to Affiliated Societies—contd.
58	140	A central bank should assess the credit of an affiliated society after re-examining and testing either by its own staff or through a union the society's own estimate of its borrowing power and the data on which the society has fixed the normal credit of its members and considering the society's needs and its own existing funds. ( Paragraph 140. )	This Government agrees.
59	141	The data required by a central bank should include a valuation of (1) the movable and immovable property of the members of a borrowing society, and (2) the earning and saving capacity of the same members. These data should be used to check conclusions based on the character of the society and on its past record. ( Paragraph 141. )	This Government agrees, with the exception that it does not appear to be practicable to prepare a statement of the earning and saving capacity of each member.
60	142	Where a union exists, the valuation mentioned above should be made by it; where not, by the central bank. Responsibility for the making of the valuation should be undivided. The Registrar should have power to require the reduction of the credit of any society. ( Paragraph 143. )	This Government agrees.
61	143	Loans should be sanctioned as far as possible all together at one or two main seasons of the year. ( Paragraph 144. )	This Government agrees.
62	144	Central banks should accept the opinions of unions with regard to the purpose and amounts of loans, but in case of insufficiency of funds to meet all claims may refer back to the union. ( Paragraph 145. )	This Government agrees.
63	145	Subject to the condition that the terms of loans must depend on the terms for which deposits are held and that repayments due within a given period should exceed the deposits falling due within the same period, central banks may grant loans either recoverable in fixed instalments or on promissory notes nominally payable on demand, the society's repayments corresponding with the repayments made by members. ( Paragraph 146. )	This Government agrees.
64	146	Cash credits should be freely opened in favour of thoroughly well-managed societies. ( Paragraph 147. )	This Government agrees.
65	147	The security taken from a borrowing society should ordinarily be a promissory note. Shares held by societies in central banks should not be accepted as security for a loan, though deposits may be. ( Paragraph 148. )	This Government agrees.

66	148	Rates charged on loans should be below basar rates, but should be high enough to allow of a wide margin. Rates may vary on a definite system with reference to the character of the borrowing society and the length of the loan. (Paragraph 149)	This Government agrees that rates should be below basar rates, but high enough to allow of a wide margin, but in view of the opportunities for favouritism afforded by varying rates of interest the Governor in Council prefers a uniform rate
67	149	Money recovered from members should be at once available for repayment by a society to a central bank. The central bank should supervise recoveries, but need not prepare lists of overdue loans. (Paragraph 150)	This Government agrees.
68	150	Central banks should not ordinarily institute proceedings against defaulting societies in civil courts, but should exercise pressure through their staff and finally apply to the Registrar to take action under section 36 of the Act. (Paragraph 151.)	This Government agrees.
Reserve Fund
69	151	After providing fully for fluid resources a central bank may legitimately use balance, if any, of reserve fund in its own business. (Paragraph 152)	This Government agrees
70	152	To meet contraction of credit central banks must keep fluid resources. (Paragraph 153)	This Government, while fully realizing the necessity for keeping adequate fluid resources, considers that the standard proposed by the Committee is unduly high in the case of banks with small capital. The two principal classes of depositors in central banks are (1) well-to-do investors who have put in their money as a permanent investment and (2) local depositors who are in close touch with agricultural affairs and for that reason are not liable to panic. In these circumstances renewals are generally obtained without difficulty and fortified by the experience of the year 1914, when the co-operative societies in Bengal withstood successfully the effect of the crisis in the jute trade, the Governor in Council would restrict the application of the standard proposed by the Committee to banks with a working capital of 4 lakhs and over, and for banks with less than 4 lakhs working capital he would prescribe that the object to be aimed at should be to maintain fluid resources equivalent to one-fourth of the deposits due during the ensuing year, but he would not insist rigidly on this standard in the cases of societies which have not yet had time to build up fluid resources from their reserve funds.
71	153	There should be sufficient to meet half deposits due during the ensuing year, supposing no fresh deposits or renewals were made and no repayments received. (Paragraph 154)

73	155	The fluid resources of a bank must suffice to meet its own requirements and those of societies which have entered into arrangements with it. ( Paragraph 157. )	Subject to the acceptance of the views of this Government on Recommendation No. 88, the Governor in Council accepts this recommendation.

		Division of Profits.
76	158	In calculating net profits for purposes of distribution, central banks should always deduct interest accrued and overdue. Interest earned but not due should be shown separately in the profit and loss account. ( Paragraph 160. )	The Registrar has expressed his opinion in the following terms:— " At present interest earned but not paid, including interest overdue, is taken into account in calculating the profits of a bank, in accordance with the practice followed by all the joint stock banks. At first sight this may appear to be an unsound policy, because the profit made by a central bank is derived from interest realized from affiliated societies, and to take into account unrealized interest in the calculation of profits would mean the payment of dividend out of the capital; but a little consideration will show that the policy is not unsound; for if a loan is good its interest is necessarily good; and if an unrealized loan is taken into account as an asset, there is no reason why unrealized interest should not be taken into account. At the time of audit and compilation of balance sheets the outstanding loans should be valued carefully, and while all bad loans, including the interest due on them, should be excluded, it is not unsound to take into consideration good loans together with interest earned. It may be noted here that in preparing balance sheets we must take into account interest which has been due to the depositors or payable by the central bank, for if this is not taken into account it will mean that the position of the bank has not been disclosed properly. If we must take into account interest payable by the central bank, it will be placed under a disadvantage if interest due to it is not taken into account. Another fact to be taken into consideration is that the dividend is limited by rule in the case of central banks. If in any year there

PROVINCIAL BANKS. The Present Position.
81	164	It is necessary that a provincial bank should be started in each of the major Provinces. (Paragraph 166.)	This Government agrees, but in view of the present financial conditions does not consider this to be an opportune time for inaugurating a provincial bank.
Future Requirements.
82	165	The provincial banks should not be started on an extravagant or unnecessarily large scale. (Paragraph 169.)	This Government agrees, but points out that although it has been found possible to start provincial banks on a small scale at Jubbulpore and Bankipore, to do so in Calcutta will be a different question, as it is doubtful whether commercial men of high standing will take a leading part in the promotion of a bank if it is not started on a large scale.
83	166	Capital plus surplus assets fund should not be less than one-tenth of total funds borrowed from outside. (Paragraph 169.)	This Government agrees.
84	167	Societies and central banks should be represented in the management of a provincial bank, and should be placed in such a position that they are able within a reasonable time to secure a majority of votes in the general meeting. At commencement individual shareholders may have a preponderating influence. (Paragraph 170.)	This Government agrees.
85	168	It is not, however, necessary that societies and central banks should have a dominating voice on the directorate of the provincial bank. (Paragraph 171.)	This Government agrees.
86	169	Shares should ordinarily be of one class. Reserve liability not advisable on individual shares, but unobjectionable on society's shares. (Paragraph 172.)	This Government agrees.
87	170	All central banks should be affiliated to provincial banks, but where there is no central bank, a provincial bank may lend direct to primaries. (Paragraph 173.)	This Government agrees.
88	171	Deposits fixed for longest possible terms should be secured. (Paragraph 174.)	This Government agrees.
89	172	Deposits at call should be covered to 75 per cent. of their amount by fluid resources. (Paragraph 174.)	In the opinion of this Government the amount of fluid resources to be provided against deposits at call should be determined by the Board of Directors, who will be business men.

90	173	No prohibition should be placed on savings deposit accounts. ( Paragraph 174. )	This Government agrees.
91	174	Provincial banks should not place too much reliance on cash credits, and should strive to accumulate good reserves and strong holdings of liquid securities in order to be more independent. ( Paragraph 175. )	This Government agrees, but unless the provincial bank is started on a sufficiently large scale it is doubtful whether it will be possible for it to accumulate within a reasonable time good reserves and strong holdings of liquid securities, and for the first few years it will have to depend on backing in the form of cash credits from the Bank of Bengal or Government.
92	175	The provincial bank should maintain a fluid resource sufficient to cover all possible demands against itself for a period of one-third of the ensuing year, together with all the possible liabilities to be met by any central bank for which it has undertaken to provide cover within the same period. For this service to central banks it should charge a commission or higher rate of interest. It will be found convenient to concentrate whole fluid resource at apex of system. ( Paragraph 176 )	This Government agrees that it is desirable to concentrate fluid resource at the apex of the system, but would like the Board of Directors to determine the amount of the fluid resource necessary.
93	176	Provincial banks should be prohibited from undertaking outside banking business except in so far as it is necessary to deposit spare funds for short periods in outside institutions. ( Paragraph 177 )	This Government agrees.
94	177	A provincial bank may legitimately be reluctant to lend its superfluous funds to another provincial bank, unless the borrowing bank has sufficiently proved its credit worthiness, and the lending bank is able itself to examine and verify the financial position of the borrower. ( Paragraph 178 )	This Government agrees.
95	178	A separate audit of the accounts by a Chartered or Incorporated Accountant authorized by the Registrar is desirable. The whole expense of it should be borne by the bank. Further duties of supervision and inquiry appertain to Registrar, and costs debitable to Government. ( Paragraph 179. )	This Government agrees.

Concessions.
96	180	When Sub-Registrars of Deeds are paid by fees, Government should make good to them loss caused by the exemption of co-operative societies from registration fees. ( Paragraph 181. )	This Government does not consider the proposed concession to be necessary in Bengal, as there are very few Sub-Registrars who are paid by commission, and shortly there will be none.
97	181	Exemption from stamp duty on cheques of individual members having current accounts unnecessary. ( Paragraph 181. )	This Government agrees.
Government Servants and District Officers.
98	182	Provided undue official influence is guarded against, co-operation ought not to be deprived of moral and financial support which Government servants give it. ( Paragraph 184. )	This Government agrees subject to the opinion given on Recommendation 183.
99	183	Deposits by Government officers in provincial banks should be absolutely unrestricted and in central banks also, the exception that in the district which officers of the Indian Civil Service are serving they should be reported and withdrawn when opportunity offers. ( Paragraph 185. )	Under the Government Servant's Conduct Rules (Rule XII), it rests with the Local Government to relax the existing prohibitions. This Government does not at present propose to take any action in that direction, but realizes that when a provincial bank is established the question will require reconsideration so far as that bank is concerned.
100	184	Membership of non-agricultural societies intended for Government servants only should be free to all Government servants. ( Paragraph 186. )	This Government agrees.
101	185	As regards other officers it is a matter for local decision, but with the exception suggested in paragraphs 186 and 187, officers of the Indian Civil Service, Provincial Civil Service, and Subordinate Civil Service should be prohibited from accepting without special sanction any post in the Managing Committee or Executive Staff of any co-operative society or bank. ( Paragraph 187. )	This Government agrees, subject to the condition that when the Local Government has given its consent to an officer holding a post in a society, it should not be necessary for that officer's successor to hold the same post.
102	186	Devolution of powers of Registrar on District Officers not recommended. ( Paragraph 189. )	This Government agrees with the Committee on Co-operation and with the District Administration Committee in recognizing the danger of allowing societies to be so exclusively under departmental supervision as to place them outside the sphere of the District Officer's duties. The subject was discussed at length at the Provincial Conference of Co-operative Societies held in February 1915, on which occasion it was noted that the recent tendency had been for District and Subdivisional Officers to take a more prominent part in the co-operative movement both by unofficial support and by official inspections under section 17 (5) of the Act, and that the Registrar had under that section, authorized all Subdivisional Officers to inspect under that section.

OFFICE OF THE REGISTRAR OF CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES.
BENGAL.

CIRCULAR NO. 19.

No paid official shall be employed to inspect co-operative societies unless he holds a licence in the accompanying form from the Registrar authorising him under section 17 (3) of the Co-operative Societies Act, II of 1912, to inspect co-operative societies.

The licence will be renewed annually.

At the beginning of every calendar year (i.e., in January) central banks should apply for licences for the inspecting officers employed under their control.

The licence will not be granted unless the Registrar is satisfied that the officer has received a proper training and is qualified to inspect co-operative societies.

When a central bank wishes to appoint a paid officer it should first apply to the Registrar for the services of a trained man. If no trained man is available, the central bank will select a suitable candidate on probation for six months in consultation with the Registrar.

The Registrar will then arrange for his training in audit, inspection and organisation work; but till he is not furnished with a licence he should not be drafted off to independent work, and he should not be confirmed before the expiry of his probationary period. At the discretion of the central bank the probationary period may be extended.

If it is found to dispense with the services of a paid officer, the Registrar should be notified. If the Registrar is of opinion that he is not guilty of any serious dereliction of duty but that he should be removed from the service of the central bank under which he is employed, the Registrar will arrange for his transfer under the control of another central bank.

To secure uniformity and to make the service under the co-operative central banks attractive so as to secure a good class of men the pay of the inspecting staff should be fixed according to the following scale:—

Grade I.

Rs. 75—100, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 5

Grade II.

* Rs. 50—75, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 5.

Grade III.

Rs. 30—50, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 4.

Grade IV

Rs. 20—30, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 2.

Rs. 15—20, rising by annual increments of Re. 1.

Officers below Rs. 15 may be appointed under small unions working within a restricted area.

Every central bank should maintain a Provident Fund for all its employes in terms of Circular No. 2 of 1914.

Qualifications and not the actual length of service should determine promotions from a lower to a higher grade, and such promotions should not be sanctioned without the previous approval of the Registrar. In sanctioning the periodical increments the Circle Inspectors should be consulted about the quality of the work of the officer.

In the interests of efficiency of work, transfers of the services of inspecting officers from the control of one central bank to that of another may be arranged for by the Registrar after consultation with the central banks concerned.

Officers working under the control of central banks, whose travelling expenses are paid by this Department, will draw travelling allowance under the Civil Service Regulations. In the case of those officers whose travelling expenses are borne by central banks their allowance need not be regulated according to the Civil Service Regulations. Central banks should draw up proper rules on the subject with reference to the cost of travelling at different seasons of the year in the locality. In framing the rules central banks should be guided by the principle that travelling allowance is not meant to be a source of profit. A fixed travelling allowance should, under no circumstances, be sanctioned.

A register of inspecting officers working under the control of central banks will be maintained in the Registrar's office, and in this register all particulars regarding his qualifications, educational as well as general, together with all remarks about their work made from time to time, will be entered.

The claims of central banks' officers who have done good work will receive special consideration for appointments in this Department.

No. 1925, dated Bangalore, the 30th June 1916.

From—MAJOR T. H. ST. GEORGE TUCKER, I.A., Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Coorg,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (Land Revenue).

I am directed to invite a reference to the Resolution of the Government of India in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture No. 2-C.-155-16, dated the 4th January 1916, on the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India, and to enclose a copy of a letter Des. No. 107, dated the 23rd May 1916, from the Registrar of Co-operative Credit Societies in Coorg together with a copy of his note on the recommendations of the Committee under class (b). I am to state that the Chief Commissioner is in general accord with the views and suggestions expressed by the Registrar.

2. I am to add that the recommendations in class (a) are being considered and a separate communication will, if necessary, be made to the Government of India

Des. No. 107, dated the 23rd May 1916.

From—The Registrar, Co-operative Credit Societies, Coorg,

To—The Commissioner of Coorg.

In acknowledging your endorsement No. 3020, enclosure I, dated 21st January 1916, I have the honour to submit the following report

2. I have tried to deal carefully with all the recommendations and it will be kindly seen that I agree with most of them. The cases, which appear to call for special notice, owing to the exceptional circumstances in Coorg are mentioned below :—

CLASS B

Nos. 100, 101, and 102 Audit Staff.—The Registrar in Coorg has no separate staff for auditing the accounts. He has to do the original, as well as the super-audit himself, which adds considerably to his work and responsibility. The occasional audit by the Controllers and Revenue officials consists merely of checking the cash balance which, although of material help, does not disclose any defects in the management of the society. Nor can any more than this be expected from such agency, which is untrained in co-operative affairs. I do not recommend a change in the present arrangement.

No. 105 Supervising Staff.—Our societies are at present too poor and few in number to be able to entertain a supervising staff. I trust that this recommendation of the Committee will not be insisted upon at present, and would suggest that after three years it may be reconsidered. I fully agree that such a staff is essential as it would materially assist the Societies and the Registrar.

No. 180 Compensation to be paid to Sub-Registrars.—A great deal of work has been added to these low paid officials, for which they receive no remuneration. For this reason there has been, I fear, unnecessary delay in registering of documents.

No. 185 Participation of village officers in the management of societies.—In a few Societies shanbogs are in the committee of co-operative societies. They are, as a rule, of respectable families and have been of material help to those societies. I would encourage as much as possible the participation of village officers in the management of societies. Under the by-laws committee members are prohibited from taking advances and can therefore be no temptation for village officers to accept advances.

Note on the recommendation of the Committee on Co-operation in India.

CLASS B

Recommendations on which the views of Local Governments and Administrations are invited.

Non-credit Societies

No. 8. A central cattle reinsurance society is necessary and Government backing to such an institution is unobjectionable—paragraph 12.

The Coorg system of cattle insurance requires for the present no assistance from Government: such help might encourage carelessness. Nor is a central cattle insurance society required at present. The recommendation of the Committee refers to the Burma system, which is entirely different from Coorg.

No. 12. The Agricultural Department should assist societies for distributing improved seed and implements provided experimenting is avoided. Control of such societies to rest for some time with Registrar and not with Director of Agriculture—paragraph 13.

I agree.

Credit Societies, non-agricultural.

No 18. Societies among the poorer urban classes need special encouragement. Government help in the maintenance of an efficient clerical staff is justifiable—paragraph 19.

The majority of the poor castes are coolies on coffee estates who remain in the district for only 5 to 7 months in the year and who are, as a rule, well looked after by their employers. The others are too few in number and too much scattered for co-operative purposes.

Primary Societies. Constitution and Management.

No. 50. A limit should be fixed to the borrowing power of a society by the general meeting once a year in the manner described in paragraph 141-2 and this should be subject to Registrar's control—paragraph 52

All loans taken by our societies are subject to the approval of the Registrar

No 51 Deposits which the societies are unable to use in loans to members should be transferred to central banks which should offer specially favourable rates for such money. Societies should not be prohibited from accepting deposits within their maximum borrowing power although in excess of the limit fixed for the local borrowings of individual members. They must however be liable to the depositors and cannot transfer their liability to central banks, however in event of their inability, to accept such deposits should now, primaries. All deposits above their maximum borrowing powers should be refused by societies—paragraph 52

We have no central bank, nor is at present one needed. If society has surplus money lying idle the Registrar arranges to lend it to any other society which may be in temporary need for money.

Primary Societies. Employment of Capital.

No. 58 The maximum borrowing power of a society, i e., the limit upto which the society will pledge its credit should be fixed by the general meeting—paragraph 59.

As we have no central banks, the borrowing powers of a society relating to such does not come under consideration. The maximum loans which any of our societies can accept is, however, not to exceed double the amount of the reserve fund plus the paid up share capital.

No. 59. The maximum normal credit for each member should also be fixed at the general meeting. Loans in excess of this limit should not be granted by the committee without reference to the general meeting—paragraph 59.

This recommendation will be hereafter strictly enforced

No. 67. The period of loans should be fixed at the time when they are sanctioned. Loans for non-productive purposes should be for periods not exceeding two years. For productive loans the main factor should be the object of the loan and standards based on this should be prescribed; but the amount of the loan and the circumstances and repaying power of the debtor may also be taken into account—paragraph 64.

This procedure is already in force.

No. 78. Interest rates charged on loans should be included in the by-laws and made unalterable without the Registrar's sanction. As long as they are below those of the outside markets, they should not be pitched so low as to retard the growth of the reserve fund—paragraph 72.

This procedure is in force

No. 80. *Punctuality in repayment vital. The system of accounts should show clearly what loans have been extended and which have become overdue. Extensions for good reasons justifiable. System for showing overdues outlined—*paragraph 74.

Our business procedure is already based on the recommendation of this paragraph; accounts also show clearly what amount is due for the loan and how much is due for the interest.

No. 88. *Primary societies should be allowed to use their reserve funds in their own business, provided their ability to repay deposits on due date is secured—*paragraph 83.

Up to now the reserve fund was invested in Government paper, and this recommendation to utilize it in the business of the societies has been much welcomed at the last co-operative conference (vide paragraph 83, page 3 of the enclosure).

No. 89. *To ensure the reserve fund growing as quickly as possible the margin of interest should be kept as high as possible until a society becomes independent of outside assistance—*paragraph 84.

The interest for all our societies is  $12\frac{1}{2}$  per cent which will be maintained until the reserve fund makes the societies independent of outside assistance.

Primary Societies, Audit and Supervision.

No. 94. *Constant audit and supervision is essential to success and should be provided for—*paragraph 88.

Our societies are audited once a year by the Registrar which, from past experience, is considered necessary. The cash balances are also checked occasionally by local Revenue officers.

No. 95. *The term auditor and its derivatives should be confined to the staff chiefly engaged in audit and the term supervisor and its derivatives to the staff chiefly engaged in supervision. The terms "inspection" and "enquiry" should be confined to the processes mentioned in sections 35 and 36 of the Act—*paragraph 89.

The terms audit and supervision as explained in paragraph 89 of the Committee's report will be strictly adhered to.

No. 96. *Two controlling officers should be employed in each province and there should be a Registrar or Joint-Registrar for every 1,000 or fraction of 1,000 societies registered. They should be well versed in co-operative literature relating to all countries and should, if possible, have gained some personal experience of the subject in Europe. Necessary assistance should be given, but Assistant Collectors seconded for training not to be looked on as assistants—*paragraph 90.

This recommendation will not affect Coorg, where for some years to come no whole-time Registrar will be necessary.

No. 97. *The clerical staff of the Registrar and his Assistants should be adequate—*paragraph 90.

For the present one clerk will be sufficient for the Registrar.

No. 98. *The audit should go beyond the bare requirements of the Act and include an enquiry into all the circumstances which determined the general position of a society—*paragraph 91.

Our procedure of audit was practically based on what this recommendation suggests.

No. 99. *The audit staff should be responsible to the Registrar and mainly controlled by him. Its primary object should be to assure Government that the societies started through its agency, are developing on sound lines—*paragraph 92.

We have no audit staff, nor will one be required for a few years to come. The responsibility devolves entirely on the Registrar who does all the auditing.

No. 100. A staff should be maintained by Government for undertaking super-audit, i.e., a separate and complete audit made at periods of two years or more. A Government auditor should audit about 100 societies per year, and should not be given educational or propagandist work to do. Recess and variety of work, however, are essential to prevent staleness—paragraph 93.

The super-audit is done annually as explained above by the Registrar himself who is not a whole-time Registrar. There are too few societies here for the maintenance of a staff for the "original audit" which is made by the Controller of Societies and local Revenue officials. It is not, nor can it be expected to be—of the thoroughness and searching nature—which the super-audit of the Registrar is. And until the societies have grown sufficiently big it seems, is not advisable to alter the present arrangement,—which has answered well in the past.

No. 101. A staff should be maintained by the societies themselves for making the original audit. It should be such as the Registrar can rely on and be controlled by him in consultation with the contributing societies. A single cadre should be formed for a whole province and maintained by a levy on the societies, or by an enhancement of the interest charged to societies—paragraph 94.

With all deference to the recommendation I would point out that the societies in Coorg are too few in number to be able to afford to maintain a staff for the original audit. (Vide No. 100 ante).

No. 102. Educational qualifications are not at present considered necessary for auditing and supervising staff—paragraph 95.

I agree.

No. 103. A regular form of audit report should be supplied to every society and the original should be seen both by the financing agency of the society and the Registrar—paragraph 96.

A regular form of audit is maintained in province.

No. 104. Government would be justified in contributing to the cost of the audit of societies with unlimited liability among low castes. In ordinary urban societies and in intricate cases Registrar should make special arrangements—paragraph 97.

I agree. For the present there is no necessity for special arrangements. But with the expansion of cattle insurance, such arrangements might become necessary.

No. 105. The societies themselves should provide the staff required for their own supervision. It should be controlled by them and not by the Registrar—paragraph 98.

For the present it seems not advisable to have a supervisor for the small province. I anticipate, however, that after about 5 years it will be necessary to have a supervisor who would be paid by the societies, which by then will be in a position to pay him his salary.

Recommendations 107—162 and 164—178 do not affect Coorg as we have no central banks, nor provincial banks.

Public Aid.

No. 180. When Sub-Registrars of deeds are paid by fees, Government should make good to them loss caused by the exemption of co-operative societies from Registration fees—paragraph 181.

I am very glad of the recommendation in paragraph 181(a) to compensate the Sub-Registrars for the loss occasioned by the exemption of co-operative societies from registration fees. These low paid officials were naturally not over-zealous in disposing the registration of documents relating to co-operative societies.

No. 181. Exemption from stamp duty on cheques of individual members having current accounts unnecessary—paragraph 181.

The exemption from stamp duty on cheques does not affect our societies, as it has never been made use of.

No. 182. Provided undue official influence is guarded against, co-operation ought not to be deprived of moral and financial support which Government servants give it—paragraph 184.

I agree.

No. 183. Deposits by Government officers in provincial banks should be absolutely unrestricted and in central banks also with the exception that in the district in which officers of the Indian Civil Service are serving they should be reported and withdrawn when opportunity offers—paragraph 185.

This does not affect Coorg, where there are no central banks.

No. 184. Membership of non-agricultural societies intended for Government servants only should be free to all Government servants—paragraph 186.

This does not affect Coorg as there are no non-agricultural societies here.

No. 185. As regards other officers it is a matter for local decision but with the exception suggested in paragraphs 186 and 190, officers of the Indian Civil Service, Provincial Civil Service and subordinate Civil Service should be prohibited from accepting without special sanction any post in the managing committee of executive staff of any co-operative society or bank.

In a few of our societies village officers have been of material help in the management of their societies.

No. 186. Devolution of powers of Registrar or District officers not recommended—paragraph 189.

I agree; I welcomed all times the interest taken by local officers in the co-operative movement and have always been very glad, if they were present at meetings.

No. 187. District or Sub-Divisional officers may be chairmen with or without a place in executive committee of central banks but should not be given such a post ex-officio. They should, however, have a formal right to attend meetings of shareholders or directors and Local Governments may decide how best to arrange for this—paragraph 190.

This does not affect Coorg as there are no central banks here.

No. 194. Registrar of Co-operation, Director of Agriculture, Director of Industries and Director of Fisheries (when that post is concerned with development of the industry) should all be co-ordinated under a single superior authority—paragraph 193.

This does not affect Coorg.

No. 195. That superior authority should, as soon as circumstances allow, be a whole-time officer and be called the Development Commissioner—paragraph 199.

This does not affect Coorg.

No. 196. Local Government should issue a rule empowering Registrars to rescind any resolution or act of any officer, committee or society which deals with controversial opinions of a political or religious character. Positive objects of societies might be defined by rule on lines obtaining in Raiffeisen Societies—paragraph 201.

No such necessity has arisen as yet, but I consider that such powers should be given to the Registrar as a safeguard.

No. 197. An expert co-operative adviser with the Government of India recommended—paragraphs 202-203.

An expert co-operative adviser will be of immense assistance to Registrars, especially to those who are newly appointed and inexperienced.

GUSTAV HALLER,

Registrar, Co-operative Credit Societies.

21st May 1916.

No. 1788—1397, dated Abu, the 3rd July 1916.

From—The HON'BLE SIR ELLIOT GRAHAM COLVIN, K C.S.I., Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

With reference to the Resolution of the Government of India in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture, No. 2-C-155-16 of the 4th January 1916, I have the honour to forward a note, embodying my views on the several recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation in India, mentioned in clause (b) of the Appendix to the Resolution.

NOTE.

Recommendation No. 8 in paragraph 12 of the Report.

The Commissioner is of opinion that the frequent migration of agriculturists with their cattle in years of scanty rainfall would make any Cattle Insurance Scheme difficult to work in Ajmer-Merwara.

I would, however, by no means despair of introducing a Cattle Insurance Scheme for plough bullocks and buffaloes in course of time. The agriculturists of Ajmer-Merwara have yet a great deal to learn about co-operation, and though they are not sufficiently advanced in their knowledge of the system to undertake this development yet, I have every hope that the idea will eventually materialise. The fact that the district is liable to shortage of rainfall seems to be a reason in favour of such a measure rather than against it; but probably the best means of insuring the lives of the cattle which are essential for productive purposes would be the co-operation of owners in forming the necessary reserves of grass and fodder. It is too soon to work out details yet, but the combination of such a scheme with the cattle insurance movement is likely to prove advantageous.

Recommendation No. 12 in paragraph 13 of the Report.

The absence of an Agricultural Department in Ajmer-Merwara precludes the local adoption of this recommendation. Some endeavour can, however, be made to take action in the desired direction by attempting to procure as Extra Assistant Commissioner in charge of the Co-operative Movement in the district on future occasions a man who has undergone a course of training at Lyalpur or some similar institution. There is also a model farm in one of the leading Istimrari estates in the district, and the officer in charge of co-operation will be instructed to watch its development and to bring to the notice of Societies any experiments which have proved successful.

With the permission of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, the Agricultural Adviser, Punjab, will also be asked to supply this Administration with copies of any suggestions he may make for the assistance of Societies in the Punjab.

Recommendation No. 18 in paragraph 19 of the Report.

No Societies for the poorer urban classes exist in Ajmer-Merwara at the present time, but the modest proposal made by the Committee in regard to Government support for their clerical staff appears to be worthy of adoption.

Recommendation No. 50 in paragraph 52 of the Report.

I agree with this recommendation and it is already being acted upon in Ajmer-Merwara. A haisyat register is maintained in which the property, land, and cattle of the members are entered and are valued at certain rates, and to the extent of one-third of such total assets, credit is given to Rural Societies. Thus the borrowing power of the Societies is fixed.

Recommendations Nos. 58 and 59 in paragraph 59 of the Report.

I agree.

Recommendation No. 67 in paragraph 64 of the Report.

The rigid rule here proposed in regard to compulsory annual instalments does not appear to be quite consistent with the "caveat" mentioned in paragraph 5 at page xiii of the Committee's Abstract Report. I agree with every word written in the last mentioned paragraph. The agricultural cycle in Ajmer-Merwara is a long one, and may perhaps be taken as one bad, three indifferent, and one good year. It is obvious that loans in such a country must be frequently given for fairly long periods and that long-term loans must be so arranged that the principal burden of repayment shall fall on the good year.

Recommendation No. 80 in paragraph 74 of the Report.

I consider that the principles stated in paragraph 74 should be rigidly adhered to, no extension being granted except for obviously valid reasons.

Recommendation No. 88 in paragraph 83 of the Report.

I agree, but some machinery seems to be needed to prevent Primary Societies using their Reserve Funds, while their fluid resources are still inadequate.

Recommendation No. 96 in paragraph 90 of the Report.

Ajmer-Merwara suffers from not being under the supervision of a full qualified trained Registrar. It is not likely that the district authorities or the Chief Commissioner will have had any wide experience of the working of Co-operative Credit Societies. In my opinion it would be advantageous if the district could be brought for purposes of supervision of this work under the Registrar, who is one of the nearest portions of the Punjab. Mr. Wilberforce, who has had much to do with the organisation of the Societies in Ajmer-Merwara on their present lines, came from the Punjab and it would be convenient that skilled direction in future should come from the same province.

Recommendation No. 107 in paragraph 101 of the Report.

It is likely to be some time before the Societies in Ajmer-Merwara are sufficiently advanced for the establishment of a system of guaranteeing unions.

Recommendations Nos. 164 to 178 in paragraph 166 to 179 of the Report.

Ajmer-Merwara is too small for a separate Provincial Bank; on the other hand, there are now five Central Banks opened in the district, and it seems that an apex bank of some kind to co-ordinate and control their working will before long be desirable. It is too early yet to say how this matter will develop but meanwhile the operations are not large or complicated enough to necessitate any change of the existing arrangements.

Recommendation No. 195 in paragraph 199 of the Report.

The suggestion of appointing a Development Commissioner seems to be an excellent one but it is of course impracticable for a small area like Ajmer-Merwara.

Recommendation No. 197 in paragraphs 202-203 of the Report.

Should it be possible to adopt the Committee's proposal for the appointment of an expert Co-operative Adviser with the Government of India, he might be moved to give special attention to small areas like Coorg and Ajmer-Merwara, which are unable to support the usual highly trained directing officers.

2. I have no remarks to offer with reference to the other recommendations of the Committee mentioned in clause (b) of the Appendix to the Government of India Resolution No. 2-C-155-16 of the 4th January 1915.

E. G. COLVIN,

Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara.

MOUNT ABU: }
The 3rd July 1916.

No. 684-S. (Revenue), dated Simla, the 13th July 1916.

From—The Hon'ble MR. H. D. CRAIK, I.C.S., offg. Revenue Secretary to Government, Punjab, and its Dependencies,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I am directed to refer to the Government of India (Department of Revenue and Agriculture) Resolution No. 2-C.—155-16, dated 4th January 1916, on the subject of the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India, 1915. In the statement appended to that resolution the Government of India have divided the recommendations and opinions of the Committee, summarized in Appendix III to the report, into four classes, and have invited the views of Local Governments only on those recommendations comprised in class (b).

2. Before, however, examining these recommendations of the Committee in detail the Lieutenant-Governor wishes to be permitted to refer to the general question, raised in paragraphs 216—220 of the report, of the ultimate method of financing the co-operative movement in India. This subject has been reserved by the Government of India for separate action, but it is impossible, His Honour considers, profitably to discuss the recommendations of the Committee with regard to the objects to be attained by co-operative organisations even in their lowest grade unless and until a decision has been arrived at on this all important question.

In paragraph 216 of the report the Committee points out that the close connection of Government with co-operative banks and societies in the way of audit, supervision and control has created the general impression that the finances of these banks and societies are to all intents and purposes backed by the State. Nevertheless the degree of ultimate responsibility attaching to the Government is at present uncertain, though the attitude of Government is stated to be that it disclaims all financial responsibility and makes no definite promise of monetary support. This policy, it is said, is based on a desire to establish a genuine co-operative movement which shall be self-contained and self-supporting and it is with this object that the Committee has made its numerous recommendations for the improved constitution and management of co-operative institutions. In this connection one recommendation in particular stands out as indicating in the clearest manner the methods by which the Committee would endeavour to attain this object. In paragraph 84 it is laid down that "the object of a (primary) society should be to accumulate a Reserve Fund of this character (i.e., in the form of surplus assets) until it obtains a capital of its own sufficient to meet all its needs and thus become independent of outside assistance. Until this stage is reached, the margins on which it works should be as large as is compatible with the successful maintenance of the society, and it is only when this stage is reached that any reductions (other than those essential to meet outside competition) should be effected in the rates of interest charged by the society on its loans to its members."

3. Of the general policy thus outlined the Committee itself supplies one criticism, that "it is in fact extremely doubtful whether the present co-operative banking system, if expected to be self-contained and self-supporting, could provide fluid resources to the extent necessary for safety and stability." It is pointed out that a feature common to every practical system of banking and credit is that the bulk of the funds is invested in loans represented by bills, promissory notes or other convertible or negotiable instrument possessing a marketable value, or covered by the deposit of securities which can at any time be realised in the open market. Co-operative banking, however, is under the special disability that the securities which it holds for its loans, namely, the promissory notes of primary societies, are incapable of being turned into cash in the ordinary markets. It is therefore necessary that there should be some outside agency which can be relied upon to provide facilities for the rediscount of the agricultural paper of primary societies endorsed by co-operative central financing agencies. The Committee has little hope that the functions of this outside agency could ever be undertaken by the joint stock or Presidency banks, and though no definite recommendation is made apparently looks to the establishment of a State co-operative apex bank for the solution of the problem. It will be seen that this conclusion involves the abandonment of both the financial irresponsibility of Government, and the ideal of a self-contained and self-supporting co-operative movement upon the desire for which Government's policy of aloofness is stated to have been based.

4. From this discussion of the general problems of Government's attitude towards the co-operative movement and the ultimate method of financing that movement two questions emerge which, in His Honour's opinion, require examination. First, is the repudiation of all financial responsibility on the part of Government not in fact more dangerous than the assumption of a limited but well-defined degree of responsibility? Secondly, is the object,—viz., the attainment by co-operative societies of a position independent of all outside assistance—an essential characteristic of a true co-operative movement?

5. With regard to the first of these questions His Honour would only reassert what the Committee itself has stated regarding the general impression which exists that co-operative banks and societies are to all intents and purposes backed by the State. Such a general impression cannot be ignored and would in actual fact inevitably compel Government, in the event of a really serious crisis, to shoulder a financial burden which might have been avoided had the exact degree of responsibility assumed by the State been clearly defined and announced from the start. It would be impossible in any case for Government to contemplate with equanimity the serious results to the agricultural community which would result from a general crash in co-operative banking, and it would therefore seem only reasonable that Government should at any rate give a definite though limited guarantee from loss to any financial agency which could be established and could be relied upon to prevent the occurrence of such

6. The second question which has been suggested for examination may possibly be regarded somewhat academic seeing that the Committee has itself admitted (paragraph 217) that the ideal in question—that the co-operative movement should be self-contained and self-supporting—will be extremely difficult to realise. The recommendations of the committee, however, throughout the report aim at attaining this ideal to the highest degree possible. On the other hand in paragraph 2 of the report the Committee states the theory of co-operation to be "very briefly that an isolated and powerless individual can by association with others and by moral development and mutual support obtain in his own degree the material advantages available to wealthy and powerful persons." The material advantage thus to be secured to the isolated and powerless individual varies with the different forms of co-operation, but in the case of an agricultural co-operative credit society it is obviously credit, that is to say, his membership of a society should enable the agriculturist to obtain capital for his needs on the same terms as the wealthy and powerful in the open money market, and the most practical method of securing this end is to establish a connection between the general money market and the poor agriculturist through the chain of primary society, central bank and provincial bank. This aspect of the co-operative movement appears, however, to have been treated by the Committee as of minor importance, as it holds the object of a primary society to be the acquisition of a capital of its own which will be sufficient for all its needs and render it independent of outside assistance. It might be argued that the society which realized this object would no longer be a co-operative credit society, but would have become simply a mutual benefit money-lending institution. His Honour hesitates therefore to accept the Committee's view that the necessity for reliance on an outside agency is a defect in the existing system, and consequently he would not subordinate all other considerations to the aim of making the movement independent and self-contained. In this respect the difference between the position which he would take up and the attitude adopted by the Committee may be clearly seen with reference to some of the particular recommendations of the Committee. One of "the material advantages available to wealthy and powerful persons" is the power to borrow cheaply, and if a member of a co-operative credit society has to continue borrowing at a high rate of interest the system fails to confer on him one of the chief benefits for which it was intended. The line of argument adopted by the Committee in recommendation 78 (paragraph 72) hardly does adequate justice to this point, and though His Honour agrees that the rates of interest to be charged to members should be fixed by bye-law and should be unalterable without the consent of the Registrar, he cannot subscribe to the view that there is positive advantage in maintaining a high rate of interest till a reserve fund is built up which will render the society independent of outside assistance as contemplated in recommendations Nos. 88 and 89.

7. With these general remarks I am now to turn to the particular recommendations on which the views of Local Governments have been invited. The first of these, No. 8, is the question of the financial support which should be given by Government to co-operative cattle insurance. The Committee has pointed out that it is an essential principle of insurance to spread the risk over a considerable area and period. It is, however, equally essential that the primary cattle insurance society should operate in a small area, as only the mutual knowledge of the members can afford an adequate check on dishonesty. A central re-insurance society is therefore necessary, and this in its early years will require some degree of financial assistance: for it cannot hope at once to obtain sufficient capital from its own members to enable it to face the risk of an exceptional and wide-spread mortality among cattle. The Committee accordingly recommends that Government should afford some financial support or a guarantee when re-insurance societies are started. With this recommendation His Honour is in agreement: he would, however, go further than the Committee. The introduction of the experiment of cattle insurance in the Punjab at any rate must necessarily be tentative and confined to selected and probably scattered tracts, and during this tentative stage there could be no prospect of successfully establishing a central re-insurance society. The functions of such a society must therefore in this stage be performed by Government, whose assistance, should, however, be strictly limited and might perhaps take the form of granting a percentage of the minimum benefits payable under any scheme of insurance that may be introduced.

8. In paragraph 13 (recommendation No. 12) the Committee expresses the opinion that it is in the use of credit societies for distributing improved seed and implements and in the general supervision of non-credit societies that the help of the Agricultural Department can most usefully be afforded, and recommends that such help should be given fully and ungrudgingly. With this recommendation His Honour is in cordial agreement, for not only do the societies benefit by such assistance, but in them the Agricultural Department will find the most valuable medium through which its teachings may reach the cultivators whom it is intended to benefit. His Honour, however, agrees with the Committee that though the Agricultural Department is deeply interested in agricultural non-credit societies, the control of such societies should, for the present, remain with the Registrar of Co-operative Societies.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor agrees with the recommendation (No. 18) made in paragraph 19 that grants may suitably be given by Local Governments in support of the clerical staff of urban credit societies for the benefit of poor castes such as weavers, scavengers, etc.

10. Recommendations Nos. 50, 51, 58 and 59, are all concerned with the related questions of the limitation to be imposed on the borrowings of individuals from societies and of societies from central banks. The principles which underlie these recommendations are, His Honour considers, sound and should be accepted throughout. It might be possible to simplify the procedure for limiting the borrowing powers of societies, by providing for consultation between the societies and the central banks, but His Honour recognises that the considerations which must govern central banks in assessing the credit to be allowed to the various societies within their spheres of influence are different from those which will influence the societies in deciding how far they will pledge their credit, and complete agreement between the central banks and the societies would be difficult of attainment.

11. The importance of insisting upon prompt repayment of loans cannot be over-estimated, and His Honour is in complete agreement with recommendations Nos. 67 and 80 in which measures are suggested to ensure it. In a province like the Punjab where the character of the harvests varies so greatly from year to year a considerable degree of elasticity will be necessary in working the rules; allowance will, however, necessarily be made for this factor in fixing the standard maximum periods for loans, and the recommendation of the Committee provides for extension of the period of payment in exceptional cases for good reasons to be recorded.

12. Recommendations Nos. 78, 88 and 89 have already been dealt with in paragraphs a—6 of this letter and do not require further notice.

13. Recommendations Nos. 94—105 deal with the subject of the audit and supervision of primary societies. So far as the superior supervising staff is concerned (recommendations Nos. 96 and 97) the Government of India have already been furnished with the views of this Government in Mr. Thompson's letter No. 3882-S., dated 30th September 1915. It remains to consider the general system of audit and supervision recommended and the subordinate staff required to carry it out.

The general system advocated is described in paragraphs 91—98 of the report. It contemplates an audit intended primarily to satisfy Government that the societies which have been formed through its agency are developing on sound lines. The audit should therefore not be confined to a mere scrutiny of accounts, but should embrace an enquiry into all the circumstances which determine the general position of a society. The staff employed for this work should be entirely under Government control though part of it should be paid for by the societies. Apart from this audit there should also be 'supervision' undertaken by the co-operative institutions themselves. This supervision will cover many of the points already included in the audit, but in addition will involve the duty of instructing the members in co-operative principles and of propagating the movement by the organisation of new societies. The supervising staff would be responsible to have defects revealed by the audit, for testing the knowledge of committee members and for advising with regard to difficulties and disputes. The staff will be employed by the co-operative institutions themselves: it will submit reports to them and will not be under the orders of the Registrar.

14. It is recognised by the Committee itself that this system involves considerable overlapping of work and the Lieutenant-Governor is disposed to think that the implied sharp distinction between audit and supervision is largely a theoretical one which would be to a great extent obliterated in actual practice. It would seem, however, that what has influenced the Committee in advocating this system is the desire that co-operative institutions should, so far as possible, manage their own affairs, provided only that they can satisfy Government that they are working on sound principles. With this desire His Honour is in full sympathy. At the same time the provision of a separate staff to perform duties which could equally well be discharged by the auditing staff, in addition to the functions reserved for it by the Committee, appears to His Honour to be an unnecessary complexity and likely to lead to friction. Unions and central banks will possess very considerable power over primary societies in their ability to cut off supplies from societies which they consider unsatisfactory. It is admitted that the further control comprised in the audit cannot yet be entrusted to them and until this can be done it does not appear logical to provide for a second agency under the control of co-operative institutions reduplicating in part the functions of the Government agency. The Committee itself contemplates the time, still distant, when the entire original audit will pass under the control of the societies themselves and it is development on these lines which should, His Honour considers, be aimed at. As co-operative institutions become capable of being trusted to control their own audit, Government audit can gradually be withdrawn, only the most general powers of supervision being reserved to Government through the Registrar.

15. Meanwhile the Government audit, as has already been noted, is to be carried out by a staff under the control of the Registrar, part of which, however, is to be paid for by the societies. In more detail the recommendations of the Committee are that there should be an annual audit carried out by a staff of "auditors" to be paid for by the co-operative institutions, and a separate complete "super-audit" carried out at longer intervals by a staff of "Government auditors " maintained by Government. The Lieutenant-Governor doubts if the case for a super-audit by a separate and distinct staff has been established. The primary object underlying the Committee's recommendation on the subject is no doubt to encourage from the start a sense of responsibility and a faculty for self-management on the part of primary societies. In itself the object is a laudable and desirable one, but the proposals seem to go a very little way in the direction of securing it. The Committee emphatically assert that all audit must be State controlled, an obviously necessary condition, and consequently the work of both branches of the audit staff will be directly under the control and supervision of the Registrar and his assistants, the functions of the primary societies in this connection being confined to providing the pay of the "original" audit staff together with some voice in their appointment, transfer and dismissal. It seems to His Honour very doubtful whether under such conditions the distinction between "original" and "super" audit will be maintainable in any definite shape or will in any effective way be recognized by the societies themselves. Possibly the Committee's recommendations may provide a sound basis for action in the future when further experience has been acquired, but for the present Sir Michael O'Dwyer would deprecate any immediate new departure on the lines suggested. He would prefer a slight improvement of the existing system, under which the "original" audit and immediate supervision of primary societies will be the duty of Sub-Inspectors while their work will be checked and supplemented by Inspectors and by the Registrar and his assistants. The Inspectors would be paid entirely by Government, the Sub-Inspectors for the present partly by Government and partly by the societies, though the ideal to be kept in view would be that ultimately the societies should defray the whole of the Sub-Inspectors' pay and should pari passu assume control of their appointment, transfer and dismissal while supervision and checking of their work would still remain with the Inspectors.

16. With regard to the nomenclature of the audit staff used by the Committee in recommendation No. 95, His Honour is of opinion that it would be unwise to discriminate between "auditors" and "Government auditors," as all audit will, in fact, be controlled by the State. He also considers that it would be a pity to drop the now familiar designation of Sub-Inspector and Inspector.

17. The recommendations of the Committee with regard to the constitution and management of central and provincial banks (Nos. 107—178) have the Lieutenant-Governor's support throughout except that he is inclined to think that it would be sufficient to require central banks to maintain as fluid resources, apart from the needs of current and savings accounts, a sum sufficient to meet one-third of the fixed deposits repayable during the ensuing year without counting on the receipt of fresh deposits or the repayment of loans.

18. His Honour has no remarks to make with regard to recommendations 180 to 187 and 196 in which he concurs. He has already expressed his views as to Nos. 194, 195 and 197 in Mr. Thompson's letter No. 3882-S., dated 30th September 1915.

No.  $\frac{5450}{11C-12}$  R., dated Ranchi, the 17th July 1916.

From—The HON'BLE MR. H. K. BRISCOE, I.C.S., Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa, Revenue Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I am directed to refer to the Resolution of the Government of India No. 2-C.-155-16, recorded in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture on the 4th January 1916, on the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India, 1915, and to submit the views of the Government of Bihar and Orissa on those recommendations of the Committee on which the opinions of Local Governments have been invited.

2. Items Nos. 8 and 12.—Non-credit Societies.—No scheme of cattle insurance has been adopted in Bihar and Orissa and the question has not advanced beyond the stage of preliminary discussion. As regards the Committee's recommendation in item No. 8 the Lieutenant-Governor in Council agrees that where a central reinsurance society has been established the grant of Government support is unobjectionable in principle. He also accepts the Committee's recommendation No. 12 regarding the conduct and control of societies for distributing improved seed and implements.

3. Item No. 18.—Credit Societies.—Non-Agricultural.—The recommendation of the Committee has the approval of the Local Government.

4. Items Nos. 50 and 51.—Primary Societies.—Constitution and Management.—His Honour in Council agrees generally with the principles recommended by the Committee. A suggestion has been made by the Officiating Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bihar and Orissa, that the sum fixed as the limit of the borrowing power of a society should be inclusive also of the society's reserve fund, when that fund is used as working capital. The question whether such use should ever be permitted is discussed in the next paragraph.

5. Items Nos. 58, 59, 67, 78, 80, 88 and 89.—Primary Societies.—Employment of Capital.—The Lieutenant-Governor in Council approves of the first five recommendations of the Committee. As regards items Nos. 88 and 89 he recognises the weight of the Committee's arguments regarding the use of reserves but he would at the same time invite attention to the following criticism from the Registrar of Co-operative Societies. "The Committee appear rather to confuse the cash reserves with the reserve fund and to assume that, if proper arrangements for fluid resources are made, there is no need for a reserve fund. This ignores the recognized functions of a reserve fund, which are of special importance when no share capital exists. The idea of a reserve fund is that part of the accumulated deposits is set apart outside the business, whatever it be, to provide against possible losses in that business. Even if the Committee see no use in such a separate fund, it has to be remembered that the investing public has been educated to respect and value such a fund, as a guarantee to depositors. As we want the money of the investor, we must humour him even if we think him wrong. This part of the Committee's recommendations has already attracted severe comment in the Press, as it was certain to do, and is likely to do harm to the movement. I have already expressed an opinion in last year's report that a portion of the profit each year, which should not be less than 25 per cent., should be invested outside the movement, and I still adhere to this. This view was accepted at the Bankipore and Cuttack Conferences, and I hope shortly to see it carried into effect."

6. Items Nos. 94 to 105.—Primary Societies.—Audit and Supervision.—I am to invite a reference to Mr. Coupland's letter No. <sup>7034-R.</sup> <sub>11C-77</sub>, dated the 12th October 1915, forwarding a note by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bihar and Orissa, on "the foundation of an Audit Federation for Bihar and Orissa" and to say that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has nothing to add to the recommendations made in that correspondence.

7. Items Nos. 107 to 162.—Central Banks.—His Honour in Council agrees generally with these recommendations subject to the exceptions noted below and to the remark, with regard to items Nos. 114 and 115, that experience in Bihar and Orissa has shown that owing to the increase of work the management of Central Banks cannot be left entirely in the hands of honorary workers. They have undoubtedly given most valuable help in the past but they cannot now be expected to devote the time necessary for efficient management. Well-paid managers are, therefore, being appointed with very satisfactory results.

Item No. 119.—Societies in Bihar and Orissa, on affiliation to a Central Bank, always pay an entrance fee of Rs. 5. In the case of new banks it is reported that these entrance fees are of some assistance towards meeting preliminary expenses. The matter is not an important one and the societies may be left to deal with it themselves.

Item No. 121.—The value of the shares held by individuals in Bihar and Orissa is Rs. 25 and of those held by societies Rs. 10. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council is inclined to agree with the Officiating Registrar that it is unnecessary to aim at the uniformity recommended by the Committee.

Item No. 124.—The Committee's recommendations may be accepted subject to a definite understanding that shares held by individuals need not be fully paid up at the time of subscription. Otherwise the Bank would probably be over-capitalized and by working with a large proportion of share capital, would earn proportionately small profits and only be able to declare a small dividend.

Item No. 125.—The proposed restriction of reserve liability to the face value of the shares may be accepted as regards individuals, in view of the present state of the Hindu law, but not in the case of societies, which throughout Bihar and Orissa, at any rate, have accepted a liability of five times the face value of the shares. They have thus helped greatly to enhance the credit of the Central Banks, as the public knew that this reserve liability was backed by the unlimited liability of the members of the society. Moreover this liability is intended to be the basis in Bihar and Orissa of future guaranteeing unions, the member-societies of which will be liable for the debts of the Central Bank only up to the face value of their shares, but for the debt of any society affiliated to the union up to five times the value of those shares.

Item No. 129.—The Committee's recommendations are generally suitable but the necessity for covering 75 per cent. of all savings deposits by cash or liquid investments appears open to doubt in view of the diversity of conditions in different localities. A hard-and-fast rule might make it unprofitable to some Central Banks to accept such deposits at all.

Item No. 130.—The proposed freedom of Central Banks from territorial restrictions generally in borrowing would be prejudicial to the success of a Provincial Bank, which is entitled to have a first call on deposits not required by the Central Bank of the depositor's district. The Bihar and Orissa Provincial Bank, however, does give permission freely to Central Banks to accept deposits from outside their own districts, whenever circumstances make such a course desirable. It would be unfair if Central Banks, which rely on the Provincial Bank for support, were free to compete with that Bank for deposits all over India, and rivalry might lead to the closing of the Provincial Bank, to the great detriment of the movement.

Items Nos. 130 and 151 to 157.—The Committee's recommendations on the subject of fluid resources are elaborate but not always clear in detail, and have evoked the criticism that it is a mistake to attempt to provide instructions in detail applicable to so wide an area as India, while co-operative banking is in such an undeveloped state. In view of the concession made in paragraph 176 of the Report that Central Banks need not maintain separate fluid resources if the Provincial Bank undertakes to do so for them, most of the recommendations appear to have no application to Bihar and Orissa, and the Lieutenant-Governor in Council considers it unnecessary to discuss them.

I am, however, to forward for the information of the Government of India a copy of a note recorded by Mr. Collins, Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bihar and Orissa, dealing with these items, and also with items Nos. 172 and 175 which concern the chapter on Provincial Banks.

Item No. 146.—The Central Banks in Bihar and Orissa are concerned less with outside financing agencies than with primary societies. These societies do not understand the use of pro notes but are familiar with the use of bonds, which experience shows to be a satisfactory form of security.

Item No. 148.—His Honour in Council is not convinced of the desirability of the proposal to allow different rates of interest to different classes of Societies.

Items Nos. 161 and 162.—As noted above in dealing with recommendations Nos. 94 to 105, the Local Government's proposals regarding audit and supervision have already been submitted to the Government of India with Mr. Coupland's letter No. <sup>7034R</sup>11C-77, dated the 12th October 1915.

8. Items Nos. 164 to 178.—Provincial Banks.—Subject to the following remarks His Honour in Council endorses all the recommendations of the Committee.

The proposal made in item No. 171 that deposits should be procured for the longest possible terms is unsuited to conditions in Bihar and Orissa. It assumes in the first place that all money given out by Central Banks is lent for long terms, whereas the greater portion is recoverable and actually paid within one or two years, and there seems no reason on this account for the Provincial Bank to take a large proportion of long term money, which would necessarily carry a higher rate of interest. The Bihar and Orissa Provincial Bank is at present a small concern which is able to work largely from the cash credit given by the Bank of Bengal. Its relations with this semi-Government institution put it in a very favourable position, and it is not proposed to embark on regular deposit banking until more funds are really needed. At present every effort is being made to attract small deposits and spread them equally over the ensuing two or three years. In acting thus the Registrar is following the best expert advice available to him.

With regard to recommendation No. 174 that Provincial Banks should aim at independence, it is at present out of the question for the Bihar and Orissa Bank to give up its very favourable agreement with the Bank of Bengal.

The objection to the laying down of a hard-and-fast rule mentioned in the case of item No. 129 applies equally in the case of the Committee's recommendation No. 172.

9. Items Nos. 180 to 187 and 196 and 197.—The Lieutenant-Governor in Council is in general accord with all these recommendations of the Committee except that he considers that it is not desirable that the Government of India should place any restriction on deposits in Central Banks by any class of officer. The matter may be left, as at present, to the discretion of Local Governments. As observed in the Committee in paragraph 183 of their Report, all such restrictions have recently been withdrawn in this Province.

10. A separate report will follow in reply to Mr. Gilliat's Circular No. 855—144-21, dated the 30th May 1916, regarding the suggested appointment of a Development Commissioner.

Note on the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation about Deposits, Loans and "Fluid Resource."

As I find that the recommendations of the Committee under this head are based on a patent contradiction, and further as they have misstated the system followed in Bihar and Orissa in order to condemn it, it is necessary for me to try to point out their error, and to describe exactly what the Bihar system is and why it is as sound and safe as any.

2. The Committee's views on this subject will be found in paragraphs 130, 152 to 158 and 174 to 176. In order to facilitate discussion I transcribe some extracts from these portions of the report, which will be found to represent their recommendations.

(1) "It should in our opinion be assumed that it is unsafe for any banking institution to invest its funds in loans for longer periods than those for which the funds so invested are entrusted to it; that deposits must ordinarily be met from repayments of loans and not from potential renewals or fresh deposits (which should be exclusively employed either in fresh business or invested in fluid resources) and that the general body of fluid resource can only be legitimately utilized for the purpose of meeting depositors when there is a derangement of normal conditions." (Paragraph 130.)

(2) "In most cases money lent to societies is, we believe, repaid to central banks after an interval averaging from 3 to 4 years, the loans being repaid in yearly instalments, and where this is so it is sufficient that the deposits for one year should exceed in amount the amount of the loans which remain out for one year, that those for two years should exceed the amount of the loans but for two years and so on." (Paragraph 130.)

(3) "The receipt and repayment of deposit should be distributed over the year as far as possible, in accordance with the generally accepted principle of spreading the liability." (Paragraph 130.)

(4) "The object of the resource is to meet contractions of credit entailing the withdrawals of deposits at due date and a failure to obtain new deposits." (Paragraph 153.)

(5) "The repayments of loans should then go to repayments of depositors, and new business should be financed from new deposits and from renewals." (Paragraph 154.)

(6) "The policy of a central bank should be to arrange to repay deposits from the repayments of loans and only to develop new loans business from new deposits and from the renewals of old ones. When it becomes evident the societies will be unable to make normal repayments of loans, a bank should apply its new deposits to meeting withdrawals of those that mature. It would of course at the same time follow a very cautious policy in the financing of new societies and in making fresh loans to old ones. If and when loan repayments and new deposits finally cease, it must fall back on its fluid resources to meet withdrawals of deposits and to provide such help to societies as seems imperative." (Paragraph 156.)

The meaning of these paragraphs is perfectly clear, and in fact extracts Nos. (2), (4), (5) and (6) are merely restatements of the principles laid down in extract No. 1, viz., that at all normal times deposits are to be repaid by the money received in repayment of loans from societies and central banks and are not to rely on the renewal of existing deposits or on the hope of new deposits or their "fluid resource" for carrying on their business. It is obvious from reading all these extracts along with extract No. (3) that the Committee intend that the due dates of deposits should be spread evenly throughout the year and that they should be repaid when necessary from loan money coming in from societies. The extraordinary thing is that these recommendations ignore the fundamental difficulty of financing agricultural societies, namely, that loans are repaid at only one season of the year and that a very brief one. For instance, in Bihar and Orissa all agricultural societies repay money to central banks from the end of March till the end of May and at no other time in the year. If therefore the repayment of deposits is to be distributed evenly throughout the year, central banks cannot rely on loan money to meet them, but must have some other resources. In fact what the Committee recommend is based on a contradiction of ideas.

3. I have tried to follow out their line of thought as far as I can and have come to the conclusion that the only way is to throw overboard in every place the recommendation that deposits should be repaid from loan money as it comes in and to say that when deposits are not renewed and have to be repaid they must be met from the "fluid resource" or new deposits. This so far as I understand the Burma system is the principle followed in that province and it seems to me a perfectly logical and even a sound system. The idea underlying it is that the co-operative banks and societies are quite sound and that lack of confidence resulting in the withdrawal of deposits or failure to attract fresh money can only be temporary and should pass away within six months: at any rate it should be possible by then, if the societies are sound, to raise money on some terms. If one does not give up the theory that deposits are only to be repaid from the natural incomings of loan money, then the only alternative is to make deposits repayable at one time of the year only, instead of spreading them over the whole twelve months. This is the practice followed in Bihar and Orissa, but the Committee have explicitly condemned it and cannot have intended it should be followed. While therefore it is impossible to extract any consistent recommendation out of the report, I believe that the Committee really intended to follow the Burma system, which is more or less what I have described above.

4. The Bihar and Orissa system is based on the idea that sound banking demands that deposits should be repaid from natural incomings. The model rules adopted by all central banks are attached (Appendix A). Briefly, all deposits are made repayable on May 31st, provided that notice of withdrawal is given on April 1st, i.e., two months previously; but if no notice is received by the prior date, the money remains on deposit for another year. Repayments by societies are due in March, April and the beginning of May, and by April 1st central banks are able to forecast pretty accurately how much money they will receive before May 31st. If there seems likely to be insufficient to meet all obligations, the central banks have two months in which to raise money by new deposits or loans from the Provincial Bank or elsewhere. In addition to deposit money taken under this system the central banks rely on their paid-up share capital and loans taken for fixed periods. Hitherto no formal principles have been followed in determining the amount of money to be taken on loan for longer periods or the proportion of the whole working capital which can be given out in advances for three, four or five years. It is now proposed that all advances for one and two years should be financed by deposits taken under the model rules and cash credits with the Provincial Bank, all long loans for four years and upward should be covered by paid-up capital and reserve, while money given out for three years should be balanced by fixed loans for the same period. It is also being considered whether the period of notice for deposits should not be raised from two to three months. The following diagram shows the idea more clearly :

Assets.	Liabilities.
Advances for one and two years	Money received under model rules and cash credit.
Advances for three years Advances for four years and upwards.	{ Loans or deposits for three years. { Paid-up capital and reserve.

In all cases, advances and loans will be made repayable on May 31st and no cash reserve will be kept throughout the year, save that a proportion, say, one-third, of the cash credit with the Provincial Bank will be left undrawn to provide for contingencies.

5. It is maintained that this system is perfectly sound and at the same time very economical and so simple to work that central banks need no expert advice or help in following it. No cash balance has to be kept throughout the year and there is no loss of interest or danger of embezzlement. The arguments advanced against it by the Committee are that "we believe that such a practice is unknown in ordinary banking and doubt if such an arrangement will be always found convenient, since in the event of a famine it involves the risk of having a great part of the bank's deposits withdrawn at a time when no repayments might be forthcoming to meet them, and also since it tends to accentuate the liability in the event of financial pressure synchronizing with the date of the maturity of the deposits" (Paragraph 130). By "ordinary" banking it is supposed that the Committee mean "commercial" banking and if so the comparison does not appear of much value. A commercial banker who made all his deposits repayable on one date would be insane. He is able to lend his money out so that it is constantly returning to him throughout the year and his obvious method is to spread the repayment of his deposits out to match. Further, the banker takes money current account and this governs his whole business. To condemn the Bihar and Orissa system because it is different from that followed under a totally different set of circumstances hardly seems fair. All that matters is that at the time the central banks have to repay their deposits they should be able to rely on having the money to do so. Now, if the principles recommended above are followed, in any normal year a central bank should, or could, if it required it,* have on the only day in the year which mattered a cash balance of over 50 per cent. (counting the cash credit as an asset) of all possible demands on it—a position which any banker might envy. The two main criticisms against the system are those quoted at the end of the extract above, viz., that if a famine occurred there might be a run by depositors just at the time when the societies could not pay (i.e., the cash balance would not materialise when wanted) and that if a financial crisis did come about March the central banks would be in peculiar danger. These criticisms are perfectly legitimate, but I am confident that they are far from fatal to the system.

6. In the first place it must be remembered that the central banks are all parts of a pyramid of which the provincial bank is the apex. They themselves hold a controlling interest in the provincial bank and can rely on it to support them in all crises so far as it can safely do so. The provincial bank itself therefore has its liabilities spread over a large and straggling province in which there has never been anything like a general famine, so far as we know, and it is extremely improbable that there ever would be. If there, was pressure in one area, the situation would certainly be normal elsewhere and there might quite likely be great prosperity in one place to balance want in another. This would mean that if the members of societies failed to pay in one place, they would pay in another and the money would come into the provincial bank and enable it to support the distressed central banks against any possible ruins. Again, in determining the nature of the reserve to be held against any deposit liabilities it is perfectly fair to take into consideration the class of depositor, his object in depositing and his liability to be affected by panics and stress in the money market.* If the money is what Mr. Wolff calls "good lying money" there is less need to be prepared for frantic withdrawals. Now our system appeals, and is meant to appeal, to the genuine investor. The Committee examined our books carefully and saw that our depositors consisted chiefly of landowners, members of the legal profession, and Europeans who deposit their money once and for all and look on it as a permanent investment or an insurance, often placing it in the names of their relatives. Experience already shows that they are a stable class of depositors, uninfluenced by the money market and it is fair to assume that the deposits of as many as even 50 per cent. of them wanting their money in any one year are practically nil.

Further, if making money repayable on one date tends to accentuate the situation if a crisis occurs, there is the corresponding advantage that it protects the banks from crisis at all other times of the year. Therefore the chances are (assuming a crisis lasts from one to two months) say anything from six to twelve to one in favour of the bank, that a crisis, if it occurs, will not affect them at all. If it does, then we say our depositors are not very liable to panics and at least we have two, and if we change our rules, three months to provide the money, while they have the same period to cool their heads and perhaps change their minds.

7. Again, it is not a very strong argument against any agricultural banking system to say that it will be in difficulties at a time of famine. Joint stock banking might equally well be condemned because it often fails at times of crisis and war. While I have every hope that the Bihar and Orissa co-operative system would weather any famine, still it is fair to say that it is a recognised principle in India that the State should aid agriculturists in distress on account of the seasons. If matters were so bad as are imagined, the members of societies might well claim to receive takavi to tide them over and if this aid were given in the form of advances to the provincial bank at 3 or 4 per cent. interest, both Government and the raiyats would profit—Government because the money would be given out and collected without cost or risk to it, the raiyats because they would be saved from delays and extortion and would get the money actually at a cheaper rate and without the risks attendant on loans taken jointly with the whole body of raiyats in the village, many of whom are untrustworthy. If therefore the provincial bank and the central banks were in difficulties owing to famine (though I do not think they would be) it would not be a grave reproach against them, especially in the early stages of the movement before strong reserves are built up, that they had to ask Government for the advances usually given out in such cases. And in similar circumstances I doubt very much, if a province which followed the Burma system would be in a much better case. Indeed the Committee both appear to apprehend these difficulties and at the same time to see no harm in recourse being had to State aid (see paragraphs 206 and 207).

8. All these arguments are not merely theoretical, and we can point to the results of the past year to show that our system is sound. The last agricultural year in Bihar and Orissa, taking it all round and looking at the province as a whole, was about as bad as there has been for many years. Repayments from a number of areas were in consequence bad and this state of affairs coincided with the European war, which caused a big run not only on several joint stock banks, but on the Post Office Savings Bank. Yet we have been absolutely unaffected. When the war began the very few Marwari and commercial depositors at once asked for their money and though we could have refused it, we paid it up at once. Later on, when the time for giving notice came, more depositors than usual asked for their money and were repaid on May 31st without the least inconvenience. On that date all but one or two central banks had cleared their cash credits with the provincial bank and most of them had fair-sized balances in their favour while the provincial bank itself had a large sum at its credit in the Bank of Bengal. A system which can come through such unfavourable times without the least difficulty is probably not unsound.

9. Nothing has yet been said about the provincial bank, on the stability of which the whole fabric depends. It is at present quite new and has hardly needed more funds than it can get from its share capital and the credit of four lakhs granted it by the Bank of Bengal. It is obvious, however, that it must eventually take deposits, and the lines on which it should work have already received careful consideration. Briefly, it is proposed to adopt a combination of the "fluid resource" system and the "one date" deposits. The former is sound, but clumsy and very expensive. It can be worked easily in Burma where there are no central banks between the Upper Burma Bank and the societies, since the Upper Burma Bank lends at such a rate that it can afford a large reserve in Government paper. In the Bihar and Orissa provincial bank I find that alone it would be hardly feasible. Further, looking at the large and straggling area which the bank serves it seems absolutely safe to rely on a number of the central banks each year not only clearing their cash credits but even having balances to their credit on May 31st. We propose therefore to make a proportion of our deposits repayable on that date relying on, say, half the cash credit and half the average cash balance on that date being available to meet them, and for the rest to work on the lines of the Upper Burma central bank. Of course, as the Committee remark, no system is really satisfactory unless and until we can arrange for the pro notes of central banks or societies to be discounted, and I have already approached the Bank of Bengal with a scheme for this purpose. But their present relations with the Bihar and Orissa Bank suit them very well, and owing to their ignorance of our central banks and their working they have declined to alter their agreement at present. I am trying to gain their confidence by employing well-known Calcutta auditors and in other ways and I have hopes that the Directors will eventually agree. But there is no doubt that this difficulty is one of the great arguments for a State bank and it is probable that we shall never get co-operative finance on a satisfactory basis until a State bank is formed. Once arrangements for discount are made, it seems obvious that the "one date" Deposit system will be the soundest, safest, simplest and most economical.

10. In fact the people who criticise it are for the most part either commercial bankers themselves or persons who, having no experience of banking themselves, rely on the opinions expressed, whether verbally or in books, by such bankers or economists who speak only of commercial banking. To the "ordinary" banker not to maintain a cash reserve all the year round and to make all one's deposits repayable on one date seems so absurd that it is very difficult for him to believe that a system with such features can be sound. He is apt to forget that his cash reserve is needed all the year round because he is liable to be asked for all or most of his deposits any day and that the "spreading" of his liabilities is really necessitated by the fact that his assets not only can, but must, be kept liquid so as to be available to repay the money he has taken on demand. No banker lends out his funds for the exact periods for which he receives them, as the Committee appear to say (cf. paragraph 130, page 78) and he certainly could not afford to lend them out if anything for shorter periods as they recommend. This would mean that money taken on current account would practically not be lent out at all. What the banker does is to rely on the results of past years, and keep sufficient balance to meet all demands on him that experience shows are likely to be made, while the remainder of his deposits are invested in as liquid a form as possible, so that merely by contracting his fresh loan business he can within a month or two mobilise all his assets. It is on these principles, as applied to the altered circumstances, on which the Bihar and Orissa co-operative banks try to work. They make their deposits repayable at the season at which the societies will pay in the money to them, and at that time they can by contracting their fresh loans have sufficient funds to meet all demands likely to be made in normal circumstances. In abnormal circumstances a central bank might need support from the provincial bank, and this again might in the very abnormal circumstances of a widespread famine need an advance from Government. But, if a system of discount could be introduced, even this possibility would vanish, and even without it as time goes on and reserves increase, the necessity for such help will become more and more remote.

B. A. COLLINS,

The 19th August 1915.

Offg. Registrar of Co-operative

Societies, Bihar and Orissa.

No. 479-3 A.12, dated Rangoon, the 19th August 1916.

From—The HON'BLE MR. W. J. KEITH, I.C.S., Revenue Secretary to the Government of Burma, Agricultural Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I am directed to submit the following remarks on those recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation in India regarding which the views of Local Governments are invited in Revenue and Agricultural Department Resolution No. 2C.—155-16 of the 4th January 1916. The numbers cited are those given to the recommendations in Appendix III of the Committee's Report :—

No. 8.—A Central Cattle Re-insurance Society has been established in Burma, and with its formation the number of Cattle Insurance Societies has largely increased. Government backing of the Society has taken the form of a promise of loans free of interest for a period of five years up to an annual limit of Rs. 25,000, sanctioned in the correspondence received with your letter No. 217—68-2 of the 24th February 1915.

No. 12.—The principles laid down are followed in this Province,

No. 18.—The Registrar, Co-operative Societies, remarks :—

"This recommendation refers to 'untouchables' and such like persons in Burma. Such people are generally Indians, and the language difficulty prevents the Co-operative Department from assisting them. They are, however, well paid and do not require such help here as they do in India."

The Lieutenant-Governor considers that it is not practicable at present to introduce measures for the special relief of poor castes in urban areas. But he hopes that it may before long be possible to start co-operative societies among Indians and other communities and especially among the poor castes in town.

Nos. 50, 51, 58, 59, 67, 78, 80, 88 and 89.—These recommendations are all followed in Burma, and the Lieutenant-Governor has no remarks or suggestions to offer in regard to them. With reference to No. 89, I am to remark that the margin of interest in the case of Agricultural Credit Societies is 6 per cent.

Nos. 94 to 105.—Arrangements have already been made in this Province for the audit and supervision of Co-operative Societies in accordance with the proposals of the Committee. There are staffs of Union Supervisors and of Society-paid Auditors who are recruited by competitive examination. The Registrar appoints, controls and dismisses the Society-paid Auditors whose pay is provided by the levy of an audit fee varying with the amount of the capital. There are at present 11 auditors on a salary of Rs. 50—3—100 plus Rs. 20 fixed travelling allowance. Union Supervisors are appointed, paid and controlled by groups of Unions; there are 21 of these Supervisors at present on pay of Rs. 30—2—50 a month. Audit reports are made in duplicate; one copy is left with the Society concerned, and the other is submitted to the Registrar through the Union. The super-audit by Government Auditors is conducted biennially by Junior Assistant Registrars, each of whom is expected to audit about 100 Societies a year. During the months of April and May, when audits are completed, these officers are utilised in administrative work. The Registrar reports that as a result of the adoption of the Committee's recommendations, auditing is now a better business than it was previously. With reference to Recommendation No. 96, the Registrar remarks that considering the area of the Province, the badness of its communications, the many new developments (cattle insurance, tenancy, co-operative sale, etc.) peculiar to Burma, the control of the Weaving School, responsibility for large colonization schemes and industrial development, the fact that almost all the work is in the vernacular, the proportion of 1,000 societies per Registrar or Joint Registrar is for Burma unduly heavy.

Nos. 107 to 118.—The Registrar reports that the principles laid down in these recommendations are exactly followed in this Province. There are three Central Banks, excluding the Upper Burma Central Bank which was classed by the Committee on Co-operation as a Provincial Bank; and in these Banks the voting power of Society members predominates. The Banks are managed by unpaid Committees of Management, controlled by a Committee of Supervision; and the number of shares taken by affiliated Societies depends on the amount of loans. The credit of borrowing Societies is assessed by Unions.

No. 119.—No fees for affiliation to a Central Bank are levied in Burma.

Nos. 120 to 126.—The principles embodied in these recommendations are followed in Burma, with the exception of No. 123 which lays down that every shareholder in a Central Bank should have one vote only. In the Pegu Central Bank individual members have only one vote, but affiliated Societies have two votes. In the Pakokku Central Bank each share carries a vote; and in the Sagu Central Bank votes depend on the number of shares, there being one vote for 1 to 3 shares, two for 4 to 6 shares and three for 7 to 10 shares. The Lieutenant-Governor does not at present think it necessary to ask these banks to comply with the Committee's proposal.

No. 127.—Since July 1915 the arrangement by which every Society affiliated to a Central Bank deposited one-fourth of its Reserve Fund in that Bank has been abrogated, in accordance with the Committee's recommendation.

No. 128.—No Central Bank in Burma opens current accounts.

No. 129.—All three Central Banks have saving bank deposits which are at present used by affiliated Societies chiefly as a means of adjusting interest and audit fund accounts. Deposits by non-members are few; they are covered by cash credit arrangements with the Provincial Bank.

No. 131.—The average period of deposits in the three Central Banks is less than the average period for which they make loans; the Central Banks, however, depend on their cash credits with the Provincial Bank to meet such deposits on due date, and in the Provincial Bank the average period of deposits far exceeds the average period of loans. Taking the Provincial Bank and the three Central Banks together, the average period of deposits is considerably greater than that of loans.

No. 132.—The margin of interest in the three Central Banks is about 2 per cent, and in the affiliated Societies 6 per cent., or a total of 8 per cent. as against the 6 per cent. minimum suggested by the Committee.

No. 133.—Depositors are asked their intentions one month before deposits are due for repayment and, if they decide not to renew their loans, are repaid promptly.

Nos. 134 to 137.—The three Central Banks have no overdraft or fixed loan arrangements with Presidency or Joint Stock Banks in the Province; they deal solely with the Provincial Bank. They do not lend to each other nor do they raise capital on debentures.

No. 138.—This principle is observed in the three Central Banks.

Nos. 139 to 149.—The principles laid down by the Committee in these recommendations for the employment of their capital by Central Banks are strictly followed.

No. 150.—Repayments to the Central Banks are watched by the Registrar, the Central Bank and the Union concerned. No civil suits by Central Banks against Societies for the recovery of loans have so far been necessary. Moral pressure has to be exerted in some cases by Unions; the Registrar only intervenes when a Society is hopeless.

Nos. 151 to 156.—All three Central Banks are still dependent on the Provincial Bank for their fluid resources; these consist of a part of the cash credit given by the Provincial Bank which may not be drawn upon save with the Registrar's consent. On this undrawn amount the Central Banks pay 2 per cent commission to compensate the Provincial Bank in part for the loss incurred in keeping such resources for such cash credit.

No. 158.—Profits are calculated in Burma in the manner recommended.

No. 159.—In nearly every case the amount allotted to Reserve Funds from profits exceeds the legal minimum.

No. 160.—No Central Bank has as yet started a building fund.

Nos. 161 and 162.—These recommendations are followed. Central Banks are audited by Government officers and will contribute to the Provincial Audit Fund.

Nos. 164 to 178.—The principles laid down in these recommendations are followed by the Upper Burma Central Co-operative Bank which, as already mentioned was classed by the Committee on Co-operation as a Provincial Bank. No current accounts are allowed and the Bank has no cash credits with any Joint Stock or Presidency Bank. All fixed loans and borrowings are secured by the deposit of gilt-edged securities.

Nos. 180 to 186.—These recommendations commend themselves to the Local Government. As regards No. 180, no cases have yet arisen in which it has been necessary to remunerate Sub-Registrars for loss of fees on registration work done for Co-operative Societies. As regards No. 182, the Government Servants' Conduct Rules meet present requirements.

No. 187.—The Financial Commissioner considers that in Burma it is unnecessary and undesirable that the Deputy Commissioner or Subdivisional Officer should have any concern in the management of District Central Banks. Sir Harcourt Butler can see advantages in insisting on the principle of self-help at the beginning of a movement and is therefore prepared to adopt the views of Mr. Thompson for the present, especially as there are only three Central Banks. But in principle he agrees with the recommendation of the Committee and will re-examine the question after two years.

Nos. 194 and 195.—I am to invite a reference to the correspondence resting with my letter No. 525-M.—3A.9 of the 30th September 1915. Sir Harcourt Butler considers that the scheme proposed by his predecessor, which places on a permanent basis the present system of administration in Burma, is better suited to the circumstances of the Province than the more elaborate and costly proposals of the Committee on Co-operation.

No. 196.—The Financial Commissioner is doubtful whether a valid rule can be issued under section 43 of the Act which would restrict or modify the objects for which co-operative societies may be formed as set out in section 4. He therefore recommends the amendment of the latter section to give effect to the Committee's proposal. The Lieutenant-Governor is advised that such a rule would be valid so far as it did not restrict the activities of Societies in the pursuit of their main object—the promotion of the economic interests of their members. He is therefore prepared to give effect to the recommendation of the Committee as it stands.

No. 197.—The Registrar writes:—

"From what I saw in certain provinces on my tour with the Committee I am convinced that the views put forward in paragraphs 202 and 203 of their report are sound.

"I can hardly believe that the enquiries of a co-operative committee, say, once in ten years, will be as effective in keeping the movement healthy as an arrangement for continuous scrutiny and advice. I am aware that some Local Governments may on principle object to such scrutiny and that the average Registrar will oppose it because he prefers to be undisputed cock of his own walk. A similar spirit, based to my knowledge on personal considerations was manifested by two Registrars at the recent Agricultural Conference at Pusa (to which the Burma Registrar was not invited) when the appointment of Provincial Development Commissioners was discussed. The co-operative movement is, simply stated, the development of agriculture, etc., by organization, and to me it is absurd that in a single Government like that of India the organization should cease at the province. Co-operative finance cannot be so restricted and must be an all-India matter; hence direction is required from the centre. I should much prefer an All-India Central Co-operative Bank (a scheme for which was at the request of the Committee prepared by me) to control and direct and to enforce its direction by the application of the 'money stick.'

"I consider the continued working of the co-operative movement on a purely provincial basis to be as foolish as the attack on a position by three brigades operating individually without a divisional commander. Pending, therefore, the formation of an All-India Central Co-operative Bank, I consider the appointment of an Adviser on co-operation with the Government of India to be essential."

Sir Harcourt Butler concurs in the recommendation of the Committee, and prefers a single officer to a standing committee.

No. 8810, dated 12th September 1916.

From—The HON'BLE MR. P. R. CADELL, C.I.E., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I am directed to refer to paragraph 3 of the Resolution of the Government of India No. 2-C.—155-16, dated 4th January 1916, inviting the views of the Local Governments and Administrations on the recommendations of the Committee on the Co-operation in India classified as (b), and to communicate the following remarks for the consideration of the Supreme Government.

2. I am to state that after a careful consideration of the Committee's views and of the opinions expressed by the officers consulted on the subject in this Presidency, the Governor in Council approves of the Committee's recommendations subject to the remarks made below.

3. Recommendation No. 8—(Cattle Re-insurance Society).—The Registrar of Co-operative Societies hopes to start a few experimental Cattle Insurance Societies shortly, but observes that he has yet to discover a centre in which a real need is felt for them and that the question of starting a cattle re-insurance society must be postponed. The view expressed by the Registrar is approved by the Governor in Council.

4. Recommendation No. 50—(Fixing of a limit to the borrowing power of a society once a year).—The Registrar states that the system proposed in paragraphs 141-142 of the Committee's Report is adapted only to a Union or a Central Bank which is in a position to form an independent judgment on the facts before it, and observes that in other cases the societies should estimate (a) the amount needed by them for current agricultural purposes and (b) amount needed for the redemption of old debts and land improvement, and that the maximum credit of new societies outside Union areas would be (a) with a small portion of (b) and would be raised generally as the society improved until it becomes (a) plus (b). These views meet with the approval of the Governor in Council.

5. Recommendation No. 51—(Transfer to the Central Bank of deposits which the societies are unable to use in loans to members).—The Governor in Council accepts this recommendation subject to the proviso proposed by the Registrar that in facts where there are Unions but no Central Bank, the Union Committee may be authorised to arrange for the direct transfer of unused deposits from one primary society to any other neighbouring primary society that may require them.

6. Recommendation No. 59—(Fixing of a maximum normal credit for each member).—The Registrar states that the first clause of this recommendation regarding the fixing of the maximum normal credit for each member is acceptable and is being introduced as quickly as possible. Mr. Ewbank, however, observes that the second clause prohibiting the grant of loans in excess of the limit without reference to the general meeting is questionable, that a man's normal credit is determined in the light of the current requirements of his occupation and his character, that an honest agriculturalist might require loans to satisfy his other needs, and that in such cases he would have to endure the delay of a reference to the general meeting and the indignity of having his private affairs publicly discussed. Accordingly Mr. Ewbank considers that the limitation to individual loans contained in model by-laws 29, 30, 31 and 33 at page 41 of the Bombay Manual for Co-operative Societies is sufficient, and that the delay and unpopularity of the course recommended by the Committee outweigh its possible advantages. The Governor in Council concurs in the remarks made by the Registrar.

7. Recommendation No. 67—(Period of loans for non-productive purposes not to exceed two years and for productive purposes may vary according to the object of the loan).—The Governor in Council accepts this recommendation, subject to the Registrar's remark that if the redemption of old debts falls under the head "non-productive purpose" the limit of two years is impracticable in such cases.

8. Recommendation No. 89—(Margin of interest to be kept as high as possible to ensure rapid growth of reserve fund)—The Registrar observes that owing to the low rates of interest prevalent in Gujarat and the Konkan it would be hopeless to think of raising the lending rates in those tracts, but that it would be possible to arise the normal lending rates in the Deccan and the Southern Maratha Country. Mr. Ewbank adds that existing societies cannot be compelled to raise the rates already fixed in their by-laws, and proposes to take no action for the present beyond recommending that all new agricultural societies in the Deccan should fix 12½ per cent as the normal lending rate recognised in their by-laws. The views expressed by the Registrar are accepted.

9. Recommendation No. 95—(Designation of Auditors.)—The Registrar suggests that auditors on Rs. 150 and over should in future be known as senior Government auditors and those on Rs. 100 and over as junior Government auditors, and that inspectors and any other officers under Rs. 100 maintained by Government and authorised under any conditions to make an audit should be called sub-auditors, the term "supervisor" being confined to persons employed by Unions in a supervisory capacity, and auditors whose pay is met by Unions or societies being designated as "auditors." These suggestions are approved.

10. Recommendation No. 96—(Two controlling officers each province.)—The views of this Government on the subject have already been communicated to the Government of India in paragraphs 7-8 of letter No. 9883, dated 16th September 1915.

11. Recommendation No. 98—(Inquiry into all circumstances determining the general position of a Society.)—The Registrar accepts the suggestion made by Committee on this point in paragraph 91 of their Report with one exception, viz., Committee's view that the valuation of assets and liabilities referred to in section 17 (2) of the Co-operative Societies Act should include not only the preparation of a balance sheet showing assets and liabilities of the society as such, but also the annual preparation or revision of a list of the material assets and debts of each individual member. Mr. Ewbank thinks that under the Act it was never intended to impose on the auditor the gigantic task of valuing the assets and liabilities of every single member, and he proposes not to include this valuation in the revised form of audit memorandum. He adds that the preparation of such a list is one of the duties which he hopes to get Unions to undertake and that the checking of such lists will be left to the Special Mamlatdars of whom one or two will have to be maintained by the Central Bank for the purpose. The Governor in Council concurs in the remarks made by Mr. Ewbank.

12. Recommendations Nos. 100-101—(Appointment of auditors by Government and by Societies.)—The Committee intends that all primary societies should be audited once a year by a staff maintained by themselves and that the Government auditor should confine himself to making a super-audit over and above the primary audit. The Registrar, however, thinks that the sudden introduction of so costly a change is impossible, and observes that all the larger Urban Societies and several of the smaller ones are already bearing the whole cost of their own audit and that it may be taken as settled for the future that all Central or larger Urban Societies with a working capital exceeding Rs. 50,000 will pay for their audit. Mr. Ewbank adds that if in addition to the contribution which these societies are expected to give towards the expenses of the Union supervisor they are asked to contribute a substantial amount towards the expenses of the audit, it will mean a very serious retardation of the process of building up reserves, while if the contribution is levied on a very small scale the proceeds will not be sufficient to secure a competent auditor. The members of the Departmental Co-operative Conference held at Poona in March 1916 have unanimously expressed the opinion that the time has not yet come when societies should be called on to bear the cost of their own audit and have observed that the free Government audit is a most important privilege and that its withdrawal will make progress more difficult in future. The conference have passed a resolution urging on Government the necessity of continuing for some time longer to provide the funds for the audit of all primary societies with unlimited liability and also of all primary societies with limited liability but with a capital of less than Rs. 50,000 for the first five years of their existence and afterwards on a graduated scale. The resolution of the Conference is supported by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies and the Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies, and meets with the approval of the Governor in Council.

13. Recommendation No. 105—(Provision of staff by societies for their own supervision).—The Registrar states that up to the present time supervision of co-operative societies in this presidency has been mainly carried out by Honorary Organisers whose travelling expenses are borne by Government, and by the inspectors and other members of his own staff, and concurs with the Committee in considering that the time has come to require societies to combine for the purpose of mutual supervision and of maintaining their own supervising staff. Mr. Ewbank observes that local Guaranteeing Unions which he proposes to start will levy a rate from the constituent societies for the purpose of maintaining a paid secretary (Union supervisor) whose duty it will be to train members of the Union Societies, but that it is not proposed to reduce the staff of Honorary Organisers as they will still be required for supervising remote societies not including in any Unions and that as Unions multiply the official staff will cease to concern itself with purely supervisional work except in so far as it is implied in the process of audit. The remarks made by the Registrar are approved.

14. Recommendation No. 112—(Area served by a Central Bank).—The Registrar states that the average size and capital of village societies are much larger in this Presidency than elsewhere and that the number of societies (200 to 250 to be served by a Central Bank proposed by the Committee is much too high, and observes that in starting a Central Bank its range should be determined not by the number of client societies but by its probable turn of business and that as long as the estimated margin of profit is sufficient to maintain a competent staff as well as to pay a fair dividend the establishment of a Bank may be permitted. The opinion expressed by Mr. Ewbank is approved by the Governor in Council.

15. Recommendation No. 120—(All shares in a Central Bank to be preferably on one footing).—The Governor in Council accepts this recommendation subject to the proviso that in forming new Central Banks preference shares should be allowed whenever the promoters wish it.

16. Recommendation No. 123—(Limit to number of votes of a shareholder in Central Bank).—The Registrar considers this recommendation to be unreasonable, and observes that it is not only natural but desirable that a person who has a larger stake in a bank should be given a larger share in its control and that the voting power should be so graduated that a single member or a small group of members cannot obtain a dominating voice in the management thereof. Mr. Ewbank observes that there is nothing unco-operative in allowing a man who have more than one share to have more than one vote and that it is in accordance with continental practice. The Governor in Council accepts the views expressed by the Registrar.

17. Recommendations Nos. 128, 129 and 131—(Opening of current accounts and savings accounts and period of deposits).—The Registrar states that according to paragraph 82 of the Committee's Report primary societies which take deposits and utilise them in their own business must maintain fluid resource under conditions similar to those suggested for Central Banks or must enter into arrangements with these Banks under which the latter will provide this resource for them, and that paragraph 155 requires Central Banks to cover the whole amount accepted on current deposit with fluid resources and 75 per cent of the amount held as savings deposits and in addition to maintain as fluid resource a sum sufficient to meet half the fixed deposits falling due during the ensuing year, on the assumption that no fresh deposits are received and no repayments of loans are made. Mr. Ewbank states that as soon as the nature of this recommendation was understood in this Presidency it evoked the most vigorous protest and that the Departmental Co-operative Conference recently held at Poona unanimously resolved that no definite standard could be laid down for the amount of fluid resource to be maintained by Central Banks, that it should depend on the nature of the deposits and that the standard laid down by the Committee was impossible. As regards primary agricultural societies the Registrar states that practically all deposits accepted by such societies are fixed for one year and that the whole amount in this Presidency matures for repayment in the course of the year, but that the Committee, ruling out all expectation of renewals, recoveries of loans and receipt of new loans and deposits, requires that half of this total amount should be maintained as fluid resource. Mr. Ewbank adds that the sum which in this way would have been withdrawn from the societies' business and either deposited in a Bank or invested in Government Promissory Notes during 1914-15 would have been very large, and that as there are not yet any District Central Banks to provide cash credits for primary societies there would be no alternative to the withdrawal and separate investment of this enormous sum. Accordingly he urges that while the restrictions on current and savings bank accounts should be accepted, the standard of fluid resource for all other deposits should be rejected, that deposits should be fixed and should be local and genuinely co-operative in character, that sudden rushes are impossible and times of scarcity can always be foreseen, and that at most societies might be required to arrange that three-fourths of their deposits should fall due for repayment during the harvest months, but that to require them to make any substantial separate investment would drive the majority of them into bankruptcy. With regard to primary non-Agricultural societies the Registrar states that the objections taken by him in the case of primary agricultural societies apply also to unlimited societies for artisans and mill-hands with almost equal force, but that limited liability societies are on an entirely different footing and that in their case a fluid resource is necessary but that it is doubtful whether the mechanical standards suggested by the Committee is suitable for them. Consequently, while recognising the need of fluid resource in People's Banks, Mr. Ewbank opposes the adoption of the standard recommended by the Committee, and suggests that the best course for the present would be for Government to prescribe the use of the quarterly financial statement in the case of all limited liability societies with a working capital exceeding Rs. 30,000 as well as in the case of Central Banks, that whenever Government notice an apparently dangerous discrepancy between estimated receipts and liabilities it will be in a position to enquire what special circumstances justify the state of affairs and if necessary to insist on reform. Mr. Ewbank adds that he cannot exaggerate the danger which would attend a rigid imposition of a fixed general standard for all societies, and that if Government insist on fixing a standard it may be fixed separately for each society with due regard to the conditions of its business. As regards Central Banks Mr. Ewbank observes that no hard-and-fast standard of fluid resource need be insisted upon in the case of these Banks and that the use of the quarterly financial statement will for the present be a sufficient safeguard. The Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies observes that it is most unfortunate that on the technical subject of "fluid resource" on which practical guidance was needed the Committee should have felt themselves impelled by a sense of caution to prescribe rules which are impracticable, and that in view of the opinion expressed by the Director of the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank and the recent Departmental Co-operative Conference the Committee's proposals under this head are unworkable. The Governor in Council accepts the views expressed by the Registrar and the Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies. Subject to these remarks the Governor in Council accepts recommendations Nos. 128, 129 and 131.

18. Recommendation No. 132—(To meet all charges entailed by the Committee's recommendations Central Banks require a 3 per cent margin and Primary Societies the same).—The Registrar considers that this recommendation is unduly dogmatic, and states that the necessary margin of profit must depend on the volume of business, that in this Presidency the average margin would be  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, that there is no possibility of altering this fact without falling back on Government guaranteed debentures, and that nothing seems to be gained by asserting a priori that its minimum working margin of interest should be 3 per cent. The Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies observes that this recommendation is unsuitable to local conditions, and this view meets with the approval of the Governor in Council.

19. Recommendation No. 143—(Loans should be sanctioned as far as possible all together at one or two main seasons in the year).—The Registrar considers that this recommendation is thoroughly unsound, and observes that it is most unlikely that desposits will be received or will fall due for repayment at one or two main seasons of the year, that it would be impossible for a Bank deliberately to keep the deposit money it received idle in hand until one of the main seasons arrives if it has already received a suitable application for a loan and that it is one of the first principles of Banks to spread liabilities and to arrange business so that loans shall constantly be maturing. These views are accepted by the Governor in Council.

20. Recommendation No. 147—(Security taken from a borrowing society should ordinarily be a pro-note. Shares held by societies in Central Banks should not be accepted as security for a loan, though deposits may be).—As regards the first part of this recommendation, the Registrar states that the promissory notes will be of no more use than bonds. The Committee seems to believe that the notes would be negotiable in the outside market but the Directors of the Central Co-operative Bank have ascertained that the Bank of Bombay will not discount such notes of rural Co-operative Societies even if backed by their Bank, and that there is consequently no advantage in introducing these notes until some agency is found to discount agricultural paper. These views are accepted by the Governor in Council, who approves of the second part of the Committee's recommendation.

21. Recommendation No. 149—(Money recovered from members should be at once available for repayment by a society to a Central Bank. The Central Bank should supervise recoveries but need not prepare lists of overdue loans).—The Registrar observes that this recommendation is more applicable to provinces where rural societies depend almost wholly on Central Banks for their finance than to this Presidency where local deposits form a considerable proportion of the total funds. Mr. Ewbank thinks that the system recommended would not act as a check on the genuineness of recoveries and that it is more convenient for a Central Bank to be able to calculate its incomings according to fixed due dates than to have them trickling in according to the convenience of its debtors. He adds that the sense of a fixed instalment due on a certain date tends to keep societies up to the mark. The opinion expressed by the Registrar is accepted.

22. Recommendations Nos. 151, 153, 155 and 156—(Fluid resource of Societies).—The Governor in Council accepts the Registrar's opinion that these recommendations should be rejected for the reasons mentioned in paragraph 17 above.

23. Recommendation No. 154—(Fluid resource only to be utilized when other sources fail).—The Registrar states that this recommendation is very vague and that it is by no means clear under what conditions a society would be justified in falling back on its fluid resource and what legal restrictions should be imposed by rule in its use. The Registrar's view is accepted.

24. Recommendation No. 158—(Calculation of net profits for purposes of distribution by Central Banks).—The Governor in Council concurs with the Registrar in considering that this recommendation does not seem to have been carried into effect by the Committee itself, and that in the new Profit and Loss annual statement for Central Banks column 3 should have been subdivided in order to comply with this proposal.

25. Recommendation No. 159—(Provision of contingent or bad debt fund).—This recommendation is accepted subject to the alteration that the word "minimum" should be substituted for "maximum" in it.

26. The Registrar states that the Committee's recommendations with regard to Provincial Banks are scarcely applicable to this Presidency, since a Provincial Bank is already in existence with the constitution defined in an agreement with the Secretary of State and not alterable without the sanction of both the contracting parties, and that as the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank has been highly successful in securing the main object of co-operative organization, viz., bringing money at reasonable terms within the reach of the agriculturist, it would be a mistake to alienate the goodwill of the Directors on the ground that it does not altogether answer to the abstract ideal of a Provincial Bank as conceived by the Committee. The Governor in Council concurs in the remarks made by the Registrar.

27. Recommendations Nos. 157-168—(Representatives of Societies and Central Banks in the management of a Provincial Bank).—The Registrar states that recommendation No. 167 is crucial, and observes that 14,000 shares of Rs. 50 each have been subscribed in the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank by 871 shareholders of whom 865 are individuals and that he is moving all well managed primary societies gradually to take shares in the Bank, but that it will be a very long time before they can buy enough shares to give them any substantial shares in the control thereof. Mr. Ewbank adds that the Directors have met the proposals of the Committee in the most reasonable manner and have not only elected Mr. G. K. Devdhar on the Board as a representative of co-operative societies but also have expressed their willingness to admit other suitable representatives as the interest of societies in the share capital of the Bank increases. The Governor in Council concurs with the Registrar in considering that nothing more can be done in respect of these recommendations.

28. Recommendation No. 169—(Shares should ordinarily be of one class).—The Governor in Council accepts the Registrar's opinion that this recommendation is out of the question, as debentures have already been issued by the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank.

29. Recommendation No. 175—(Fluid resource of Provincial Banks).—The Registrar states that according to this recommendation the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank would have to hold more than seven lakhs in liquid form and this without considering the needs of non-agricultural societies for fluid resource. Mr. Ewbank adds if this could be arranged by a cash credit, the plan might be feasible, but as the assets of the Bank are mortgaged to the debenture-holders under a Trust Deed no joint Stock Bank will open a cash credit in its favour, that the Directors are also unable to arrange a cash credit based on the discounting of agricultural promissory notes and that there seems no alternative to the unprofitable system of separate investment. He adds that the capital of the Bank itself consists chiefly of non-withdrawable shares and debentures and that the amount of fluid resource that it would require for itself would be small but that if it were agreed that no fixed standard of fluid resource should be imposed on primary societies or Central Banks this recommendation may be accepted. The Governor in Council accepts the views expressed by the Registrar.

30. Recommendation No. 178—(Audit of accounts by a Chartered or Incorporated Accountant).—The Governor in Council concurs with the Registrar in considering that the special expert accountant maintained under him at present by the big societies at their own expense may continue to make the audit for the present.

31. Recommendation No. 180—(Payment to Sub-Registrars on account of loss caused to them by the exemption of Co-operative Societies from Registration fees).—In this Presidency Sub-Registrars are no longer paid by fees, and the question, raised by this recommendation does not therefore arise.

32. Recommendations Nos. 183, 184, 185 and 187—(Relation of Government servants with Co-operative Societies).—The Governor in Council considers that the orders already passed on this subject are sufficient (vide paragraph 9 of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated 29th February 1916, of which a copy is appended).

33. Recommendations Nos. 194-195—Appointment of a Development Commissioner in this Presidency).—The views of the Governor in Council on this recommendation have already been communicated to the Government of India (vide paragraph 5 of the letter to the Government of India No. 9883, dated 16th September 1915).

34. Recommendation No. 196—(Proposal to empower Registrars to rescind any resolution or act of any Officer, Committee or Society dealing with controversial opinions of a political or religious character).—This recommendation is separately under consideration and the views of this Government will be communicated to the Government of India in due course.

35. Recommendation No. 197—(Appointment of an expert Co-operative Adviser with the Government of India).—The Registrar observes that this is an attempt to enforce centralisation by means of an officer who would virtually be an Inspector General in exactly the manner which the Decentralization Commission strongly deprecated, that no movement depends more on local men, local conditions and the direct personal factor than co-operation, and that he can conceive no Department which is so obviously a field for Provincial as opposed to Imperial control. The Commissioner in Sind sees no objection to the adoption of this recommendation provided that the duties of the officer are confined to a study of the progress and the peculiar conditions of the co-operative movement in the various provinces and to an examination of the financial and economic conditions of the Co-operative Banks. Mr. Lucas, however, adds that the special officer should not exercise any control over the Registrar's action or fetter the discretion of the Provincial Government though he should be able to offer general advice both to the Supreme and Local Governments as a result of his observations. The Governor in Council entirely concurs in the opinion expressed by the Registrar. No objection can of course be taken to the Government of India appointing an officer to advise them on questions arising out of the co-operative movement, but the suggestion in paragraph 203 of the Committee's Report goes much beyond this and would entail, in the advice which it is proposed that he should offer to the ~~Local~~ Government, the risk of interference and friction with the Local Government and with the work of the Registrar.

36. As regards the Committee's recommendations classified as (a), I am to forward, for the information of the Government of India, copies of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated 29th February 1916, and Government Orders No. 6400, dated 27th June 1916, No. 7718, dated 8th August 1916, and No. 8694, dated 6th September 1916, containing the orders passed by this Government on the subject.

37. In conclusion, I am to add that the recommendations of the Committee form a very valuable collection of principles, which will guide Local Governments in drawing up local rules from time to time, but that so far as the Bombay Presidency is concerned it would be a mistaken policy to force matters by prescribing rules based on those recommendations for which Co-operative Societies in this Presidency are not ready or which might be found unsuitable for local peculiarities. The Governor in Council accordingly deprecates the embodiment of the Committee's recommendations in any general orders for the guidance of the Local Co-operative Department.

Resolution passed by the Government of India on the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation in India, 1915.

GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

Resolution No. 2305.

Bombay Castle, the 29th February 1916.

Resolution of the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture, No. 2-C-155-16, dated 4th January 1916.

RESOLUTION.—The Resolution of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation in India should be circulated to the officers concerned for information, with reference to Government Resolution No. 9913, dated 15th October 1914.

2. Recommendations under Class (a).—The Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies should be requested to report after consulting such officers as he may consider necessary, whether there is any objection to the immediate adoption of these recommendations as proposed by the Government of India.

3. As regards recommendations Nos. 5, 6 and 7 (Cattle Insurance Societies), the attention of the Director should be invited to paragraph 5 of Government Resolution No. 793, dated 26th January 1914, and paragraph 3 of Government Resolution No. 5514, dated 17th May 1915, and he should be requested to submit as early as possible his report regarding the question whether cattle insurance could be undertaken in this Presidency. The Director should also be requested to embody in that report his remarks on recommendation No. 8 on the subject of a central cattle re-insurance society.

4. Recommendation No. 30—Appointment of Village Accountants or Schoolmasters as Secretaries to Co-operative Societies—The Director should be referred to Government Order No. 2085, dated 22nd February 1916, from which it will be seen that the Government of India have already sanctioned the payment from the funds of Co-operative Societies or Notified Area Committees of an allowance not exceeding Rs. 5 a month to any village officer or other subordinate officer of Government who may be appointed to perform the clerical work of a Co-operative Society or a Notified Area Committee.

5. Recommendation No. 84—Rules for referring disputes to arbitration.—Government have already passed rules to enable disputes between societies and their members to be referred to arbitration (vide Government Resolution No. 508, dated 18th January 1915).

6. Recommendation No. 85.—No. 9 of the rules prescribed in Government Resolution No. 598, dated 18th January 1915, provides for the execution of the decision of the Registrar or the awards of arbitrators in the same manner as a decree of a Civil Court. Orders will be issued separately as regards the latter part of this recommendation, viz., that a resumé of the provisions of the law dealing with the recovery of agricultural debts might be supplied to Civil Courts and Societies, and that Courts might be instructed in the absence of special reasons not to use their discretionary power to reduce a society's ordinary lending rate.

7. Recommendation No. 192—Training of Assistant Collectors in co-operation.—A Manual for Co-operative Societies in this presidency prepared by Mr. Ewbank has been published and the attention of district officers has already been drawn in general terms to the importance of the co-operative movement and the responsibilities which it entails (vide paragraph 3 of Government Resolution No. 643, dated 25th July 1914). The Director should be requested to favour Government with his remarks on paragraph 196 of the Committee's report.

8. Recommendation No. 198.—The Committee observe that though securities are not trust funds this legal limitation would not presumably prevent the use of Court of Wards funds for assisting societies constituted for the benefit of the ward's estate or its tenantry. The Director should be informed that the question of investing surplus funds of a ward's estate otherwise than in accordance with Section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act has been fully discussed in the correspondence underlying Government Resolutions No. 4845, dated 25th May 1914, and No. 2736, dated 6th March 1915, and that Government cannot depart from the position already taken up.

9. Recommendations under class (b).—The Commissioner in Sind and the Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies should be requested to submit to Government their reports on these recommendations by 31st May 1916. These reports need contain no reference to the subjects dealt with in

(I) Recommendation No. 96 (two controlling officers for each province and a Registrar or Joint Registrar for every 1,000 or fraction of 1,000 societies), (II) Nos. 183, 184, 185 and 187 (relation of Government Servants with Co-operative Societies) and (III) Nos. 194 and 195 (appointment of a Development Commissioner for each province). As regards (I), this Government have already intimated to the Government of India that they are opposed to the appointment of a Joint Registrar and that prima facie the title imports notions of divided responsibility which must be detrimental to efficiency and in such matters as the organization of the chain of banks contemplated by the Committee might seriously interfere with progress. Regarding (II) the attention of the officers concerned would be invited to the orders passed in Government Resolutions No. 11723, dated 18th December 1911, No. 7176, dated 1st August 1914, and No. 58, dated 5th January 1915. With reference to (III), this Government have already expressed the opinion that while it is possible that at some future date there may be scope for the energies of a Development Commissioner in this Presidency, at present there is not : that the sum necessary for the upkeep of such a highly paid officer and his establishment could not be conveniently spared from Provincial Funds, and that for the present nothing is to be gained by interposing a new officer between Government on the one hand and the heads of the Departments of Co-operation and Agriculture on the other.

ORDER.—The Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the recommendations of the Committee on Co-operation in India classified as (a) should be adopted subject to the remarks made by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies and the Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies and to the orders contained in the following paragraphs.

2. Recommendation No. 19.—As it appears that there is no scope at present for mortgage associations in this Presidency, Government consider it unnecessary to take further action in this connection.

3. Recommendation No. 20.—The Registrar accepts the Committee's recommendation but observes that a change in the name of the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank will involve an alteration in the Bank's agreement with the Secretary of State. Government do not think it necessary to suggest any alteration in the name of the Bank.

4. Recommendation No. 196.—The Registrar states that a rule giving effect to this recommendation is being submitted to Government for approval. This recommendation has been classed under (b) by the Government of India and the matter will be considered along with Mr. Ewbank's report on the Committee's recommendations under this class.

5. The receipt of the rules which the Director promises in paragraph 4 of his letter is awaited.

6. Recommendations Nos. 30, 84, 85, 192 and 198 classed under (a) have already been disposed of by paragraphs 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated 29th February 1916.

To—The Chief Secretary to Government, Revenue Department.

SIR,

With reference to paragraph 2 of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated 29th February 1916, I have the honour to forward herewith No. 2849, dated the 31st March 1916, from the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, on the subject. I have been carefully through the various points involved but have nothing to add to the Registrar's remarks. The majority of the recommendations under class (a) are couched in general and qualifying terms, which admit of the exercise of discretion on the part of the Registrar.

2. It will be noted that there are only two positive recommendations with which he disagrees, viz., Nos. 23 and 79. I agree with him that it would be prejudicial to us to limit the number of members in a Society in large village to 100, and think that it will be a difficult matter for a Society to open cash credits with its members, though this may be an ideal to aim at in the future.

3. Subject to disagreement on these two points I think that we may accept the general principles of the recommendations under class (a).

4. The recommendations referred to in the last paragraph of the Registrar's letter will follow.

I have, etc.,

G. F. KEATINGE,

Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies.

No. 2849, dated 31st March 1916.

To—The Director of Agriculture and of Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

SIR,

With reference to paragraph 2 of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated February 29th, 1916, Revenue Department, I have the honour to submit that there is, in my opinion, no objection to the immediate adoption of all the recommendations of the Committee on co-operation classified as (a) subject to the following exceptions:—

(1) Recommendations (5), (6) and (7).—Model by-laws for cattle insurance together with an explanatory leaflet were drawn up by me at Simla in consultation with Mr. English and have been circulated. There has been no response as yet and no action was taken during my absence. I will in the course of the next 6 months take steps to have one or two societies started experimentally, and will then be able to report with more certainty on their usefulness. Until 30 or 40 of such societies come into existence, a re-insurance society is evidently out of the question.

(2) Recommendation 9.—Hail is not a frequent cause of damage to crops in this Presidency and hail insurance is not advocated by me or any of my staff.

- (3) Recommendation 19.—As far as I know, there is no demand for mortgage associations in this Presidency. They would only be of use in tracts where most of the land is in the hands of big Zamindars. Perhaps, however, the Talukdari Settlement Officer and the Manager of the Sind Incumbered Estates might be consulted. Professor Muller has undertaken to start a society of this type among the big landlords of Bombay after the war is over, if conditions prove favourable.
- (4) Recommendation 20.—Accepted, but a change in the name of the Bombay Central Co-operative Bank will involve an alteration in the Bank's agreement with the Secretary of State.
- (5) Recommendation 23.—In this Presidency this principle conflicts with that laid down in recommendation 22, "one society to one village." Villages in the Southern Division and in Gujarat are often much larger than in most other parts of India. When the population amounts to four or five thousand, it is necessary either to raise the maximum membership above 100, or to have more than one society in a village. As a village with a population not exceeding (say) 5,000 is a very real unit, it seems a mistake to break it up into several, possibly jarring, societies. It is proposed therefore not to insist strictly on a maximum of 100 members, but to allow increases up to about 300, provided that sub-committees are appointed for special wadas and that the society does in fact retain a substantial unity based on the mutual acquaintance of the members.
- (6) Recommendation 35.—This provision will be embodied in the model by-laws when next they are revised.
- (7) Recommendation 38.—The share system has been rejected in this Presidency for the following reasons which seem sufficient :—
- (a) The so-called shares are not shares in the true sense. They do not serve as the guarantee-fund on which deposits are secured. The term loses its natural meaning and misleads the public, when "shares" are found in a society based on joint unlimited liability.
  - (b) They imply a division of profits contrary to the letter and spirit of section 33 of the Act.
  - (c) In Burma, United Provinces, and the Punjab, where they are mostly in vogue, they are withdrawable in lump after 10 years. This period has not yet terminated anywhere; but when it does, the wholesale withdrawal of shares with accumulated profits is quite possible and may ruin the societies.
  - (d) Shares are not infrequently obtained by nominal deduction from loans advanced to members, and therefore lead to the creation of fictitious accounts. Attempts therefore will be made to build up owned capital not by shares but by working on as wide margins as possible. The success of this policy will however largely depend on the amount of the contribution which Government may require societies to make towards the expenses of supervision and audit.
- (8) Recommendation 44.—I am unable to understand the logic of this suggestion. Rates which are sufficient to attract the timid outside investor ought a fortiori to be sufficient for the member who is on the spot and capable of watching over the use made of his money by the society. The society wants to build up its owned capital by keeping as wide a margin as possible on its dealings, and cannot afford to let any preferential margin stick to the fingers of its own members. If members cannot be induced to deposit at 6½ per cent, they are not likely to be much tempted by 6 per cent, the highest rate which societies can afford to pay to depositors.

(9) Recommendation 99.—This is not a plan that is likely to be welcomed in this Presidency. Its general adoption would deprive managing Committees of the most important power of deciding what loan is reasonable for a particular purpose and what period is necessary for repayment. They would divest themselves of their right of watching over the use to which an advance was put, and would have to keep large cash reserves lying idle on hand unprofitably to meet drawals on cash credit accounts. Cash credits from Central Banks to primary societies would be of the greatest possible use and are already being gradually introduced; but from primary societies to individual members they are strongly to be deprecated.

(10) Recommendation 83.—Accepted, but insistence on a proper relation between money recovered from members and money remitted to a Central Bank would only act as an efficient check in those provinces where practically the whole of the capital of primary societies is derived from Central Banks. In Bombay, they only derive half their capital from the Central Bank and might therefore make fictitious adjustments to a large extent without being checked in this way.

(11) Recommendation 196.—A rule giving effect to this recommendation is being submitted to Government for approval. When it is published in the Gazette under section 43 (4) of the Act, it will be seen whether it provokes any opposition. I do not myself anticipate that it will.

2. The majority of the recommendations classified as (a) require no definite action from Government. The Registrar will be able gradually to give effect to them in the course of the ordinary administration of the Department. On certain points new rules will be required under the Act, and recommendations for the publication of such rules have already been submitted to you under this office No. 2805, dated 31st March 1916.

Order No. 7718.

Bombay Castle, 8th August 1916.

Read again paragraph 6 of Government Resolution No. 2305, dated 29th February 1916, regarding the latter part of recommendation No. 85 made by the Committee on Co-operation in India, viz., that a resumé of the provisions of the law dealing with the recovery of agricultural debts might be supplied to Civil Courts and Co-operative Societies and that Courts might be instructed in the absence of special reasons not to use their discretionary power to reduce a society's ordinary lending rate.

ORDER.—The Governor in Council considers that a mere resumé of the law of recovery of debts from agriculturists would not be of any practical use to an agriculturist ignorant of law or to the Courts who have to administer the law, and that it is not desirable to issue instructions to Courts which would appear to interfere with the discretionary power vested in them by law regarding the rate of interest which may be decreed by them.

No. 2260, dated Ootacamund, the 2nd October 1916.

From—The HON'BLE MR J. P. BEDFORD, I.C.S., Acting Secretary to the Government of Madras, Revenue Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

With reference to Resolution No. 2 C.-155-16 of the Government of India, dated 4th January 1916, I am directed to state that His Excellency the Governor in Council is in general agreement with recommendations Nos. 51, 78, 89, 94, 97, 98, 99, 103, 104, 114, 115, 120, 121, 123, 124, 125, 126, 129, 130, 133 to 137, 142, 146, 147, 149, 150, 156 to 158, 161, 164 to 174, 176 to 178, 181 to 184, 186 and 190 contained in Appendix III of the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India, and to transmit the following remarks in regard to the committee's other recommendations.

2. Recommendation No. 8.—There are no cattle insurance societies as yet in the Madras Presidency, nor is there any immediate prospect of many societies of the kind being formed. The Registrar has, however, been instructed to give special attention to the matter and to report in due course the result of his endeavours to organize such societies in selected areas. For the present, His Excellency in Council would prefer to defer any expression of opinion as to the formation of a central cattle re-insurance society.

3. Recommendation No. 12.—The Agricultural Department has been assisting societies formed for the distribution of improved seed and implements; such societies are under the direct control of the Registrar of Co-operation. The committee's recommendations on this subject are under consideration.

4. Recommendation No. 18.—The question of giving special encouragement to societies formed for the benefit of the poorer urban classes is likewise under the consideration of this Government. Up to date twenty-nine societies have been started for the benefit of these classes, including societies organised by certain Municipal Councils for the benefit of their scavengers.

5. Recommendations Nos. 50, 58 and 59.—In this Presidency a limit to borrowing power is fixed by means of by-laws framed at the time of the registration of each society. The limit is fixed with reference to the valuation statement alluded to in paragraph 141 of the Committee's report and is generally found sufficient for the first few years. Alterations can only be effected by means of a resolution of the general body of members; this matter is dealt with when need arises, not annually.

His Excellency in Council fears that the result of insistence on an annual revision of limits would be to make the members fix an unduly high limit, in order to meet all possible demands, the general body of the society not being in a position to forecast requirements for the year with any approach to certainty. In fact, the provision might well defeat its own object, as annual scrutiny would tend to become a mere formality. Cases in which panchayatdars misuse their powers in respect of taking loans [paragraph 59 (b) of the Committee's report] are dealt with in this Presidency either by cancellation of registry or by by-laws making loans to panchayatdars and their relations subject to sanction by the general body.

The same objections do not apply to the proposal to require a central bank or union to fix annually the maximum borrowing power of the societies which are its clients, there being much less tendency for the procedure to become an empty form in this case and but little temptation for a central bank or union to take the highest possible figure as a maximum.

6. Recommendation No. 67.—The by-laws of almost all the societies have been revised so as to make it obligatory on the panchayat or other authority granting a loan to fix in the bond itself the instalments of repayment, the terms being determined with reference to the borrower's means of repayment and the purpose for which he requires the loan. The Registrar had already been instructed to discontinue the practice of granting extensions of time for repayment. Long and short term loans have been systematized in the case of all recently registered societies in the manner indicated by the Committee. In this respect the by-laws of the Pakasala Co-operative Credit Society are typical, and I am directed to enclose a copy of them and to invite attention to by-laws 15 to 24. The Government of Madras observe that loans advanced for redeeming old debts are not classed as non-productive by the Committee. In this Presidency, five years or more are usually allowed for the repayment of loans of this description. Subject to this exception, the Government see no objection to the imposition of a two-years' limit in the case of loans advanced for non-productive purposes such as domestic or religious ceremonies or litigation; but they do not consider it necessary to frame by-laws on the subject in such minute detail as has been found desirable in Burma.

7. Recommendation No. 80.—Precautions are being taken to ensure punctuality in the repayment of loans; the accounts show clearly the extensions granted and the amount outstanding against each borrower (a) in respect of his own loans and (b) in respect of loans for which he is a surety. The Registrar has been asked to report on the desirability of introducing into this Presidency the system of accounts proposed in paragraph 74 of the Committee's report.

8. Recommendation No. 88.—So far as this Presidency is concerned, the Government do not consider it desirable that primary societies should be allowed to use their reserve funds in their ordinary business. The reserve constitutes their only item of fluid resource and is lodged with central banks, which are in a position to return it, in whole or in part, to the primary societies at a moment's notice; the continuance of this state of things seems essential as a means of enabling primary societies to meet unexpectedly heavy demands and also as a means of providing a readily available asset in the event of their insolvency.

9. Recommendation No. 95.—His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the Committee's recommendation as regards the use of the expressions "Inspection" and "Enquiry" with reference to sections 35 and 36 of the Act, but, though audit is a part of the work of the Government staff, he would prefer to retain the designation "Inspector" in their case. The staff employed at the cost of societies can be styled "Supervisors."

10. Recommendation No. 96.—The co-operative movement (comprising at present about 1,800 societies) is under the general control of the Registrar, assisted by six Assistant Registrars, each of whom is in charge of one of the six sections into which the Presidency has been divided. The Government of Madras are of opinion that there is no need for the appointment of a joint Registrar at any rate for the present; a vacancy in the office of Registrar can be foreseen and the training of a successor arranged for, as need arises. They concur in the view that the controlling officers should be well versed in in the co-operative literature of all countries, but consider that a personal experience of European methods of co-operation, though no doubt valuable, is not essential. It seems unnecessary and undesirable to lay down hard and fast rules on this subject.

11. Recommendations Nos. 100, 101 and 105.—His Excellency in Council is in general agreement with the Committee's recommendations, but would observe that the margin of the societies' profits is not sufficient for the maintenance of two agencies, one for original annual audit and the other for supervision. In G. O. No. 233 Revenue, dated 3rd February 1916 (a copy of which was communicated to the Government of India with Mr. Todd's letter of 19th February 1916), the Government have gone as far as seems feasible in this direction at present, by deputing a staff of Government auditors to conduct an annual super-audit, the societies' staff of supervisors being left to supervise and to conduct the primary audit. The Registrar has been asked to draw up rules, in consultation with the central banks and unions concerned, assigning functions to the supervisors and to the Government auditors respectively. It appears to His Excellency in Council that propagandist activities in connection with the movement cannot safely or appropriately be entrusted to the societies' supervising staff, but should be included in the work of the Government staff; the existing primary societies have little or no incentive to increase their numbers, nor does it seem equitable that they should be called upon to finance work of this description.

Status and emoluments of the Government auditing staff.—The duties of the fifty-four inspectors consist in the annual audit and inspection of the existing societies and in the organization of new societies. The monthly pay of forty-nine of these inspectors ranges from Rs. 30 to 60, the other five are designated chief inspectors and paid from Rs. 60 to Rs. 150. The introduction of the scheme set forth in G. O. No. 233, Revenue, dated 3rd February 1916, referred to above may be expected to result in a considerable reduction in their numbers and to provide a fund for increasing their pay, in cases in which such an increase is found to be really necessary.

The Government of Madras concur with the Committee's view as to the desirability of allowing Government auditors a suitable recess and of deputing them to special work of an interesting character whenever an opportunity arises.

Non-Government auditing staff and the staff of supervisors.—With reference to G. O. No. 233, Revenue, dated 3rd February 1916, referred to above, the supervisory staff to be maintained by central banks and unions will be appointed and controlled by the banks themselves, the annual super-audit being conducted by Government auditors. His Excellency in Council sees no objection to the formation of a Provincial audit union, when the original annual audit devolves on societies themselves in the manner recommended by the Committee.

Audit and supervision fund.—Steps have already been taken in the direction indicated by the Committee in regard to the provision of funds for audit and supervision.

12. Recommendation No. 102.—The Committee's view that educational qualifications are not required at present seems to require modification with regard to the conditions of particular provinces. When there is a sufficient supply of educated candidates, there can presumably be no objection to Local Governments laying down such qualifications as they may find desirable.

CENTRAL BANKS.

13. Recommendation No. 107.—The subject of guaranteeing unions is under the consideration of this Government who would prefer to defer any expression of opinion on the subject.

14. Recommendation No. 108.—The general practice in this Presidency conforms to the Committee's recommendation. Central banks show great reluctance in helping limited liability societies, except to the extent of their paid-up share capital. When an apex bank is constituted for the Presidency, arrangements can be made for financing limited liability societies on a scale proportionate to the total security which they can offer.

15. Recommendations Nos. 109-11.—This Government concur with the Committee's views. One bank of the model type has lately been established.

16. Recommendation No. 112.—The jurisdiction of three of the central banks in this Presidency extends beyond the area of a single district. When one hundred societies have been registered in a district the practice is to enquire whether shares are likely to be taken up and, if the results of the enquiry are favourable, to open a Banking Union for the district. The Committee's recommendation will be kept in view.

17. Recommendation No. 113.—There are no guaranteeing unions in this Presidency, and His Excellency in Council agrees with the Committee in considering that the system of opening independent central banks in each district is to be preferred to that of organizing branches of the provincial bank, as giving persons interested in co-operation a better chance of taking a share in co-operative work and of acquiring experience.

18. Recommendation No. 116.—It is the practice in this Presidency to insist upon primary societies becoming shareholders of central banks only if they are represented in the management of the banks. With this reservation, the Government accept the Committee's recommendation.

19. Recommendation No. 117.—It seems desirable that the rules framed on this subject should be elastic, on this understanding and subject to the reservation mentioned in the preceding paragraph, the Government are in agreement with the Committee's recommendation.

20. Recommendation No. 118.—There are no book banks in this Presidency.

21. Recommendation No. 119.—In this Presidency a small affiliation or entrance fee is levied by central banks from primary societies; in order to cover initial expenses for books, forms and furniture. No inconvenience or hardship is caused thereby and no complaints have been received. His Excellency in Council does not consider that any change is called for in the present practice.

22. Recommendation No. 122.—The Government of Madras accept the Committee's recommendation, on the understanding that provision is made for the adequate representation of primary societies in the management of central banks.

23. Recommendation No. 127.—This matter has already been dealt with in paragraph 8 above in connection with recommendation No. 88.

24. Recommendation No. 128.—The matter is under consideration and His Excellency in Council would prefer to defer an immediate expression of opinion in regard to this recommendation.

25. Recommendation No. 131.—The result of the adoption of any hard and fast rule limiting the period within which loans must be repaid would be, as the Committee foresees, to prevent co-operative institutions from supplying funds for permanent improvements. His Excellency the Governor in Council is strongly opposed to the adoption of any such rule. He regards the supply of capital for permanent improvement as one of the main functions of the co-operative movement, and while recognizing the difficulty which it involves, he is not willing to assent to its abandonment without much further consideration and examination.

of the problem than has been possible as yet. In the opinion of this Government, the object in view should be, by the provision of reserves and other fluid resources, so to strengthen the central banks as to enable them to provide capital safely for permanent improvement and not to abandon this important branch of work and so force the agriculturist either to borrow from Government or (what is much more likely), from the sowcar. The Government share the Committee's view that too much reliance should not be placed on drawing accounts with joint stock banks.

26. Recommendation No. 132.—In this Presidency central banks generally pay interest at 6 per cent per annum on fixed deposits and charge  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on loans to primary societies; the primary societies charge  $9\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on loans to their members. The Government are most anxious to increase the societies' reserves and would welcome the provision of a 3 per cent margin for central banks and primary societies if it were immediately possible. The banks have already been persuaded to raise the rate of interest charged on loans to societies by  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent in order to provide a fund for supervision, and the question of slightly increasing the present rate charged on loans to individual members is engaging the attention of this Government. Further than this His Excellency in Council does not consider it practicable to go at present, but the Committee's recommendation will be kept in view.

27. Recommendation No. 138.—The Government are in general agreement with the Committee's recommendation, which is not, however, capable of realisation in the immediate future, so far as this Presidency is concerned.

28. Recommendation No. 139.—Central banks in this Presidency grant loans to individual shareholders on the basis of their deposits. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees with the Committee in considering that the practice is open to criticism, but would deprecate any sudden change as being likely to do more harm than good.

The Committee's recommendation that central banks should not undertake any outside banking work is in conformity with local practice.

29. Recommendations Nos. 140-141.—This matter has been noticed in paragraph 5 above in connection with recommendations Nos. 50, 58 and 59.

30. Recommendations Nos. 143-144.—Loans in this Presidency are applied for and granted all the year round. The Government consider that it is not desirable or practicable to concentrate control over the proceedings of central banks to the extent contemplated in these two recommendations.

31. Recommendation No. 145.—The Government have dealt with this subject in paragraph 25 above (recommendation No. 131).

32. Recommendation No. 148.—The Government have called for further information from the Registrar on the subject of this recommendation.

33. Recommendations Nos. 151 to 155.—His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts these recommendations. The entire reserve fund of the Presidency amounted to 8.24 lakhs for the year ending 30th June 1915, falling considerably below the minimum (14.20 lakhs) mentioned by the Committee. Until a sufficient reserve has been built up it seems to His Excellency in Council to be essential that the whole of it should be invested in fluid securities of the kind specified in clauses (a) and (b) of section 32 of the Co-operative Societies Act of 1912, but the Advocate-General (the Hon'ble Mr. Corbet) has given an opinion to the effect that a society has the right to invest its funds in any of the securities mentioned in clauses (a) to (d) of section 32 of Act II of 1912 and that this right cannot be taken away by any rule. He points out that clause (e) of section 32 is restricted to the authorization of modes of investment other than those mentioned in the Act and that section 43 only empowers the Government to make rules "to carry out the purposes" specified in the Act. I am directed to suggest the desirability of removing this legal difficulty by an amendment of the Act, if it is considered that the Advocate-General has interpreted its provisions rightly.

34. Recommendation No. 159.—His Excellency in Council proposes to frame a rule under section 43 of the Co-operative Societies Act of 1912 to the effect that the net profits of limited liability societies, after payment of a dividend which is limited to a maximum of 9 per cent and payment of a contribution of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to a "common good" fund should be carried en bloc to the reserve. It is hoped that, in most cases (probably in all) this sum will exceed the legal minimum of 25 per cent. If this expectation is justified, there will be no need for a bad debt fund in this Presidency.

35. Recommendation No. 160.—Until adequate reserve funds have been formed it would, in the opinion of this Government, be premature to consider the question of building funds. There are no cases in this Presidency, in which the same building is used as a central bank's office and also as an agricultural depot or for any similar object.

36. Recommendation No. 162.—Audit orders in regard to central banks and statements showing their receipts and disbursements, assets and liabilities, profit and loss and general progress are published either in the Fort St. George Gazette or in the Gazette of the district concerned.

PROVINCIAL BANK.

37. Recommendation No. 175.—The Government accept this recommendation, but doubt whether the proportion which the fluid resource should bear to liabilities might not with advantage be even higher than that proposed by the Committee. See paragraph 33 above (recommendations Nos. 151 to 155.)

PUBLIC AID.

38. Recommendation No. 180.—The system of remunerating Sub-Registrars from registration fees does not obtain in this Presidency.

39. Recommendation No. 185.—The Committee's recommendations have the concurrence of this Government and are in general agreement with the practice in this Presidency. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that gazetted officers should be prohibited from borrowing from primary societies of which they are members.

40. Recommendation No. 187.—It is not the practice in this Presidency for the Collector or Sub-Divisional Officer to be ex-officio chairman or member of the managing committee of central banks, and it seems better that they should not hold such offices at all. The success of the co-operation movement must depend finally on the extent to which co-operators are able to undertake responsibility themselves and manage their own affairs; this spirit is best fostered in the absence of intimate official control. This argument seems to His Excellency the Governor in Council to outweigh those considerations of efficiency which led the Committee to a different conclusion.

41. Recommendation No. 189.—In this Presidency the Registrar is a whole-time officer, and this Government, in Mr. Davidson's letter No. 2001, dated 3rd September 1915, have expressed the opinion that he should so continue. The appointment of Registrar is included as a Collector's post in the cadre of the Indian Civil Service, and the Registrar is eligible for promotion in the regular line of that service. The Government agree with the Committee in considering that the limitation on the salary of the Registrar's post imposed by the Secretary of State in Despatch No. 96-Revenue, dated 22nd September 1911, should be abolished, but see no need for raising the local allowance attached to the post.

The Government are unable to accept the suggestion that the Registrar's headquarters should be fixed at the hill station which is the summer headquarters of Government, it being, in their opinion, absolutely essential that he should be in constant touch with the co-operative movement throughout the country. An occasional visit to Ootacamund gives him ample opportunity for consulting the Government, when necessary.

42. Recommendation No. 191.—Reference is invited to the remarks in paragraph 10 above (recommendation No. 96).

43. Recommendations Nos. 194 and 195.—I am to invite a reference to the proceedings of the Agricultural Conference which sat at Pusa last February and considered the desirability of appointing a Development Commissioner. Their ground for condemnation was that, in matters of business like co-operation and agriculture, promptitude of decision was essential and that the interposition of a Development Commissioner between the Government and the departmental heads would lead to delay and vacillation. The Government concur with the views expressed by the Conference. It would moreover be difficult to arrange for any satisfactory distribution of authority and initiative between such an officer and the existing heads of the two departments.

44. Recommendation No. 196.—The Government see no objection to the framing of a rule under section 43 (1) of the Act, in order to prevent co-operative societies, as such, from engaging in religious or political activities, but consider that the positive objects of these societies are sufficiently defined by their respective by-laws and that there is no occasion for any general rule on the subject.

45. Recommendation No. 197.—No need has been felt as yet by this Government for the appointment of a Co-operative Adviser with the Government of India, and the annual conference of Registrars seems to supply as much co-ordination between provinces as is necessary and to act as a sufficient check on a tendency on the part of any province to diverge too widely from the desired line of progress; absolute uniformity, on the other hand, is neither to be expected nor to be desired in a country of the size and diversity of India. In this connection, I am to invite a reference to Mr. Gillan's letter No. 2155-E.A., dated 10th April 1912; the criticisms set forth therein on the system of maintaining a staff of Imperial Inspectors-General apply in a great measure to the proposed appointment of an Imperial Co-operative Adviser.

ANNEXURE.

BY-LAWS OF THE PAKASALA CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETY, No. 1233. General.

The Pakasala Co-operative Credit Society No. 1233 is registered as a Co-operative Society under Act II of 1912 (India). Its address shall be Pakasala village, Tiruvelangadu post, in the taluk of Tiruttani in the Chittoor district. Its operations shall be confined to the villages of Pakasala (survey No. 141) and Lakshminivasapuram (survey No. 142).

2. The objects of the society shall be to borrow funds on the joint and several responsibility of all the members for being utilised as loans to members for useful purposes and generally to encourage thrift, self-help and co-operation among the members.

3. All the members shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts contracted by the society. As among the members themselves, their liability shall, in the first instance, be proportionate to the number of shares taken by them; in other words, the liability for the common debt of a member who takes two shares shall be twice that of a member who takes one share, and so on, i.e., as the number of shares increases, the liability correspondingly increases.

4. The capital of the society shall, for the present, be Rs. 500 made up of 500 shares of Re. 1 each. The value of each share shall be paid in full at the time when the share is taken by the person who takes it.

5. Any person over 18 years of age and of sound mind, residing in the villages mentioned in by-law 1, shall be eligible for admission as a member; provided, firstly, that no person can claim admission as a matter of right, and secondly, that the majority of members shall at all times be agriculturists.

6. Applications for admission and for allotment of shares shall be disposed of by the panchayat. The panchayat shall have authority either to grant admission or to refuse it without assigning reasons.

7. Every member shall take at least one share, but no member shall take more than 12 shares. Every member shall pay an entrance fee of annas 2 for each share taken by him at the time of taking the share.

8. No member shall be permitted to withdraw from the society within 5 years after his admission. But he may withdraw after such period, after giving notice in writing to the panchayat, provided that there are no debts due directly by him to the society and provided also that there are no debts due to the society in regard to which he has stood surety. When a member withdraws under this by-law, he shall be paid back the share capital actually paid by him.

9. Should a member cease to be eligible for membership at any time, his name shall be removed from the list of members and he shall be paid back the share capital actually paid by him, after deducting therefrom the moneys, if any, due from him to the society.

10. If a member dies, his membership shall ipso facto cease; and the panchayat shall pay to the heir or successor-in-interest of the deceased the share capital actually paid by the deceased, after deducting therefrom the moneys, if any, due by the deceased to the society.

11 (1) A past member shall be liable, as provided in by-law 3, for the debts due by the society as they existed on the date when he ceased to be a member, for a period of two years from such date.

(2) The estate of a deceased member shall be liable, as provided in by-law 3 for the debts due by the society as they existed on the date of his decease, for a period of one year after his decease.

12. No member shall be permitted to transfer any share or shares held by him to another.

13. With the sanction of the panchayat a member may at any time increase the number of shares held by him so as not to exceed the limit of 12 shares laid down in by-law 7. But no member shall be permitted to reduce the number of shares held by him within five years after his admission.

Borrowings by the Society.

14. It shall be competent to the panchayat to borrow money on behalf of the society either from members or from persons other than members or from other societies either by way of deposits or otherwise and to settle the terms for such borrowings; provided that the interest on borrowings or deposits from non-members other than societies shall not exceed  $6\frac{1}{2}$  per cent per annum, that interest on borrowings or deposits from members and other societies shall not exceed  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent per annum and that the aggregate indebtedness of the society to non-members shall not at any time exceed Rs. 5,000.

Fixed Deposits.

14 (a). A fixed deposit is the deposit of a specified sum of money for a fixed period of time. No fixed deposit shall be received for a sum less than Rs. 5 or for a period less than three months. Interest shall ordinarily be calculated on fixed deposits at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  per cent per annum. Should a fixed deposit be made for a period of not less than one year, the deposit being not less than Rs. 100, interest may be paid thereon at a rate not exceeding  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent per annum. Interest on fixed deposits shall be paid yearly or at such shorter intervals as may have been agreed upon at the time of deposit. Interest on fixed deposits shall cease on the expiry of the period for which the deposit was made unless notice in writing of the intention to renew the deposit for a further period of not less than three months is received in the office of the society before the expiry of the original period.

Provident Fund Deposits.

14 (b). Every member shall deposit a minimum sum or one rupee or  $\frac{1}{8}$  of the cash credit allowed per share per annum for each Co-operative year ending 30th June succeeding. He shall be at liberty to deposit more. On every rupee held continuously throughout a month from the 1st of July in any year to the 30th June closing that year an interest of one pie per mensem shall be paid in the month following the close of the year. If the sum due for any year is in arrears beyond the 30th June, the member shall pay two pies per rupee per mensem, and he shall not be permitted to exercise the privileges of a member until he pays his deposit with penalty. These deposits shall be known as Provident Fund deposits. If a member ceases to be eligible for membership, the deposit will be repaid after deducting therefrom the moneys, if any, due from him to the society. If a member dies, it will be repaid to the estate after deducting therefrom the moneys, if any, due by the deceased to the society. If a member withdraws, the deposit will be returned on withdrawal.

Savings Deposits.

14 (c). A savings deposit is a deposit made by a person who undertakes to pay to the society every month a fixed amount, one rupee or an exact multiple thereof, for a period of 24 months. A depositor paying one rupee per mensem for a period of twenty-four months shall, before the close of the twenty-fifth month, receive a sum of Rs. 25-8-0, of which the sum of Rs. 24 shall be debited in the accounts as repayment of principal and the sum of Rs. 1-8-0 shall be accounted as interest thereon. Every savings depositor shall pay his monthly deposit before the end of the month to which it relates, failing which he shall be charged a fine of two pies per month (or fraction thereof) on every rupee overdue. Should a savings depositor default for a continued period of four months his deposit account shall at once be closed and he shall be paid back the amount actually paid by him, it being open to the society to credit such amount towards any money due from the depositor to the society.

Loans.

15. Applications for loans shall be disposed of by the panchayat. Loans shall be given only to members, but no member can claim a loan as a matter of right.

16. Loans shall be given only for useful purposes. The following alone shall be deemed useful purposes:—

- (1) the purchase of seed, manure or agricultural implements and other cultivation expenses ;
- (2) the purchase of cattle and of fodder for the same ;
- (3) the manufacture or purchase of country-carts ;
- (4) the payment of Sirkar kist ;
- (5) improvements to land and purchase of land ;
- (6) the building, buying or repairing of dwelling-houses or cattle-sheds ;
- (7) advances to artisans for the purchase of implements or the raw materials required for their industry ;
- (8) advances to petty traders for purposes of petty trade ;
- (9) the payment of prior debts ;
- (10) the purchase of food grains and other necessities of life ;
- (11) ceremonial expenses not exceeding Rs. 100 ; and
- (12) educational purposes.

16-A. (1) Loans to cultivators are of two kinds—

- (a) Short-term loans.—Such as loans for seed, food, cultivation expenses or cattle fodder. Such loans must be repaid in full at the harvest of the crop for which they were issued or as soon as the produce can be profitably disposed of. Loans for kist payment fall under this category. If the panchayat is able to make suitable arrangements for proper and safe storage, repayments in specified kinds of grain may be taken and the value can be credited in favour of the borrower.

(b) Long-term loans.—For the liquidation of prior debts, for house-building, for the purchase of cattle or carts and for other purposes which will continue to be productive for several years, such as sinking of wells and purchase of land. Such loans shall be made repayable in equal yearly instalments spread over a period not exceeding 10 years. In determining the period within which the loan is to be made repayable, the panchayat shall take note of the nature of the purpose for which the loan is taken. In the event of the interest or of any instalment of the loan not being paid in full on or before the prescribed date the full balance shall be recoverable immediately. The full balance of a loan shall also be recoverable immediately in the event of the security offered becoming inadequate.

(2) Loans to artisans.—May be granted for the purchase of implements or raw materials and for the liquidation of their prior debts. Such loans should not be granted for more than a year at the most, and the loans should be made repayable in 4 or 6 equal instalments spread over not more than 12 months.

(3) Loans to traders.—May be granted for the purchase of stock in trade and such loans should not be granted for more than a year and they should be made repayable in equal monthly or quarterly instalments.

(4) Loans to wage-earners or workmen.—Should ordinarily not exceed 4 times or 5 times their monthly income and repayments may be allowed in 16 or 20 monthly instalments.

(5) Loans to weavers.—For the purchase of yarn can be given to be repaid in full every week or every fortnight.

(6) No member should receive a second long-term loan until all other borrowers have received or declined loans.

(7) The amount of loan admissible to all the members of an undivided family should not exceed the maximum loan admissible to a single-member under the by-laws of the society.

(8) Long-term loans to panchayatdars, their near relations (such as undivided coparcener, wife, divided son, son-in-law), dependants and servants should not be sanctioned except with the concurrence of the general assembly or (where it exists) the council of supervision.

17. Should the panchayat be of opinion that a loan granted from the society has been misapplied, it shall at once take steps to recover the loan with interest, without waiting for the expiry of the period for which it has been granted.

18. No member shall at any time be indebted to the society by way of principal to the extent of more than Rs. 600 on account of any loan or loans taken by him. Subject to the above maximum, a member shall be eligible for a loan not exceeding Rs. 50 for each share held by him.

19. The period for the repayment of each loan shall be fixed by the panchayat in accordance with the provisions contained in by-law 16-A. Whenever the period for the repayment of a loan exceeds one year, the yearly instalments shall be clearly specified in the bond with a condition that if an instalment of principal or interest is not paid on the due date, or for any cause the borrower ceases to be a member of the society, the whole amount shall be recoverable at once. For overdue instalments of principal, interest shall be paid from the date on which the instalment became overdue till the date of payment of the same at 2 pies per rupee per mensem. No extension shall be granted for repayment of instalments of principal or interest.

20. Loans shall be given in any of the following ways :—

(1) On the security of the deposit, if any, to the credit of the borrower, not exceeding 90 per cent of the amount of such credit ;

(2) on the joint and several responsibility of the borrower and two other members standing sureties for him, provided that the total amount for which a member can stand surety shall not exceed Rs. 50 per share ; or

- (3) on the mortgage of unencumbered immoveable property wholly belonging to the borrower, not exceeding 50 per cent of the estimated market value of such property.

21. Interest on all loans granted by the society shall, for the present, be charged at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pies per rupee per mensem. Every fraction of a month shall be treated as a whole month in calculating the interest on a loan.

22. It shall be open to the borrower to repay a loan wholly or partially before the due date according to his convenience, provided that all partial repayments shall consist of full rupees and provided also that on any partial repayment made after the first day of a month, the abatement of interest consequent on such repayment shall begin from the first day of the succeeding month.

23. When a loan is cancelled by the panchayat under by-law 17 on account of its misapplication or when the period for the payment of any instalment of a loan fixed under by-law 19, has passed without any payment being made, the loan account shall at once be closed. The panchayat shall then inform the borrower of the fact and of the amount outstanding against him including interest up to date of closing the loan account. On the total amount so found due, the borrower shall be charged interest at two pies per rupee per mensem from the date of closing the loan account to the date of recovery and steps shall be taken without delay to recover the amount.

24. Should a member become ineligible for membership at any time and his name has on that account to be removed from the list of members under by-law 9, or should a member be expelled under by-law 37, the loan account, if any, of the member concerned shall at once be closed without reference to the term for which the loan has been granted and action shall be taken to recover from the borrower the amount outstanding against him including interest up to date of closing the loan account. Interest shall be charged at two pies per rupee per mensem on the amount so found outstanding from the date of closing the loan account to the date of recovery.

Profits

25. The entire net profits of the society, as declared by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies year after year, shall be carried to the credit of the Reserve fund.

26. The Reserve fund shall be invested in such manner as the Registrar of Co-operative Societies prescribes. The fund shall be one and indivisible. It belongs to the society as a whole, and is intended to meet unforeseen losses. No member can claim a specified share in it. It shall not be drawn upon except with the sanction of the Registrar. Even if the society be dissolved, the Reserve fund shall not be divided amongst its members but shall be devoted to some public purpose at the discretion of the general assembly.

Management.

27. The ultimate authority in all matters relating to the administration of the society shall be the general assembly of members which shall meet from time to time to conduct the work of the society. The following among other matters shall be dealt with by the general assembly :—

- (1) The election and removal of the panchayat ,
- (2) the annual report due to the Registrar of Co-operative Societies ,
- (3) the Registrar's annual audit order ;
- (4) the amendment or repeal of any existing by-law or the enactment of a new by-law ;
- (5) the expulsion of a member , and
- (6) the consideration of any complaint which any individual member may prefer against the panchayat.

28. It shall be the duty of every member to attend the meetings of the general assembly. The quorum for a general assembly meeting shall be one-third of the total number of members on the list at the time.

29. The President, when present, shall preside at the meetings of the general assembly. In his absence, the assembly may choose a chairman from their number to preside at the meeting. Every member present shall have one and only one vote. All questions shall be decided by a majority of votes of the members present and voting. When votes are equal, the chairman of the meeting shall have a casting vote.

30. No amendment to, alteration in, or cancellation of, a by-law nor the enactment of a new by-law shall be made without the previous sanction of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies. When the by-law altered or amended relates to the nature and extent of the liability of the members for the debts contracted by the society, the alteration or amendment shall not be valid until it is also approved of by Government.

31. Subject to such resolutions as the general assembly may from time to time pass, the executive management of the affairs of the society shall vest in a panchayat. The panchayat shall consist of not more than five members, who shall elect from among themselves a President and a Secretary. No decision of the panchayat shall be valid unless it is passed by at least three of its members.

32. The members of the panchayat shall be elected by the general assembly for a period of two years from among the members. Should a vacancy arise in the panchayat in the interval, it shall also be filled by the general assembly. The President shall ex-officio be the Treasurer. The Secretary shall conduct all the business of the society subject to the control of the President.

33. The panchayat may make subsidiary rules regulating their work, such rules being entered in the minute book of the society.

34. Receipts shall be given for all moneys paid to the society. For moneys paid by members, the receipt shall be signed by the President or the Secretary. For moneys borrowed either from non-members or from other societies, the receipt or bond shall be executed by at least three members of the panchayat, of whom the President or the Secretary shall be one.

35. It shall be the duty of the panchayat to maintain the accounts correctly, to convene, when necessary, the general assembly, to correspond with the Registrar and to do all other business relating to the society.

36. The panchayat shall work gratuitously, but any expenses actually incurred by them in doing the work of the society may be debited to the society. If the Registrar is satisfied that the society has done good work, he may sanction some remuneration to the person doing the clerical work of the society, who may either be the Secretary or one of the Panchayatdars.

Miscellaneous.

37. If a member deceives the society in any way, or if his general conduct is such as to render his removal necessary in the interests of the society, it shall be open to the general assembly to expel such member. An expelled member shall be paid all moneys due to him from the society, after deducting therefrom any money due from him to the society. A member who drives the society to Court to recover the money due from him, shall, for that reason, be expelled from membership. An expelled member shall be liable as provided in by-law 3, for the debts due by the society as they stood on the date of his expulsion, for a period of two years after such expulsion.

38. Within fifteen days after the close of the Co-operative year ending 30th June, the society shall prepare (1) a statement showing the receipts and disbursements during the past year, and (2) a statement showing the assets and liabilities as they stood on the last day of such year. These two statements shall be submitted to the Registrar without delay. After the Registrar has verified these two statements and granted his audit certificate, the society shall publish the statements in a manner approved of by the Registrar.

Letter—from M. R. Ry. Diwan Bahadur L. D. SWAMIKANNU PILLAI Avargal, M.A., B.L., LL.B., Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Madras.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioner of Revenue Settlement, Survey, Land Records and Agriculture.

Dated—the 12th October 1916.

No.—B. & G.-137.

I have the honour to submit the following report on guaranteeing unions called for in Board's Proceedings Mis. No. 1321, dated 22nd May 1916.

2. I have stated elsewhere (administration report for 1914-15, section 29, and report on Committee's recommendation 107) that guaranteeing unions are unnecessary in the present circumstances of this Presidency. I now beg to state that the present does not seem to be a favourable time for introducing or enforcing such unions. To make up for a defect in the early organization of societies, viz., the failure to form unions pari passu with societies, the Assistant Registrars and myself are doing our best to introduce unions in all possible areas and we now make it a rule not to register a society unless there is a definite prospect of incorporating it in a union of some kind. In the case of existing societies, their consent is necessary for establishing a union and with some difficulty this consent is being secured. In societies newly organized, a by-law is introduced at the organization, that the panchayat shall have power to affiliate the society to any union with appropriate jurisdiction that may be registered for the area in question and to contribute for the expenses of the union 8 annas per annum on every Rs. 100 borrowed by the society. These are sufficiently onerous conditions, and if in addition we should require the new societies to undertake a liability corresponding to, and increasing with, every fresh loan that may be recommended by the union, I am afraid that apart from the correctness and legality of the procedure, it will simply lead to a serious breakdown of the union movement. On the sole ground of present impracticability, therefore, I would suggest that we should wait until we have completed the net work of unions.

3. Secondly, I do not perhaps quite understand the principle of guaranteeing unions. The principle, as stated in the Committee's report and in the Burma Manual (page 61), is that each society affiliated in a union should guarantee an amount equal to its own borrowings from non-members. Supposing that society A has borrowed an amount a from non-members, society B has borrowed b, and similarly societies C, D, E, F, G, H, J, K have borrowed c, d, e, f, g, h, j, k, then the ten societies together guarantee an amount represented by  $a + b + c + d + e + f + g + h + j + k$ . If out of this amount A is responsible for a, B is responsible for b, C is responsible for c, etc., there is nothing new or extraordinary in the arrangement, since A, B, C, etc., are already respectively responsible for the amounts a, b, c, etc., having already borrowed these amounts. But I suppose that something more is meant, i.e., that A for instance is a principal debtor for a, but B, C, D, E, F, G, H, J, K are sureties in respect of a, B principal debtor for b, while A, C, D . . . K are sureties for b, C principal debtor for c, while A, B, D . . . K are sureties for c.

Adding up we have the result that A, B, C, D . . . K are principal debtors for a, b, c, d, . . . k, respectively, and all together are sureties in respect of  $a+b+c+d+e+f+g+h+j+k$ . This of course is a conceivable situation, but the question is how far is it (1) practicable and (2) enforceable at law.

4. Societies in course of organization are eager to accept anything that is suggested to them as a means to an end, the end being to obtain a definite amount of loan, and if the suggestion is imperfectly explained to them or is imperfectly grasped by them, their acceptance of it means nothing in the eye of the law. In the improbable case of A being unable to make good amount a and B, C, D . . . K being sued in a court of law to make good their undertaking as sureties in respect of a, the issues will be raised, whether there was an undertaking, what was the undertaking and whether the undertaking was deliberately entered into by all the parties concerned. When a private individual M undertakes suretyship in respect of a definite amount due by another private individual N to a definite creditor O, we know what the undertaking is. M is in a position to watch the proceedings of N and if N defaults, M is responsible as surety.

5. When in a governing body meeting of a union of ten societies A, B . . . K, a loan of amount X is recommended to society G, all the other nine societies A, B, C, D, E, F, H, J, K are supposed to become sureties for G in respect of X. The governing body meeting is, we may suppose, attended only by representatives of four societies A, B, C, D. How do the other societies E, F, H, J, K, become liable under an undertaking to which they have not given a consent through their authorised representatives?

6. We have to fall back on the original constitution of societies E, F, H, J, K, under which constitution they have accepted responsibility as sureties for whatever loans may be recommended by any union to which their panchayat may affiliate them. In other words, the principle of guaranteeing unions is merely a subterfuge for converting the limited liability of societies affiliated to a union into unlimited liability. The legislature, by Act II of 1912, deliberately abolished unlimited liability for unions of societies and the principle of guaranteeing unions covertly reintroduces the principle. I can understand societies entering into a union subscribing each for a definite amount of liability to hold good as long as they belong to the union or until they, by their own deliberate act, increase or reduce the amount of liability. In other words, they would be taking shares of limited liability in a union and this is what they do in administrative as well as in banking unions in this Presidency, the typical liability being one for a share of Rs. 100, paid up in the case of banking unions, and reserved in the case of administrative unions. If necessary, the amount of liability may be increased beyond Rs. 100, so that, for instance, 20 societies in an administrative union may undertake jointly a liability for Rs. 20,000 or in other words subscribe for 100 shares of Rs. 100 each. Such a guarantee would be quite enough, but it is very different from the principle of guaranteeing unions so called, which is a principle of unlimited liability pure and simple. In the case of a guaranteeing union on the Burma model of ten societies, society A would be liable at starting for a out of  $b+c+d+e+f+g+h+j+k$ ; tomorrow it may borrow x, and then it would be liable as principal debtor for  $a+x$  and as surety also for a portion represented by a out of  $b+c+d+e+f+g+h+j+k$ , the year after, if it borrows y, its liability as principal would be  $a+x+y$  and as surety may be  $a+x$ . Every time a society borrows a certain amount, it of course undertakes to pay that amount to its own creditor; but if it is a member of a guaranteeing union, it also undertakes to pay (roughly speaking) a like amount, if rendered necessary by reason of the default of any of the societies B to K, to the creditors of those societies. I do not say it is an impossible situation, but I do think it is a situation incompatible with the principle of limited liability and may be called in question by the civil courts.

7. It may be asked how the difficulty is got over in Burma. I presume that in Burma, as in most other provinces, societies are not allowed to sue or be sued in the civil courts and the "money stick" is freely used by the Registrar. If a society fails to pay its due to its creditor, the Registrar may call upon the other societies in the union to make good the deficit and they, after paying up, may proceed to recover the same from the defaulting society, compelling it to borrow for the purpose through the union. In the end there may be a liquidation of that society—and it may be wiped out of existence after paying what it can. I presume this is the procedure in Burma, but societies in the Madras Presidency are not equally amenable to the Registrar's control. We may, when the union principle is sufficiently developed, introduce this check automatically, but at present it would be attempting too many things at a time. It may be possible, for instance, hereafter, whenever one of the societies in a union fails to pay an instalment due to the central bank, to make the other societies at once contribute the amount in their capacity of sureties; and if the defaulting society fails to make good to the union the amount thus contributed, with penal interest, it may be wound up; the other societies would then have to write off any amount that might thus be lost. But all this supposes the concentration of a considerable amount of authority in the hands of the union or of the Registrar. Central banks would probably rejoice to see the authority vested in the Registrar, but it is precisely one of those cases in which borrowing societies would fail to see eye to eye with lending banks. If societies are invited to join unions on this understanding, they simply will not join, and they may say that so long as financing banks do not require the guarantee, Government should not impose it on the primary societies. I suppose the root of the matter, after all, is that the financing banks in Burma are not prepared to lend to primary societies without some such guarantee, whereas in Madras the conditions are different.

Order—No. 2748, Revenue, dated 4th December 1916.

The Government agree with the Registrar of Co-operative Societies in considering that the system of guaranteeing unions cannot at present be introduced in this Presidency.

(7) Committee's recommendation No. 148 [paragraph 2, sub-paragraphs (i) and (ix) and paragraph 3 of G. O. No. 2259, dated 2nd October 1916] regarding enhancement of the rate of interest charged on loans to members of primary societies.—The Board at one time wished to raise the prevailing rate of interest charged to members of primary societies from  $9\frac{3}{4}$  per cent per annum to 10 per cent or more. I reported on the subject in my letter to the Board No. 8-B., dated 19th June 1916, and the Board in paragraph 2 of its Proceedings Mis. No. 2418, dated 16th September 1916, intimated that it did not propose to press this question for the present. It is true that the particular project on which I relied, namely, the formation of a Provincial bank which should lend to central banks at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  or  $6\frac{3}{4}$  per cent, is not likely to be realized for some time to come, because the Madras Central Urban Bank is not prepared to lend to district banks at less than 7 per cent; but the general conditions of the scheme for supervision, namely, that societies should contribute to the supervision fund at the rate of As. 8 per cent on their borrowings and central banks generally at the rate of  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent on their lendings, are likely to be realized without resort to the desperate expedient of raising the rate of interest all round. In the case of depressed class of societies, however, I have been able to raise the rate of interest when necessary to  $12\frac{1}{2}$  per cent per annum in order to provide the wherewithal for supervision. Lastly, certain district and central banks have raised their rate of interest to primary societies from  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8 per cent on the understanding that the extra  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent together with  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent out of the original  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent should be the contribution to the supervision fund.

Copy to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (with C. I.)
(with reference to paragraphs 26 and 32 of letter No. 2260, dated 2nd October 1916).

No. 43-Special, dated Naini Tal, the 21st May 1917.

From—The HON'BLE MR. R. BURN, C.S.I., Chief Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces, Revenue Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

With reference to resolution No. 2-C., dated the 4th January 1916, of the Government of India, I am directed to communicate the following remarks on the recommendations contained in the report of the Committee on co-operation in India. In this province the extension of co-operation is limited at present by financial stringency owing to the war and by the depletion of the cadre of officers due to the same reason. The permanent superior establishment consists of a single Registrar. During the winter of 1915-16 a joint Registrar was appointed as a temporary measure, and a similar appointment was made in November last, which still continues on a temporary basis. His Honour regrets that a full-time appointment is still impracticable, and many of the proposals of the Committee which he would like to see carried into practice, must await a strengthening of the staff, which is at present impossible.

2. On the recommendations which the Government of India desire should be adopted so far as possible and which are referred to in clause (a) of the appendix to the resolution, I am to communicate the following remarks. It will be understood that where no remarks are made the Lieutenant-Governor is prepared to accept the proposals of the Committee. A systematic enquiry into village industries, suggested in No. 2, was carried out by Mr. A. C. Chatarji I.C.S., who vacated the post of Registrar last year. The report was published in 1908 and has, no doubt, been brought to the notice of the Government of India. Since it was written, a Director of Industries has been appointed, the results of whose enquiries are being carefully tabulated. From time to time proposals for improving the trade and commerce of the province are placed before the Board of Industries for criticism and discussion. The report forms a basis for the reorganization of industries on a co-operative basis, and what seems to be needed in the future is the examination of specific industries starting from Mr. Chatarji's report as a basis, and supplemented by special enquiries. A co-operative society for manufacture of country glass is already in working order.

3. A system of cattle insurance (No. 5) has already been launched on a small scale, details of which have been communicated to the Government of India. The general meaning of insurance is little appreciated in this province at present. So far as the Lieutenant-Governor is aware the only indigenous system of insurance is confined to insuring cargoes of boats on one of the rivers. Until the cattle insurance societies are well established and this new idea has obtained some currency, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it desirable to postpone action for the establishment of hail insurance societies (No. 9).

4. In paragraph 14 of their report the Committee consider that dealings of non-credit societies with non-members should be avoided as far as practicable. As an exception they would not press this rule where the operations of the society, if confined to its own members, would be so restricted that it could not be managed with any prospect of profit or economy. These principles are accepted by His Honour, but another case which may usefully be quoted is that of a society dealing in goods or stock which may deteriorate, unless quickly disposed of. In such cases a society should obviously be empowered to sell to non-members (No. 13).

5. The Registrar, Co-operative Societies, considers it very desirable that the term "district bank" (No. 20) should be retained in this province on sentimental as well as practical grounds. Some of the district banks have already an established reputation in the money market and might be injuriously affected by a change in nomenclature. The Lieutenant-Governor suggests that in this province, at any rate for some years, the word "district" should be retained in addition to the word "central," and this class of institutions should be termed "district central banks." The Committee's suggestion (No. 30) about the secretary of a primary society is entirely accepted in principle. The Registrar fully realizes the objections to a group secretary and efforts are being made to replace him. At the same time, it must be noted that here a strict enforcement of the principle is not possible until there has been a considerable diffusion of efficient primary education. Some opposition is experienced from the staff of central institutions, as the appointment of group secretaries is a valuable piece of patronage and the existence of a group secretary means less work for the central staff than if there is a secretary in every village.

6. His Honour agrees with the Committee that it is impossible to make a specific rule forbidding members of a society to take loans outside the society (No. 35). As most of the members in the United Provinces possess no alienable rights in lands and loans are as a rule for the current and recurring needs of agriculture and not for improvements, the society should ordinarily be able to finance all members fully. This may not be possible during an agricultural calamity, but then recommendation No. 201 would come into play.

7. Paragraph 42 of the Committee's report is not very clearly worded and may give rise to a misapprehension regarding the share system in this province. Shares are not withdrawable by a man except on ceasing to be a member.

8. The practice of obtaining shares or instalments in payment for shares by deductions or loans (No. 41) has been discouraged here. It is believed that members fail to appreciate the real meaning and advantages of the share system where such a practice is allowed.

9. It is understood that legal opinion varies regarding the difference between a pro-note and a bond (No. 60). Forms now prescribed for use by societies in this province were drafted after consultation with the Legal Remembrancer and with two eminent non-official lawyers. The Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to await full experience of the working of the present forms before making any change.

10. With reference to proposal No. 60 regarding repayments, it is a common practice in this province to have half-yearly equal instalments. In many tracts of the United Provinces kharif and rabi crops are of equal importance, and members should be encouraged to pay from both crops so as to avoid the temptation to squander savings from either of them.

11. The Committee's suggestion (No. 74) that a society should be able to take a mortgage of occupancy rights and, subject to special safeguards, bring it to sale will be further considered in connection with the Tenancy Bill now being drafted. The Lieutenant-Governor cannot however admit that the condition is essential. An occupancy tenant in this province, though he has not the power of transferring his occupancy right, has an assurance of continuing in enjoyment of his holding so long as he pays his rent. It is only when he dies without heirs entitled to succeed to the holding that the security ceases. If absolute fixity of tenure and freedom of transfer were insisted on, most of the societies in this province would disappear. A proposal is already under consideration to allow zamindars to confer occupancy rights on bona fide cultivating tenants by private agreement without insisting on continuous occupation for 12 years. It may perhaps be possible to link this up with the Committee's proposal.

12. The question of mortgage of proprietary rights (No. 77) is not yet of much importance in connection with primary societies, and His Honour would prefer to consider improvements in the direction of a clear registration of title as a separate matter. A great deal of attention is already devoted in this province to the maintenance of registers of proprietary rights; and while the law does not make them absolute evidence of the right it requires registration for the purposes of certain suits and is in fact regarded as a considerable security.

13. The Registrar is strongly opposed to allowing cash credits to members of societies (No. 79), though he thinks that in course of time primary societies may obtain cash credits from central banks. In the case of unlimited liability of agricultural societies enquiry into the object of the loan taken by a member and the proper utilization of it is absolutely necessary, and it is difficult to conceive any circumstances in which it may be safely dispensed with. A system of cash credits to members will abolish all enquiries. Mr. Chataji's views on this point have received independent support from Mr. Henry Wolff in a letter recently received from him. His Honour accepts this view so far as this province is concerned.

14. Government will consult the High Court and the Judicial Commissioner regarding the proposal (No. 85) to supply a résumé of the law to courts and societies dealing with recovery of agricultural debts. It will also be considered whether co-operative societies should not contract with a local lawyer to conduct their cases. In many places it should be possible to obtain a legal practitioner who is already interested in the movement and could give expert advice on litigation.

15. I am now to explain the views of this Government on the topics enumerated in part (b) of the appendix to the resolution, omitting those on which the views of the Committee are accepted without comment. In the absence of any actuarial data regarding the mortality of cattle, it would be unsafe to start a large number of cattle insurance societies (No. 8) simultaneously in different parts of the province. The experience of the Burma societies is undoubtedly useful, but is not conclusive, for the conditions of cattle keeping are not identical in Burma and in India proper. A re-insurance society cannot be organized for obvious reasons until there is a fair number of primary insurance societies spread all over the province. Sufficient experience must be gathered by the establishment of experimental societies before any expansion can be undertaken. As at present advised it appears to the Lieutenant-Governor that the best form of Government aid to such experimental societies is a limited guarantee such as has been proposed in this province in the correspondence ending with my letter No. 1739, dated the 30th October, 1916.

16. This province has the largest number of urban societies in India, and perhaps the longest experience. In view of this Mr. Chatarji's remark that he is unable to agree with the Committee, when they state in paragraph 19 that the poorer urban classes show themselves very amenable to co-operative ideas is of some importance. These societies are passing through a period of very severe trial owing to high prices, and repayments have been exceedingly unsatisfactory. At the same time, the suggestion of the Committee that such societies deserve particular encouragement and that any form of special aid from Government is justified is accepted, and His Honour will always be glad to consider proposals in this regard.

17. The proposal that the Registrar should control the borrowing power of a society (No. 50) is in accordance with practice in this province. The maximum liability fixed by the general meeting comes under the review of the Registrar when he peruses the audit note and where necessary he cuts it down. No special report for sanction appears necessary.

18. While the proposal (No. 67) to fix the period of loans at the time of sanction is accepted and agrees with practice, His Honour is doubtful of the necessity for providing, as suggested in paragraph 64, that loans should be classified for this purpose in the bye laws. There must always be some elasticity in a matter of this kind, and it is desirable to restrict byelaws to conditions which should always be strictly observed. Laxity in the matter ought to be constantly checked at audits and inspections.

19. Special efforts have been made to devise ledger forms so as to show amounts overdue (No. 80) at a glance. The trouble which must always exist lies in dealing with extensions. It is impossible for the Registrar or even a central bank to check all extensions, and some discretion must be left to the society itself. It appears to the Lieutenant-Governor preferable to allow time by means of an extension than, as is understood to be the practice in some province, to reckon sums overdue as cash credits and the system has now been formally introduced into this province.

20. With the proposals regarding audit and supervision of primary societies (Nos. 94—105), the Lieutenant-Governor is in entire agreement. He also accepts their proposals on central banks (Nos. 107—162) and provincial banks (Nos. 164—178), subject to the following reservations.

21. The Committee suggest (No. 138) that share capital plus reserves should be at least 12½ per cent. of the total liabilities. In the case of a provincial bank the recommendation is (No. 166) that share capital plus surplus asset funds should not be less than one-tenth of the total funds borrowed from outside. His Honour thinks that the latter is a much better criterion than the former and should be adhered to in the case of central banks also. Moreover, the Registrar should have power to enforce this principle with some elasticity in the case of new central banks. A standard to which a bank of 10 years' existence may be expected to conform is probably too high in the case of a new and struggling bank in a backward locality.

22. Central banks are at present unable to divest themselves entirely of business with individuals (No. 139). Some of them are developments from old town banks, and although every effort is being made completely to eliminate all individual transactions, in a few cases progress has been limited to restricting individual loans within well defined terms. In time all individual transactions will disappear; but this could not be effected at once by a mere order or rule without considerable interference with vested rights. The principle is however fully accepted.

23. As noted above, His Honour is not in favour of allowing cash credits to individuals and, in the stage of development reached in this province, he accepts the view of the Registrar that the system could not yet be adopted with any safety in societies as a regular practice (No. 146). He is of opinion that cash credits should be given in this province only very sparingly at present. There will be a great temptation to misuse the system to disguise sums overdue, and it is very important that this should not be done.

24. The Registrar has brought to notice a class of cases in which central banks can unobjectionably make use of civil courts in the last resort. Though the Committee recommend (No. 150) that they should not ordinarily institute proceedings against a defaulting society in civil courts, an order passed by the Registrar under section 36 of the Act cannot be enforced, except on liquidation of the society. But cases often occur where a powerful sarpanch prevents other members of a society from paying. If the dispute is decided either by the Registrar or by arbitrators the decision can sometimes be enforced with advantage through the civil courts. When that is done the members pay up readily, the sarpanch is removed and the society is saved from extinction.

25. The Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared to accept the proposal that after providing fully for floating resources a central bank may use the balance of its reserve fund in its own business (No. 151). He holds strongly the opinion that the entire reserve fund of a central society should be invested outside. It would appear that the Committee have had chiefly in view the desirability of providing against panics only and have not taken into sufficient account losses that may arise from agricultural calamities, especially in a province like this where members are unable to pledge and transfer their tenure. The danger to the co-operative movement in this province from agricultural calamities is far more serious than the danger from panics in the money market. Ample experience of this was provided in 1914. It then became necessary to give a loan from Government; but the loan was repaid long before it was expected and contraction of credit was much more marked outside than in the societies.

26. Steps have already been taken to ventilate the proposal to have a provincial bank (No. 164), and I am to enclose a copy of the draft byelaws prepared by a Committee last year, which it is now proposed to publish.

27. His Honour has some doubt about the suggestion that district or sub-divisional officers should not be elected ex-officio chairmen of central banks (No. 187). If the members of a bank desire to have an officer as ex-officio chairman there seems no justification in principle for excluding him. The system has worked exceedingly well in this province, and any violent departure from it might be dangerous. It is improbable that district officers would consent to stand for election as individuals, especially if there is any likelihood of a contest, and it will be impossible always to avoid a contest. District officers by reason of ex-officio relations with the banks take a genuine interest in the movement without interfering in details. It should however be entirely optional with the societies to elect ex-officio chairmen or not.

28. The Government of India will be addressed separately regarding the necessity for a Development Commissioner (Nos. 194-195).

29. Mr. Chatarji was inclined to doubt the expediency of a rule empowering Registrars to rescind resolutions, etc., dealing with controversial opinions of a political or religious nature (No. 196). It is true that few or no signs of any abuse of the co-operative organization of this nature have yet come to light, and it may be argued that such a rule might act as a suggestion. On the other hand, it is a matter of common experience that apparently harmless organizations have been misused, and His Honour accepts the view of the Committee that it is desirable to have such a rule in reserve.

30. The Lieutenant-Governor does not concur in the suggested appointment of an expert co-operative adviser to the Government of India (No. 197). Such an appointment would be likely to lead to friction and misunderstandings, while the necessity for it is not yet apparent. Provincial conferences and conferences of Registrars and selected gentlemen interested in co-operation appear for the present sufficient to co-ordinate work and to bring to the notice of Local Governments and the Government of India matters requiring attention and modifications of law. It would, in His Honour's opinion, be a better plan to obtain a European expert at intervals of five or six years and to ask him to review the situation in the different provinces in India.

31. It will be convenient to consider together the recommendations of the Committee on fluid resources in central and provincial banks referred to in their recommendations Nos. 128, 129, 132, 155 and 175. The Government of India have reserved for separate consideration recommendations Nos. 206, 207, 208 and 209; but it is difficult to consider the case of fluid resources in central and provincial banks without some idea of the extent to which it will be possible for co-operative banks to rediscount their paper and to establish a connection with a presidency bank or State bank. Roughly the suggestions of the Committee are that the fluid resources maintained in central and provincial banks should be—

A.—For central banks—

- (a) the whole amount of current accounts
- (b) 75 per cent of the amount held in savings accounts, and
- (c) in fixed deposits, half the amount repayable during the ensuing twelve months (supposing no fresh deposits or renewals were made).

B.—For provincial banks—

Against fixed deposits—one-third the amount repayable during the ensuing year (including liabilities to be met by affiliated central banks for which the provincial bank has undertaken to provide cover).

The Registrar, Co-operative Societies, is of opinion that the standard suggested is much too high in all cases. There is no bank which keeps the entire amount of its current accounts in absolutely fluid investments. It is not easy to reconcile the committee's suggestion in this respect with its proposal that interest up to 2 per cent. should be paid on such accounts. The best security in which cover may be invested is liable to fluctuations in value at normal times and any bank which proceeded to do business on these lines would run serious risk of loss. The same argument applies to savings accounts, as a co-operative bank could not possibly give a lower rate of interest than is allowed in the Post Office Savings Banks.

32. The standard suggested by the Committee for cover of fixed deposits cannot be attained in practice unless—

- (a) the reserve fund of the bank is very large; which is a matter of slow growth,
- (b) the bank is able profitably to utilize all superfluous funds during the slack season;
- (c) the bank can easily re-discount its paper and thus always keep a certain amount in fluid cash;
- (d) at least 75 per cent. of the fixed deposits are for terms longer than two years; or
- (e) the margin between the borrowing and lending rates is unusually large, as in Burma, where there is no intermediate banking link between the provincial bank and the primary society.

In provinces where there must be a central or district bank as well we have to allow for three margins—

- (1) between provincial bank and central bank,
- (2) between central bank and primary society, and
- (3) between primary society and member.

In this province members borrow at 15 per cent. It is hopeless to expect that the provincial bank would get money at less than 5 per cent. for many years to come. The difference of 10 per cent. must provide for (1) staff and contingent expenses, (2) bad debts, (3) reserve fund, (4) loss of interest on surplus cash, and

(5) loss of interest on fluid reserve. It is difficult to see how this can be done. It appears to the Lieutenant-Governor that the committee has not made sufficient allowance for the fact that deposits in co-operative banks come from particular classes who have special confidence in them. That Mr. Chatarji's views are more fully stated in a printed note which he submitted to the committee and a copy of which is enclosed. That Mr. Chatarji has not merely been attempting to defend provincial shortcomings in the matter of providing cover appears from the figures given in the table at paragraph 155 of the report. Excluding the cash credit which the Central Provinces provincial bank holds from the Allahabad Bank it will be noticed that the United Provinces banks had comparatively the largest liquid resource on the 1st January, 1915. It appears possible that the members of the committee themselves made these suggestions on the understanding that there would be an Imperial State Bank. In particular attention may be invited to the concluding paragraphs of their report from paragraph 217.

33. If the Government of India think that a hard-and-fast rule regarding fluid resource should be laid down, the following standard seems suitable :—

For central banks—

- (a) 60 per cent of the amount in current account, no interest to be paid ;
- (b) 40 per cent of the amount in savings account, only a low rate of interest being granted, and notice of at least a month being necessary except for very small sums ;
- (c) half the amount of fixed deposits repayable during the ensuing six months (supposing no fresh deposits or renewals were made). As there are two principal crops in the season, a crisis is hardly very likely to last more than six months.

Subject to these remarks the proposals of the committee quoted in paragraph 32 are excepted.

34. With the exception of the matters noted below the Lieutenant-Governor is prepared to accept the proposals affecting the subjects of audit and supervision. His Honour is inclined to think that the scale for Registrars and Joint Registrars (No. 96) is excessive. For this province, until the number of societies exceeds 4,000, one Registrar and one Joint Registrar should suffice on the understanding that there would be a sufficient number of Assistant Registrars from the Provincial Service. At present there are two, and it seems probable that no addition will be required before 1918 if there is a competent Joint Registrar. Owing to financial pressure during the war and the depletion of the staff it has not been possible to employ a Joint Registrar continuously, but it is now hoped that this can be done.

35. For the audit of primary societies the committee recommend that societies should maintain their own staff for original audit, preferably on a provincial basis, while Government should maintain a staff for super-audit every two years. It is added that the Government auditor should be able to audit accounts of 100 societies a year, and that he should have no other work to do (Nos. 100 and 101). For the audit of central banks the agency suggested is that of expert outsiders or the Registrar's staff, the cost in either case being met by the banks (No. 161).

36. The proposals of the committee are an elaboration of the system in this province which is worked by the following staff :—

- (a) Twelve men on the Government staff who (1) audit a portion of the central banks (no fees being charged in such cases), (2) audit a portion of the primary societies and (3) perform other work, e. g. general supervision, education and propaganda.
- (b) Five whole-time men (specially selected and trained by the Registrar), paid by fees from banks and societies who (1) audit the remaining central banks and (2) audit a portion of the primary societies.

- (c) Whole-time men receiving salaries from district banks but employed directly under the orders of the Registrar to audit primary societies in their respective districts.
- (d) Selected men from among the central and district bank staff who are specially authorised by the Registrar to audit primary societies in their respective districts.

It will be possible gradually to place classes (c) and (d) on a provincial basis. Even at present they are frequently transferred by the Registrar from one district to another (with the consent of the banks) and their emoluments, appointment, dismissal, etc., are subject to approval by the Registrar. Appointments are made only from the Registrar's list. His Honour is however opposed to making any violent changes in the system. These would only upset central societies and disgust the honorary workers whom it is very desirable to retain in the movement. As regards (a) and (b), there are roughly 60 central and district banks and 3,200 societies. On the average a whole-time man can audit 15 central and district banks in a year. The recommendation of the committee that a whole-time officer should not be expected to audit more than 100 societies in a year is accepted. This province therefore requires for audit alone the whole-time services of 20 men. At least six more are required for supervision, education, propaganda, etc., and a leave reserve of two men is advisable. Of these 28 men it is suggested that eight should be paid by fees and 20 should be on the permanent Government staff. As the work expands the increase would be comparatively larger among men paid by fees and smaller among those on the permanent Government staff. The Lieutenant-Governor thinks however that the Registrar should have unfettered discretion to utilize the services of both classes as he considers necessary, in auditing primary and central societies. He is also not prepared to accept the suggestion that a Government auditor should not be employed on educational and propagandist work (No. 100). As the committee themselves point out recess and variety of work are essential to prevent staleness and in practice it is found advantageous that variety should be given.

37. In regard to nomenclature the recommendation of the committee (No. 95) is too rigid. The proposal that no man should be entirely confined to audit has already been contested, and it is a misnomer to call a man auditor unless he is doing nothing but audit work. In this province the staff of central banks are called supervisors, the Government staff inspectors, and men paid by fees are called auditors. This usage accords with the facts and His Honour would like to maintain it. The audit of a co-operative society involves some executive work. Moreover, in this province the term supervisor is already associated with that of qanungos.

Note on the advisability of maintaining a fluid cash reserve by Co-operative Banks, United Provinces.

It is understood that the Committee on Co-operation is considering the advisability of Central Banks keeping an adequate fluid cash reserve (as distinguished from the Surplus or Reserve funds) to meet crises and "runs." I was not aware of this proposal before the Committee visited this province and did not get an opportunity of mentioning the matter in my evidence before the Committee. The president very kindly told me that I could send in a note on the subject. I regret the delay in submitting the following brief note in which I have endeavoured to put forward certain considerations which appear to me to have some bearing on the subject.

2. A fluid cash reserve is of course invariably maintained by all ordinary banking institutions carrying on business according to the methods of English joint stock banks. It has however to be remembered that the system of fixed deposits for a fairly long term say a year or more is not very much in vogue in England. Deposits there are generally for a much shorter period. The Banks also deal in an entirely different kind of business and seldom have their money locked up in securities which cannot be called in within three months or less. Moreover there is no fixed rule with regard to the proportion that the fluid cash reserve should bear to the total outside liabilities of a bank. It is also well known that in the English system, the banks depend a great deal on each other and finally on the Bank of England. In spite of all these precautions it has happened that in all cases of a serious banking crisis the Bank Act has had to be suspended, or in other words the state has come to the assistance of the banking and credit system.

2. As has been pointed out by eminent authorities a Co-operative Bank is entirely different from an ordinary Joint Stock Bank. The former can lend money only to Registered Co-operative Societies and at any rate in this country the bulk of the money is invested in agricultural operations, i.e., has to be locked up for periods ranging from eight months (one harvest) to five years (for a masonry well which cannot be paid for in less than this time). A Co-operative Bank therefore bears a much greater resemblance to an ordinary business firm where the turnover is slow than to a Joint Stock Bank. I would respectfully submit that although business firms borrow very largely, nobody would suggest that they should keep a fluid cash reserve in order to meet sudden demands of repayment by their creditors.

4. So far as the United Provinces are concerned the great majority of the depositors are fully aware of the kind of business undertaken by the Co-operative Banks. They know that money comes back to these banks only when the harvest is in and crops have been sold. It is true that the Co-operative Banks had to apply for Government assistance last autumn. This step was rendered necessary by the fact that just about September and October, the sums required by the banks for advances for rabi cultivation were unusually large on account of previous famine. In other years the banks would have raised the amount required by additional borrowings but owing to the peculiar circumstances prevailing at the time this was not possible. No new deposits came in at the time and whatever cash reserves the banks held were depleted by reason of the additional loans to societies. The total sum borrowed from the Government was about two lakhs and a half. As a capital borrowed from depositors in this province exceeds forty lakhs, even if we assume that the whole of the amount lent by the Government was used in repaying depositors (an assumption very far from correct), the proportion will bear very favourable comparisons with the withdrawals from Joint Stock Banks of repute in the province and also from the Government Postal Saving Banks.

5. Prior to this, our banks passed through the Banking crisis of the autumn of 1913 and a fairly severe famine in the 1st half of 1914. There were practically no withdrawals during those two periods. On the other hand Co-operative Banks were offered more deposits than they could accept. I submit that it may therefore be claimed that an ordinary banking crisis or the tightness of the money market in a famine will effect Co-operative Banks in a much milder manner if at all than they will effect Joint Stock Banks under similar circumstances.

6. On the other hand I am very strongly of the opinion that like all business undertakings, and even more so perhaps than other business undertakings, Co-operative Banks should endeavour to build up as rapidly as possible a very strong Reserve Fund or fund of surplus profits. The money of the banks is invested in agriculture which in this country is peculiarly liable to unforeseen vicissitudes due to uncontrollable natural causes. Moreover, although there is joint responsibility as the final security, the tenants who are jointly responsible have practically no alienable or transferable rights, at least in this province. An exceptionally severe famine or a famine lasting over two years may and probably will destroy the capacity to repay not only of many individual members but also of many societies which may have borrowed from a Central Bank. It is only if the latter has a fairly large accumulated Reserve Fund that it will be able to weather such a storm. The soundness of a Co-operative Bank in my humble opinion depends not on its having a cash reserve enabling it to repay deposits falling due during a month or two of panic but on the soundness of its investments and on the strength of its Reserve Fund and (so far as depositors are concerned) on the amount of paid up share capital. Depositors in the Central Banks in this province are mostly drawn from classes familiar with the business of Agriculture and I think they are fully alive to these peculiarities which distinguished Co-operative Banks from Joint Stock Banks.

7. The policy has therefore been followed in this province of accumulating a large Reserve Fund as quickly as possible. As will appear from the printed report for 1913-14 (Statement III-A.) the loans and deposits from members and non-members in central Societies amounted to a little over 40 lakhs. Against this sum, there was an accumulated reserve fund of 3.11 lakhs and a paid up share capital of 6.31 lakhs. Moreover the gross profits of the year amounted to 1.40 lakhs of which considerably more than half would go to the Reserve Fund. In case of an extraordinary panic the whole of the Reserve Fund can easily be utilised to repay depositors for the time being. (I fully concede that this Reserve Fund should be held in fluid securities). I hope that if this policy is allowed to develop on normal lines all banks of fifteen to twenty years' standing will have an accumulated reserve fund amounting to one-third of their outside borrowings. If the fund is kept in fluid securities all the requirements of a fluid cash reserve will be satisfied.

8. On the other hand if the banks are compelled in the early stages of their existence to keep an appreciable amount in fluid cash reserve (apart from or in addition to the Reserve Fund), the growth of the Reserve Fund will be very seriously interfered with and the Banks will always remain unsound. During the first year a Central Bank can hardly ever borrow at less than 7 or 7½ per cent per annum. Liquid securities (e.g. Government promissory notes or a deposit in the Presidency Bank) seldom fetch more than 3½ per cent per annum. In other words the Bank will lose 4 per cent per annum on the amount held as a cash reserve.

It has been suggested that this loss can be avoided by entering into cash credit arrangement with Joint Stock Banks of standing. For instance Co-operative Bank A will be granted a cash credit by Joint Stock Bank B, say to the extent of rupees fifty thousand, out of which only rupees twenty thousand will be ordinarily used, the remaining thirty thousand thus acting as a fluid cash reserve. To make the latter condition really effective Bank B should itself be in a position of not being affected by an ordinary monetary crisis and there should be a clear stipulation that Bank B. would not call in the loan or cancel the overdraft without at least six months' notice. I have serious doubts whether any ordinary Joint Stock Bank (after the experience of the monetary crisis of 1913 and 1914) will agree to such terms specially when it finds that a large portion of the overdraft sanctioned is never actually used. Very recently I applied both orally and in writing to the head office of a large Joint Stock Bank for cash credit terms for two of our soundest Co-operative Banks, and made the offer that at least half the amount sanctioned would always be utilized. The application was met with a refusal although the joint stock bank was willing to grant a loan on a demand promote. (The correspondence will be submitted to the Committee if desired). Possibly a Presidency Bank which is supported by the State and usually in funds when joint stock banks are short of money may agree to the terms sketched above, but I have not yet had an opportunity of approaching the head office of a Presidency Bank on the subject. I may state however that in November last the Agent of a Presidency Bank in one of our towns informed the local co-operative Bank that he could not entertain the idea of giving the latter a cash credit.

What a serious inroad this will mean on the gross profits can best be illustrated by concrete examples taken at random from the returns of our Central Bank.

9. The Mainpuri District Bank owed in 1913-14 Rs. 1,86,000 to depositors and creditors. If it kept one-third or Rs. 62,000 in liquid securities the loss would have been roughly Rs. 2,500. The total gross profits of the year were

Rs. 5,694. Deducting Rs. 2,500 the profits would have been Rs. 3,194. After paying 8 per cent dividend on the share capital of Rs. 22,200 the balance left would have been Rs. 1,318 only for reserve, contingencies, buildings, etc., an entirely inadequate sum in my opinion in view of the extent of the business.

10. The Jaunpur District Bank owed Rs. 1,92,000 to depositors and creditors and made a profit of Rs. 5,541 at the end of the year. Had it kept Rs. 64,000 as fluid cash reserve the loss thereon would have reduced the profit to Rs. 3,000 roughly. After paying 8 per cent dividend the balance available would have been about Rs. 1,400.

11. The advantages to be derived from a liquid cash reserve in the early stages of a Co-operative Bank are to my mind incommensurate with the disadvantages. I fully admit that the inability of bank to pay its depositors in case of demand will be a serious matter. I think however that the movement will receive a very much severer shock if a bank becomes insolvent as the result of an agricultural calamity, and agricultural distress is far more frequent in this country than monetary crisis of a character likely to affect Co-operative Banks.

12. The dangers of a run on the banks at any given moment can I submit be met by more effective measures than the prescription of a minimum cash reserve. I mention three such courses, all of which would I think be adopted in future by our Central Banks.

(1) At least two-thirds of the total capital borrowed from depositors or Non-Co-operative Banks should be derived from investors in the area of operations of the bank (e.g., from residents of the district in the case of District Banks). It is natural and has been amply borne out by our experience that the directors can exercise a great deal of personal influence on local depositors and thus allay panic amongst them.

(2) At least one-third of the borrowed capital should be in the form of deposits or debentures repayable after two years or a longer term.

(3) At least half of the borrowed capital should be repayable after due notice, of a year or a longer period as the case may be, terminable on the 1st January or 1st July, i.e. when the banks are generally in funds after the two chief harvests of the year.

In addition to these measures, current deposits should be discouraged and savings deposits should be accepted only on terms not unfavourable to the bank.

Food-grains, owing to bountiful harvests, consequent on a good monsoon, are lower than at the outbreak of war. The rise in other classes of articles is clearly due to the war. Jute manufactures (sand bags, etc.) have risen 29 per cent, indigo 157 per cent, shellac 189 per cent, wool 28 per cent, saltpetre 60 per cent, and cotton manufactures 126 per cent.

2. Retail Prices of Food-stuffs in Calcutta.

The general level of retail prices of food-stuffs in Calcutta at the end of July, 1917, i.e., after three years of war, showed a rise of 16 per cent, as compared with the period immediately before the outbreak of war, of 7 per cent, as compared with the end of July, 1915, and of 5 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of 1916.

The extent to which each of the different categories of food articles has risen or fallen in price during these stated periods will be seen from the following index numbers, which are based on prices at the end of July, 1914, the pre-war period :—

At the end of July, 1917, prices of sugar and salt showed increases over those at the outbreak of war, by 81 per cent and 50 per cent, respectively. The group dairy-products (milk, etc.) advanced 35 per cent. The rise in tea, wheat flour, and fruits and vegetables ranged between 19 per cent and 12 per cent. Food-grains (Cereals and pulses taken together) increased 10 per cent, pulses separately showed a rise of 9 per cent, and rice 4 per cent. There was a rise of 8 per cent in the price of fish and 2 per cent in the price of fowls. On the other hand, a fall of 22 per cent was noticed in mustard oil, 11 per cent in eggs, and 1 per cent in meat.

It is interesting to compare this rise in the food prices in Calcutta with that in other countries abroad as shown below. The statistics have been compiled from the Board of Trade Labour Gazette, London, and in the case of Australia, from a return furnished by the Commonwealth statistician.

3. Freights from Calcutta.

Freights from Calcutta to London at the end of July, 1917, as compared with the pre-war period (end of July 1914), increased considerably, but as business has been very much restricted on account of scarcity of tonnage, quotations for all articles are not now available. The rates for rice and wheat are now 14½ times, for cotton 13 times, and for hides 9 times—the pre-war rates. The freight for tea, however, owing to a special arrangement made by the Tea Association, is a shade more than twice the rate that prevailed at the outbreak of war. The following table shows the level of freights since July, 1914.

Index Numbers of Freight rates from Calcutta to London.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday,
8th September 1917.

Burma.—The rainfall during the week was general throughout the Province. On the Tenuaserim coast the fall was heavy, Mergui, Amherst, Tavoy and Thaton reporting falls exceeding 15, 13, 12 and 10 inches, respectively. In seven other districts the fall exceeded 5 inches. In the dry zone except in Thayetmyi, Minbu, Kyaukse and Yamethin the rainfall was poor. In the northern districts and in the Shan States good rain fell. Transplantation of the main winter rice crop has been practically completed in Lower Burma and in irrigated tracts of Upper Burma. In the dry zone of Upper Burma reaping of miscellaneous crops and late sesamum is proceeding. Cultivation of juar, peas and late sesamum continues. Standing crops are in good condition. Livestock is healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has fallen further to rupees 80 and is now 30 per cent below the normal rate. The market for white rice is unsteady.

Assam.—The weather is hot. More rain is still wanted for the transplantation of winter rice in Cachar and in the Lower Assam Valley. Harvesting of autumn rice is approaching completion. Cutting of jute, manufacture of tea and transplantation of winter rice continue. The outturn of autumn rice, jute and tea and prospects of other crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The price of common rice is fairly stationary.

Bengal.—During the week light to moderate rain fell all over the Province. More rain is, however, urgently needed in several districts for standing crops and for agricultural operations, especially the steeping and washing of jute and the transplantation of paddy which is proceeding slowly. Weeding continues. Harvesting of jute and other autumn crops continue. The recent rise of rivers has improved the prospects of broadcast winter paddy in eastern Bengal. Cattle disease is reported from eight districts. Scarcity of fodder is still being felt in parts of Hooghly, Dacca and Mymensingh. The average price of common rice has fallen by about 0·4 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week light to moderate rain was general over the Province. Harvesting of jute and other autumn crops is in progress. Transplantation of paddy continues in some districts. More rain is wanted for the purpose. Barhanga, Bhagalpur and Purnea. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in two districts, fallen in five and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from fourteen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall was again general but some districts require more rain for rice. A break is needed in certain Himalayan and Bundelkhand districts. Harvesting of indigo, maize, millets and early rice is going on. Weeding of autumn and preparation for spring crops are in hand. Standing crops are generally flourishing. Prospects are good. Agricultural stock is doing well though cattle disease has not decreased. Fodder is scarce in the flooded parts of Ballia but elsewhere is sufficient. Prices are practically stationary.

Punjab.—Light or moderate rain was nearly general. In parts of a few districts it was fairly heavy. More rain is not required for the present. Sowing of autumn crops have been completed and are normal. Standing crops are generally in good condition but in some districts cotton, maize and chur have been damaged by excessive rains. Picking of cotton and reaping of bajra and maize have commenced in some districts. Oilseeds and grain are being sown in a few districts. Cattle are healthy. Fodder and water for drinking and irrigation purposes are sufficient. In some districts canals are closed owing to heavy rainfall. Stocks of food grains are sufficient. Prices are stationary and generally close to the normal and wartime rates, except those of cotton which are in some cases below normal. Prices of wheat:—Rawalpindi 9½, Lahore 9½, Lyallpur 9½ and Ambala and Feroz pore 10 seers per rupee.

North West Frontier Province.—During the week rain fell in Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan. Fodder and water are sufficient. The condition of cattle is good. Prospects of the autumn and spring crops are average. Sarshaf and taramira are being sown and cotton and chilies picked in parts of Peshawar. The outturn is average. Sowing of maize has been finished in Bannu. The Bahapur canal in Dera Ismail Khan has been stopped. The price of wheat in Peshawar is 9½ and in Dera Ismail Khan 10½ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Report not received.

Kashmir.—The rainfall during the week was good in Anantnag. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are high.

Rajputana.—General rain fell during the week. Standing crops are in good condition but they have been damaged in most places owing to excessive rain. Harvesting is commencing. The condition of cattle is fair to good. Water and fodder are ample. Prices are generally steady.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general. The principal falls were 9 inches in Manpur, 8 inches in Alirajpur, 8 inches in Indore City, Mehidpur, Kannod, Sailana, Rutlam, Jaora, Bagli, Dhar, Barwani and Jobat and 1 inch in Kharan, Garot and Bundelkhand. Autumn crops are being weeded except in Indore and Malwa where the operation has been stopped owing to continuous rain. Sowing of late crops has been retarded in Gwalior owing to rains. Land for spring crops is being prepared in Bundelkhand. Standing crops are unsatisfactory in Gwalior and fair to good elsewhere. Damage by heavy rain is reported from the Bhopal, Malwa and Baghelkhand Agencies and by insects and rats from certain parganas in Gwalior. Agricultural stock is in good condition except for cattle disease. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are high in Bhopal and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—During the week light to moderate rain fell throughout the Province. Continuous rain has damaged autumn crops slightly and retarded preparation of land for spring sowings in parts of the Nerbudda and Jubbulpore divisions. Elsewhere crops are faring well. Weeding continues. The supply of fodder is adequate and agricultural stock is in good condition. The price of rice shows a fall. Variations in other prices are unimportant.

Pendatory States.—There was ample rain. Prospects are generally favourable.

Bombay.—Good rain fell during the week throughout the Presidency but more rain is still needed in eastern talukas of Nasik and in Ahmednagar, Poona, Satara, Belgaum and Dharwar. Standing crops are in good condition except for slight damage by rats in four talukas of Karachi, by rats and grasshoppers in the desert division and in one taluka of Thar and Parkar, by insects in parts of the Upper Sind Frontier, by continuous rain in two talukas of Breach, parts of the Upper Sind Frontier, Thar and Parkar, Kaira, the Panch Mahals and Rewa Kantha and by floods in two talukas of Larkana. The fodder supply is adequate except in two talukas of East Khandesh and Ahmednagar. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Drinking water is adequate. Water for irrigation is deficient in parts of Dharwar. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—The rainfall during the week was good but excessive in parts. The average fall was 8 inches, 59 cents. The highest fall was 10 inches 5 cents in Yellandu. The early rice crop is in fair to good condition and is being weeded. It has suffered from blight in parts of Andol. Sowings of spring crops are progressing. Cattle disease prevails in seven talukas. Prices of grains are high and steady. The highest price of juar in districts is 7 seers per rupee in Bidar and the lowest 17 seers per rupee in Raichur.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was good in Kadur, Shimoga and Hassan and light to fair elsewhere. The price of ragi has risen in Tumkur and that of rice has risen in Hassan. Markets are well supplied. Sowing and transplantation operations for paddy and ragi are in progress. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects of the season are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 7 inches 78 cents. Transplantation of rice has been completed and picking of cardamom has commenced. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was very heavy in Ganjam, Malabar, South Kanara and Cochin, heavy in the Vizagapatnam Agency, Godavari, Sandur and the Nilgiris, good in the Vizagapatnam littoral, Kistna, Guntur, Decan except Sandur, Nellore, Chittoor and Travancore, nil in Pudukkottai and light to fair elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but rain is required in parts of three districts. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding normally with outturn fair to normal generally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is sufficient except in parts of Ganjam, Bellary, Anantapur, Nellore, South Arcot, Central except Trichinopoly and South except Tanjore. Pasture is sufficient except in three districts and in parts of three others. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

RESOLUTION.

The Governor-General in Council has decided to appoint a Commission to enquire into the condition and prospects of the University of Calcutta and to consider the question of a constructive policy in relation to the questions which it presents. An announcement on the subject was made by His Excellency the Chancellor of the University at the Convocation held on the 6th January 1917.

2. It is the desire of the Governor-General in Council that the constitution of the Commission should ensure an investigation of the problems connected with the University and the formulation of recommendations in the light of the best expert opinion upon the present requirements of university instruction and organisation. The assistance of His Majesty's Secretary of State was accordingly enlisted for the selection of persons fully acquainted with recent developments of university education in the United Kingdom. With these will be associated three persons competent to advise upon the peculiar conditions which prevail in India. The composition of the Commission will be as follows:—

President.

1. Dr. M. E. Sadler, C.B., M.A., Litt.D., LL.D., Vice-Chancellor of the University of Leeds.

Members.

2. Dr. J. W. Gregory, F.R.S., D.Sc., M.I.M.M., Professor of Geology at the University of Glasgow.
3. Mr. P. J. Hartog, M.A., B.Sc., L-ès-Sc., Academic Registrar, University of London.
4. Professor Ramsay Muir, M.A., Professor of Modern History at the University of Manchester.
5. The Hon'ble Sir Asutosh Mukherjee, Kt., C.S.I., M.A., D.L., Puisne Judge, High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.
6. The Hon'ble Mr. W. W. Hornell, M.R.A.S., M.A., Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.
7. Dr. Zia-ud-din Ahmed, C.I.E., M.A., D.Sc., Ph.D., Senior Tutor and Professor of Mathematics, Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

Mr. G. Anderson, an Assistant Secretary in the Department of Education of the Government of India, will be Secretary to the Commission.

3. As regards general terms of reference, the Commission will be empowered to enquire into the working of the present organisation of the University of Calcutta and its affiliated colleges, the standards, the examinations and the distribution of teachers ; to consider at what places and in what manner provision should be made in Bengal for teaching and research for persons above the secondary school age ; to examine the suitability of the present situation and constitution of the University and make such suggestions as may be necessary for their modification ; to make recommendations as to the qualifications to be demanded of students on their admission to the University, as to the value to be attached outside the University to the degrees conferred by it and as to the relations which should exist between the University and its colleges or departments and between the University and the Government ; and to recommend any changes of constitution, administration and educational policy which may appear desirable.

4. It is expected that the Commission will assemble during the first week in November 1917. The President of the Commission will decide on the times and places of its meeting, on the witnesses to be called and on other similar matters. It is possible that the Commission may for purposes of comparison desire to study the organisation and working of universities in India other than that of Calcutta. The Commission will accordingly, through their Secretary acting under instructions from the President, correspond direct with local Governments, the universities and any educational officers and local authorities with whom direct communication may be authorised by local Governments as a matter of convenience. The Governor-General in Council trusts that all communications or requests for information which may be issued by the Commission may be treated as urgent and that, in the event of the Commission or its members visiting any locality, every facility may be afforded for their enquiries.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all local Governments and Administrations.

ORDERED also that a copy of the Resolution be forwarded to the Finance, and Foreign and Political Departments of the Government of India, to the President and Members of the Commission and that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915,
(5 & 6 Geo. V. Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Viceregal Lodge, Simla, on Wednesday, the 12th September, 1917.

PRESENT :

THE HON'BLE MR. G. R. LOWNDES, Vice-President, presiding, and 58 Members, of whom 52 were Additional Members.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I beg to lay on the table a statement* showing the number of gazetted appointments above the rank of Registrar in the Government of India Secretariat and attached offices."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

1. " Are the proceeds of the War Loan<sup>The War Loan.</sup> left with the Presidency Banks until they are actually required by Government for disbursement ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" The bulk of the loan proceeds paid into the Presidency Banks was left with the Banks for a considerable time and has been only gradually withdrawn. Advantage has however been recently taken of the easy money conditions which are now prevailing in this country to withdraw the loan proceeds at a somewhat more rapid rate than would have sufficed for the immediate necessities of Government. This course, which is clearly in the interests both of the Banks and of the money market generally was adopted at the wish of the Banks whose convenience has been constantly consulted in effecting withdrawals."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Export of linseed.

2. "(a) Is it a fact that a large quantity of linseed is imported into the United Kingdom from Argentina for the purpose of manufacturing margarine and that the quantity of linseed imported into the United Kingdom from the countries within the British Empire, including India, is equivalent only to 64 per cent. of the total quantity imported ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to consider the question of so encouraging the cultivation of linseed in India as to diminish the imports of that seed from countries outside the British Empire ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative except that the purpose for which, Argentina linseed is imported into the United Kingdom is not, it is believed, the manufacture of margarine. The oil is understood to be used principally for paints and varnishes and the cake for fodder.

(b) In view of the improbability that sufficient freight will be forthcoming in the near future to convey the quantities of linseed already available for export from India, the Government of India do not consider it either necessary or desirable to take any special steps to encourage the increased cultivation of this crop at present."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

roads.

3. "(a) Are there adequate agricultural roads in India for transporting the agricultural produce of the ryot from the field to the nearest market ?

(b) If not, will Government be pleased to give the names of the Provinces in which the want of an adequate number of such roads is still felt ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"The subject matter of the Hon'ble Member's question is purely provincial and the information desired can best be obtained by questions in the Provincial Legislative Councils."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Cultivation of wheat.

4. "(a) Is it a fact that the French Government some time ago resolved, to raise the premium granted to peasants from 3 to 5 per cent for increasing the area for the cultivation of wheat ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to consider whether stimulus cannot be given to cultivators in this country of all kinds of food-grains, specially wheat, in a similar way ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The Government of India have no information.

(b) The Government of India have already asked the Local Governments of the chief wheat-growing Provinces to take special steps to stimulate the cultivation of wheat and other food-grains during the coming season."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Financing of exports of commodities of national importance.

5. "(a) With reference to the communiqué summarising the results of the conference held on the 3rd January last between the Hon'ble Finance Member and various banking representatives, and to the statement therein made that the fullest assurances were given by those present that the financing of exports of national importance in connection with the war would have the first claim on the resources of the Exchange Banks,' will Government be pleased to state how far these assurances have been given effect to?

(b) To what extent have importers of produce co-operated with the Exchange Banks in order to secure that the proceeds of their imports are similarly made available, so far as they may be required, for the financing of export of commodities of national importance?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" (a) The Government of India believe that the British Exchange Banks have scrupulously adhered to the assurances given at the Conference referred to by my Hon'ble friend in the matter of giving priority in finance to exports of national importance.

(b) With the co-operation of Chambers of Commerce, Trades Associations, etc., the attention of the mercantile public was drawn some months ago to the fact that it was essential in the national interest that importing, shipping and other firms should make the funds at their disposal directly available for the financing of such exports. The great majority of these firms have responded to the appeal in a very public spirited manner. A few instances have come to notice in which importers have disposed of their remittances direct to exporters of articles not on the preferential list at rates higher than those at which exchange business is now carried on under agreement with the Secretary of State for India. It is believed, however, that the Chambers of Commerce and Exchange Banks are taking such action as is possible to prevent transactions of this kind, and I may express the hope that any firms and brokers who deal in such business will discontinue it when they realise that it is detrimental to the scheme for the regulation of exchange which is now in force and to the financing of exports of urgent importance for carrying on the war."

The Honble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

6. " (a) Is it a fact that the volume of Indian export trade has been materially curtailed by the restrictions which have been placed on the amount of the Secretary of State's weekly Council drawings? Indian export trade.

(b) Is it a fact that the export trade is at present more handicapped by difficulties in the way of freight than by those of exchange?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" (a) The answer is in the negative. The value of articles of private merchandise exported from India in the year 1916-17 amounted to 241 crores against 182 and 197 crores, respectively, in the years 1914-15 and 1915-16, and 249 crores in the pre-war year 1913-14. Thus, the value of exports last year was substantially in excess of their value in the two previous years and very nearly reached the figure attained in the record year which immediately preceded the outbreak of the war. It is true that restrictions on exchange only came into force during the last three months of 1916-17, but the figures for the first four months of the current year, April to July, show very similar features, the value of exports amounting to 72 crores against 61 and 73 crores in the corresponding months of 1915 and 1916, and 83 crores in the same period of 1915.

(b) It is necessarily impossible to obtain statistics to show the exact extent to which exchange considerations and the difficulties of obtaining freight, respectively, have impeded trade. From representations, however, which have been received by the Government of India it would seem to be the case that trade is at the present time more handicapped by shortage of tonnage than by exchange difficulties."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; [12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]
Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur ; Sir George
Barnes ; Sir Robert Gillan.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

7. "Will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, have been taken in the different provinces of India by State or private agencies for providing proper housing accommodation to the poorer classes living in cities and large towns?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The information will be obtained from the Local Governments."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

8. "(a) Do the enquiries made by the Public Services Commission show that in the Factory Inspection Department at present, out of 21 Government officers in the various Provinces in receipt on the 1st April 1913 of salaries of Rs. 200 or more, 17 were returned as Europeans and 4 as Anglo-Indians?"

(b) If so, do Government propose to take necessary steps to employ qualified Indians of unmixed Asiatic descent in the Department?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The figures which are correctly quoted by the Hon'ble Member represent the Officers of the Factory and Boiler inspection departments collectively and not those of the Factory inspection department alone.

(b) All the recommendations made by the Public Services Commission are being carefully considered by the Government of India, and we are not yet in a position to state conclusions."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

9. "(a) Is it a fact that the Dacca-Narayanganj mail-steamer occasionally misses the Goalundo—Calcutta mail-train causing serious inconvenience to passengers?"

(b) Is it a fact that Goalundo is at present the terminus of the Eastern Bengal Railway, and that Faridpur is nearer Narayanganj than Goalundo?"

(c) If so, will Government be pleased to consider the question of extending the terminus of the Eastern Bengal Railway from Goalundo to Faridpur, with a view to shorten the time of the journey from Calcutta to Narayanganj?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied :—

"(a) It has been ascertained that during the last 12 months the Dacca-Narayanganj mail-steamer missed connection with the Eastern Bengal Railway mail train on one occasion only.

(b) It is a fact that Faridpur is nearer than Goalundo to Narayanganj, but it is not possible to adopt Faridpur as a fixed point in view of the varying conditions of the river. The present terminus, which is called Goalundo is not a fixed station but is moved up or down the river within a distance of about ten miles.

(c) A proposal to move the terminus to Faridpur for the flood season only was considered by the Eastern Bengal Railway a few years ago: the proposal was abandoned as the khal giving access to Faridpur was found unsuitable for steamer traffic."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

10. "(a) Did Mr. Chaubal, in his additional Note to the Report of the Public Services Commission, recommend the appointment of an Educational Commission which will take evidence and settle the proper lines on which secondary and higher education should be run under the altered conditions of the country and to suit the present time ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state if they intend taking any steps to appoint such a Commission ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

“ (a) Yes.

(b) The Commission which will shortly enquire into the University of Calcutta will consider inter alia the qualifications to be demanded of students on their admission to the University. Their recommendations will primarily be applicable to those areas which fall within the jurisdiction of the University of Calcutta. But the Government of India do not propose to take any further action until their recommendations have been received and considered.”

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

11. “ (a) Have the Government of India frequently declared that in the Agricultural Department the object to be kept steadily in view is to reduce to a minimum the number of experts appointed in England and to train up indigenous talent so as to enable the country to depend on its own resources for the recruitment of its agricultural staff in the higher branches ? Recruitment for the Agricultural Department.

(b) Did the Public Services Commission recommend that facilities should be offered to Indians to enter the higher branches of the Agricultural Department in India ?

(c) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking to carry out this recommendation ? ”

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

“ (a) and (b) The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) This question is under consideration together with the other recommendations of the Commission affecting the Agricultural Department.”

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

12. “ (a) Did the Public Services Commission recommend that members of the I. C. S. should not be appointed as Directors in the Department of Agriculture ? Directors of Agriculture.

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to make a statement as to the steps, if any, which they intend taking in regard to the recommendation ?

(c) Did the Secretary of State for India recommend that officers of the Agricultural Department should be given an opportunity of proving their fitness for the post of Directors in that Department ?

(d) If so, will Government be pleased to make a statement as to the steps, if any, which they have taken in regard to the recommendation ? If no steps have been taken, will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking in the matter ? ”

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

“ (a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) The matter is still under the consideration of Government.

(c) The reply is in the affirmative.

(d) The Secretary of State's instructions have been communicated to Local Governments with whom it rests to give effect to them. So far as the Government of India are aware two officers of the Agricultural Department are at present officiating as Directors in their respective Provinces.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur ; Mr. R. A. Mant ; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Appointment of Indians to the Public Works and Railway (Engineering) Departments.

13. "(a) Did the Public Services Commission recommend that in the Public Works and Railway (Engineering) Departments provision should be made for obtaining half of the staff from India ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking to carry out this recommendation ? "

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The Public Services Commission have recommended certain changes in the manner of recruitment of engineers for the Public Works, and Railway (Engineering) Departments, the result of which would ultimately be to increase the proportion of appointments open to statutory natives of India from thirty-seven and a half to fifty per cent of the total strength.

(b) The recommendations are at present under the consideration of the Government of India."

Employment of Indians in the Boiler Inspection Department.

14. "(a) Have the Public Services Commission pointed out in their Report that in the Boiler Inspection Department Indians of unmixed Asiatic descent do not appear to have obtained entry ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to take the necessary steps to remedy this state of affairs ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) I have already informed the Hon'ble Member that the recommendations made by the Public Services Commission are receiving the careful attention of the Government of India, and that the Government are not yet in a position to state conclusions."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Enhancement of pay of branch
masters.

15. "(a) Is it a fact (i) that the Public Services Commission have expressed the opinion that the only safe criterion of salary is 'that Government should pay so much and so much only to their employes as is necessary to obtain recruits of the right stamp and to maintain them in such a degree of comfort and dignity as will shield them from temptation and keep them efficient for the term of their service,' and (ii) that the Calcutta High Court (in Emperor vs. Haraset Bose) has held that the pay of village post masters is inadequate ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to enhance the pay of branch post masters, and pending the development of the necessary scheme, revert to the old custom of granting them a small commission on the sale of stamps ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The quotation which the Hon'ble Member has made from the Report of the Public Services Commission is quite accurate and it is also accurate to say that the High Court of Calcutta in the case mentioned commented on the low wages paid to a certain village postmaster.

I should point out that the duties of a village postmaster in this country as in other countries do not provide whole time employment for a man, and it is consequently the policy of the Government to secure village postmasters who have got other employments or emoluments and who are able to give part of their time to the work of postmaster. In the particular case in question, for instance, the postmaster had an income of Rs. 15 a month from other sources.

in addition to the postal allowance of Rs. 8 a month mentioned by the High Court.

The circumstances of each case and the total emoluments of each man are reviewed annually.

In answer to the last part of the Hon'ble Member's question, the Government do not propose to revert to the system of paying commission on the sale of stamps."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

16. "(a) Have the Public Services Commission recommended that, with a view to introduce a system of direct recruitment to the Imperial Branch of the Forest Department Service in India, steps should be taken to establish at Dehra Dun a course of training in forestry up to the highest European standard? Recruitment for the Imperial Branch of the Forest Department.

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they contemplate taking to give effect to this recommendation?"

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) The question is under the consideration of the Government of India, but they are not at present in a position to make any statement on the subject."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

17. "(a) Did the Public Services Commission recommend that not less than one half of the vacancies hereafter arising in posts in the Customs Department in India, carrying salaries of Rs. 200 a month and more, should be filled by statutory natives of India? Appointment of Indians to the Customs Department.

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they intend taking to carry out the recommendation?

(c) Did Mr. Chaubal in his minute regarding the Report of the Commission on the Customs Department point out that out of 246 posts in that Department carrying a salary of Rs. 200 and more, only 27 were held by Asiatic Indians and Burmans?

(d) If so, will Government be pleased to take steps to ensure a larger employment of Asiatic Indians?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The Public Services Commission recommended that not less than one half of the vacancies hereafter arising in the Customs Department should be filled in India by statutory natives of India. This recommendation referred to appointments in the Imperial Customs Service. The Commission did not make any recommendation regarding the subordinate services, which are under the control of the Local Governments. It is, however, correct that Mr. Chaubal pointed out in his minute that out of 246 posts in the Department carrying a salary of Rs. 200 and more, only 27 were held by Indians.

The action to be taken on the Commission's Report is still under the consideration of the Government of India, and I cannot make any statement on the subject."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

18. "(a) Have the Public Services Commission in their Report pointed out that 'there is a growing demand in various parts of India for the highest forms of veterinary training. Veterinary training.

And have the Commission recommended 'that as soon as possible classes teaching up to the highest standard should be established in India and that the passed students of these classes should constitute the normal field of recruitment for the Imperial branch of the Department (i.e., Civil Veterinary Department)' ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking regarding the establishment of classes teaching up to the highest standard ?

(c) Have the Public Services Commission recommended that 'pending the development of a complete scheme of training in India, a system of State scholarships should be instituted by which likely young men would be enabled to proceed to Europe with the object of gaining the diploma of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons' ?

(d) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking to carry out this recommendation ?

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"The answer to questions (a) and (c) is in the affirmative.

With regard to questions (b) and (d), no decision has yet been arrived at on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, but Local Governments and Administrations will shortly be consulted regarding the recommendations referred to by the Hon'ble Member, and the whole question of veterinary education will be considered by the Board of Agriculture in December next."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur asked :—

furniture.

19. "What is the allowance of lamps and oil for lighting the barrack rooms of Indian units, and what other barrack furniture is provided them by the State ?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"Under existing rules, lamps and oil are only allowed to Indian units at Port Blair and in Burma; except to bodyguards, no furniture is supplied by Government to the barrack rooms of Indian units. The actual scales are shown in Army Tables, Miscellaneous Services.

The supply of lamps and of a suitable scale of furniture to Indian units generally is at present under the consideration of Government."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

20. "Will Government be pleased to state how much money due to merchants in India for goods exported by them is locked up in the United Kingdom by reason of the prohibition of the export of gold and silver and the lack of facilities for the sale of Council drafts ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The Government of India have no information as to the amount of money due to merchants in India for goods exported to the United Kingdom."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir William Meyer ; Sir William Vincent.]The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

21. "With reference to the constitution of Boards in the various provinces to encourage recruitment to the Indian army will Government be pleased to state—

Recruitment for the Indian Army.

"(a) Whether the cost which will be incurred by additions to the regular forces will be paid from the Indian revenues or is to be borne by the British Exchequer ;

(b) Whether the increased cost by reason of casualties in the regular forces is proposed to be borne by the British Exchequer ;

(c) Whether additional allowances to officers or men are proposed to be met by the British Exchequer ;

(d) Whether the increased cost incurred in 1916-17 and the approximate additional cost estimated to be incurred in 1917-18 by reason of additions to the regular forces are proposed to be borne by British estimates."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The replies to the Hon'ble Member's question are as follows :—

(a) Expenditure connected with special measures of recruitment undertaken in order to meet the needs of the Indian Expeditionary Forces is debitable under existing arrangements to His Majesty's Government.

(b) All abnormal non-effective charges arising from the occurrence of casualties with the Indian Expeditionary Forces will be borne by His Majesty's Government.

(c) Any additional allowances which may be granted to officers or men in connection with (1) the special measures of recruitment already referred to, (2) the despatch of the Indian Expeditionary Forces, and (3) service with these forces, will be debitable to His Majesty's Government.

(d) Any extra expenditure incurred in 1916-17, and likely to be incurred in 1917-18, in connection with temporary additions to the regular forces, which may be made in order to meet the requirements of the Indian Expeditionary Forces will be debitable to His Majesty's Government. Any expenditure on permanent additions to the regular forces in India, or on temporary additions which are unconnected with the requirements of the Indian Expeditionary Forces, will fall upon Indian revenues."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

22. "Have the Government of India issued any instructions to Local Governments in the matter of prohibiting or regulating the holding of public meetings or conduct of processions in connection with propagandist work for the securing of constitutional reforms advocated by the Indian National Congress and the Moslem League and for marking public approval or disapproval of Government measures ?"

Prohibition of public meetings.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"As stated in reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru confidential instructions were issued to Local Governments in connection with the Home Rule movement. Government have nothing to add to the reply then given."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Bao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir William Meyer ; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Income Tax.

23. "Will Government be pleased to state the total number of persons in 1916 (including firms, joint stock and other companies, etc.)

(a) Who were assessed to income tax in British India for incomes—

(i) between Rs. 5,000 and 9,999,

(ii) between Rs. 10,000 and 24,999, and

(iii) of Rs. 25,000 and upwards, and

(b) who have paid the super tax ; and the total amount thus realized ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" I presume that by 1916 the Hon'ble Member means the financial year 1916-17.

(a) We do not receive information from Local Governments as to the number of assesseees to income tax in an official year until the October following. As the Hon'ble Member was informed in July last, in response to a written enquiry made by him, the statistics for which he asks will be supplied to him as soon as they become available.

(b) The Super Tax Act was not in force in 1916-17; consequently no one was assessed to super tax in that year. No statistics are as yet available for the current year."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Currency legislation in India.

24. " Will Government be pleased to state all the currency legislation and measures adopted in India since 1893 and the objects with which they were adopted ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" A summary of the principal currency legislation and measures adopted in India from 1893 until the Chamberlain Commission reported, and of the objects with which they were adopted, will be found in paragraphs 12 et seq of the Commission's Report which I have laid on the table. Full details with regard to subsequent legislation and measures will be found in my speeches introducing the last three Financial Statements. "

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Herschell, Fowler and Chamberlain Commission.

25. " Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the principal recommendations of the Herschell Committee, the Fowler Committee and the Chamberlain Commission on Indian Currency, and state how many of them have been so far given effect to and with what result ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" I place on the table a copy of the final report of the Royal Commission on Indian Finance and Currency presided over by Mr. Chamberlain. This summarises the principal recommendations made by the previous Committees referred to and the extent to which their recommendations were given effect to. I regret that spare copies of the reports of the earlier committees referred to are not available, but I shall be glad to lend the Hon'ble Member copies of them for perusal if he desires them.

The recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission's Report have been circulated to Local Governments, Chambers of Commerce, etc., for their opinions. Those consulted were, however, informed that the submission of their opinions might be deferred till after the war in order that they might, in replying, be able to take advantage of the further experience gained during the present crisis. Meanwhile, as explained in paragraph 93 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1915-16, we have provisionally adopted two of the Commission's proposals by replacing the silver previously held in the Gold Standard Reserve in India by gold, and also by taking powers to make an increase in the fiduciary portion of the Paper Currency Reserve. With regard to the latter we have been obliged by circumstances, as a temporary measure, to go further than the Commission actually recommended with normal conditions in view. Since the Commission reported, however, there has, as the Hon'ble Member is probably aware, been a large increase in the circulation of our currency notes, owing mainly to the fact that we have in the meantime taken various steps in order to popularise them, this action also being in entire accordance with the recommendations of the Commission. We have also, as I explained in the speech just referred to, given a public and unqualified assurance of our determination to support exchange by all the means in our power, thus adopting another and a very important recommendation of the Commission with an emphasis which gives it a definite finality. Further, with regard to the question of a gold mint for India, which is discussed in paragraphs 69-73 of the Commission's report, His Excellency announced at the last meeting of Council that the Home Treasury has agreed as a provisional measure, subject to reconsideration after the war, to our undertaking the coinage of sovereigns at Bombay, a branch of the Royal Mint being established there for the purpose."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

26. "What are the various Ordinances, if any, issued during the last five years for the restriction of the importation of gold and silver into India and for the regulation of the sale of Council Bills?"

Ordinances
the importation of gold and silver.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The only Ordinances issued during the last five years for the restriction of the importation of gold or silver into India are the two Ordinances recently promulgated, copies of which I place on the table for the information of the Hon'ble Member. No Ordinance has been issued for the regulation of the sale of Council Bills, which is a matter entirely within the executive discretion of the Secretary of State."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

27. "(a) Have His Majesty's mints been closed to the free coinage of silver? If so, what has since been the annual amount of the gold currency reserve in England and of the amount of silver coins reserved for the Indian paper currency?"

Gold currency reserve in England.

(b) How has the proportion of metallic reserve to the reserve in paper securities varied during the last four years?

(c) How has the amount of the gold currency reserve in England been utilised in England since 1900?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"I understand that the Hon'ble Member's question relates to the Indian mints and to the silver and gold held in the Paper Currency Reserve. The Indian mints were closed to the coinage of silver in 1893. I place on the table a statement* showing the gold held in the Paper Currency Reserve in England and silver coin held in this Reserve in India on the 31st March in each year since that date, and also the percentage of the total reserve held in the metallic and invested form, respectively, on the same date in each of the last four years.

As regards the last part of the question, the gold held in the Paper Currency Reserve in England has generally been employed for the purchase of silver or in order to assist the Secretary of State's treasury balances. In the latter case, the gold is transferred to the Home Treasury against an opposite transfer of coin or notes from the Treasury to the Currency Reserve in India."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

Imports of Gold and Silver into India.

28. "What is the total respective value of the gold and silver imported into India for other than Government requirements since 1893?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"I lay on the table a statement* showing the value in rupees of the gross imports of gold and silver year by year into India on private account from 1893 onwards."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

Re-opening of the mints for the free coinage of silver.

29. "Do Government intend to re-open the mints for the free coinage of silver?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The answer to the Hon'ble Member's question is in the negative."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

Duty on Salt.

30. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a Statement showing year by year since 1900, the successive deductions in the duty on salt and the total amount of salt consumed in India since 1910 and the quantity imported and manufactured in 1912 and 1916?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The statements† asked for by the Hon'ble Member are placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi
asked :—

Salt
gambling.

31. "(a) Are Government aware that the present arrangements for the sale of salt lend themselves to gambling which results in the periodic enhancement of the price of this commodity?"

(b) Will Government be pleased to consider the desirability of taking steps to put an end to speculative transactions in salt and to ensure that in every centre of trade and commerce throughout the country facilities are offered to the public for the purchase of salt at duly notified prices?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The Government of India are not of opinion that the arrangements for the supply of salt from Government sources lend themselves to speculative operations to a greater extent than in the case of many other articles of commerce, so far as the price to the consumer is concerned."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir George Barnes; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Mr. R. A. Mant.]

Circumstances arising out of the war however have brought about a reduction in the quantity of salt imported, which has certainly rendered it possible for merchants to force up prices for short periods in certain limited areas. The Government of India recognise that, in the case of an article in the supply of which they possess a partial monopoly, it is undesirable in the public interest that speculation should take place to the injury of the consumer, and have in accordance with this policy taken steps, as explained in the Press Communiqué issued on the 16th February last, of which I will send my Hon'ble friend a copy. The Government of India have brought this arrangement to the notice of other Local Governments who will no doubt introduce them should circumstances necessitate such a course."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

32. "(a) Will Government be pleased to consider the question of allowing salt to be manufactured on a larger scale along the sea coast of India, particularly in Bengal, under proper licenses and safeguards?"

(b) Is it not a fact that salt was formerly manufactured very largely in Bengal and Orissa and that such manufacture has now been abandoned?

(c) If so, will Government be pleased to state why and under what circumstances the manufacture of salt was abandoned in these Provinces?

(d) From what sources does Bengal get its supply of salt at present, and how much of the salt consumed in Bengal is imported from England and Foreign countries?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The question of increasing the output of salt in India has been under the consideration of the Government of India for some time past and the Governments of Madras and Bombay, who are chiefly concerned, have recently been addressed on the question.

A memorandum* by the Government of Bengal on the subject of salt production in that province is laid on the table for the Hon'ble Member's information, together with a statement shewing the sources from which salt was imported into Bengal in the year 1916-17."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

33. "Will Government be pleased to order the publication of the following papers and documents regarding the economic condition of the people in this country and place the same on the table :—

(a) Papers in connection with the Cromer Inquiry of 1882.

(b) Papers in connection with the Dufferin Inquiry of 1887-88.

(c) Papers in connection with the Inquiry undertaken in 1891-92.

(d) The statistical memorandum and notes on the condition of the lower classes in the rural areas furnished to the Famine Commission of 1898 by the Provincial Government.

(e) The official memorandum worked out from figures collected for the Famine Commission of 1898.

(f) The appendices to the report of the Famine Commission of 1901?"

Papers regarding the economic condition of the people of India.

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member apparently refers to an enquiry made by Sir D. Barbour, when Accountant General, Bengal, into the incidence of taxation in British India. The report on this enquiry was a departmental publication which is now out of date, and the Government of India see no advantage in publishing it.

(b) The attention of the Hon'ble Member is invited to the supplement to the Gazette of India of 20th October 1888 in which the papers he asks for were published.

(c) The Government of India regret that they do not know to what papers the Hon'ble Member refers.

(d), (e) and (f) The papers are voluminous and the statistical matter included in them is now out of date. For these reasons and because the expense of publication would be great and would not be justified the Government of India are not prepared now to order their publication."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Incorporation of the principles of assessment in the Land Revenue Code.

34. "(a) Did the Decentralization Commission recommend the incorporation of the principles of assessment in the Land Revenue Codes of the different provinces ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that the Government of India have decided not to accept the above recommendations and that this decision is embodied in their despatch addressed to the Secretary of State, dated 30th June, 1910, and the reply thereto ?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, are Government aware that the above decision has caused keen disappointment amongst landholders, and will they be pleased to reconsider the question ? "

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

" (a) and (b) The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) The Government of India are not at present prepared to reconsider the question."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Experiments demonstrating the economical use of water for irrigating crops.

35. "(a) Is it a fact that an experiment to demonstrate the economical use of water for irrigating wheat crops carried on by Mr. and Mrs. Howard in Baluchistan has met with success ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to advise the Agricultural Departments of the various provinces to try similar experiments wherever practicable, with a view to prevent the unnecessary waste of water in irrigation ? "

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"(a) The Government of India believe that, so far as Baluchistan is concerned, the experiments have been successful.

(b) A note on the saving of water in irrigating crops by Mr. B. Coventry, then Agricultural Adviser to the Government of India, was forwarded to Local Governments and Administrations, with Circular No. 10-121-1, dated 3rd May 1915, a copy of which is laid on the table, and they were advised to carry into effect the suggestions made therein as far as local conditions permit. At the Meeting of the Board of Agriculture in India to be held at Poona in December 1917, the following question will be discussed :—

'The necessity for further investigation into the water requirements of crops. The advisability of laying down proposed lines of investigation for different tracts of India, especially irrigation tracts.'

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. B. A. Mant ; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Sir George Barnes ; Sir William Vincent.]

Pending the decision of the Board on the subject the Government of India think it will be premature to take any further action in the matter."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

36. "(a) Have Government received any definite proposals from the Government of the Central Provinces, regarding the establishment of a University at Nagpur, and if so, will such proposals be published for general information ?

Establishment of a University at Nagpur.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state when a Bill for the establishment of a University at Nagpur is likely to be introduced in this Council ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"Proposals have been received from the local Administration for the establishment of a University for the Central Provinces, and are now under consideration. It is therefore undesirable to publish the proposals at present, and impossible to give a definite reply to the question when a Bill for the establishment of the contemplated University will be introduced."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

37. "(a) Is it a fact that there has been an appreciable increase in the prices of refined sugar in India since the outbreak of war ; and that, notwithstanding such increase, there has been a decrease in the production of raw sugar in the year 1916-1917 ?

Increase in the price of refined sugar.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons of this decrease in production ?

(c) Do the Government propose to take any steps with a view to ensure a steady increase in the outturn of sugar ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The answer to the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the affirmative.

With regard to the second part, the estimate of outturn of raw sugar in India in 1916-17 shows a decrease of 0.3 per cent as compared with 1915-16, but an increase of 11.2 per cent over the average of the preceding five years. The slight decrease in 1916-17 is due to the fact that in certain parts of the United Provinces and Bengal the crop was damaged to some extent by excessive rainfall and floods.

The energies of the Agricultural Department are being steadily devoted to an increase of sugar production. The cane-breeding station at Coimbatore is investigating the possibility of finding a better cane suitable for the United Provinces and Northern India generally. Experiments are being conducted to test the possibility of growing cane on a commercial scale in Assam, while the Departments of Agriculture in other provinces of India where the crop is of importance are directing their efforts to increasing the area under the best varieties of cane."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

38. "Is it under the contemplation of the Government of India to appoint a Lieutenant-Governor with an Executive Council, for the Central Provinces, and if so, when ? If not, do Government propose to take this matter into consideration, at an early date ?"

Lieutenant-Governorship for the Central Provinces.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The answer to the question is in the negative. But the Government of India are willing to examine the matter if any strong public opinion manifests itself on the subject."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[ *Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah ;
Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Sir William
Vincent ; Mr. R. A. Mant.* ]

[ 12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917. ]

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

Communal representation on municipalities.

39. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state in how many and in which Municipalities in India the system of communal representation is in force ?

(b) If the system is in force only in some of the Municipalities, will Government be pleased to state why the system is not extended to the others ? "

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) and (b) The existing law permits of communal representation on municipalities in all the Provinces except Bengal, Bihar and Orissa and Assam. But the Government of India have no recent information as to the number and names of the municipalities in which the system of such representation is actually in force."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

representation on local Councils.

40. "(a) Is it a fact that throughout India, excepting Sindh, Mahomedans are given the right of sending a separate representative to the Provincial Councils ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why no such separate representation is granted to the Mahomedans in Sind ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The Muhammadans in the Punjab, Burma and the Central Provinces do not elect any member to the local legislative council. In other provinces there is provision for the election of Muhammadan representatives.

(b) It was not considered necessary, at the time when the regulations were framed, to give separate representation to the Muhammadans of Sind, as it was anticipated that the community would be able to secure the election of Muhammadans to the District Boards seat, and the Landholders seat in that Province. This anticipation was justified, as the persons elected to the two seats have invariably been Muhammadans."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

New canals
in the Punjab and water supply of Sind.

41. "(a) Is it a fact that owing to the opening of new canals in the Punjab, the water supply of the Province of Sind has been adversely affected ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they propose to take to remedy this state of affairs ? "

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

"The matter referred to has been engaging the attention of Government for some time past and from the researches that have been made there is no indication that the water supply of the Province of Sind has been adversely affected by the opening of new canals in the Punjab."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

Appointments made to the post of District Superintendent of Police.

42. "Will Government be pleased to state how many Deputy Superintendents of Police have been permanently appointed to the post of District Superintendents of Police in India since the creation of the former appointments, and how many of these have been Hindus, Mahomedans, Parsees and Indian Christians ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The information will be collected and communicated to the Hon'ble Member."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah;
Sir William Vincent; Mr. M. B.
Dadabhoy; Sir William Meyer.]The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah asked :—

43. "(a) Is it a fact that the question of appointing an equal number of Europeans and Indians on the Executive Councils is under consideration?"

Appointment of an equal number of Europeans and Indians on the Executive Councils.

(b) If the reply is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state if they propose to take any steps towards Muhammadan representation on these Councils?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The question of the constitution of Executive Councils is under consideration, but it is impossible to make any definite statement on the point at present."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy asked :—

44. "(a) Has any agreement been made with the Government of the Netherlands Indies for the supply of opium at an agreed fixed price? If so, will Government be pleased to state this price?"

Supply of opium to the Netherlands Indies.

(b) Is this price below Rs. 3,200 per chest? If so, will the reasons for fixing it at a lower figure be stated?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the price or prices at which opium is now supplied to the Government of the Straits Settlements and Hongkong?

(d) What are the periods for which the present agreements for the supply of opium to the Governments of the Straits Settlements, Hongkong and the Netherlands Indies hold good?

(e) In fixing the upset price of opium to be sold by auction, have Government consulted expert opinion?

(f) If the answer to (e) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state why dealers and experts have not been consulted in the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"(a) My Hon'ble friend seems to have overlooked paragraph 10 (1) of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement in which I announced that we had concluded an agreement with the Government of the Netherlands Indies, with effect from 1st January last, similar to those which we already have with the Straits Settlements and Hongkong, under which that Government will now take from us at an agreed fixed price all the opium it requires from India.

(b) to (d) Subject to certain subsidiary conditions the agreements for the supply of opium to the Governments of the Straits Settlements, Hongkong and the Netherlands Indies remain in force for five years. The Government of India, as I told my Hon'ble friend when he raised the question in the final budget debate last March, are not prepared to publish any further details of the arrangements than have been given in the press communiqués issued at the time. I repeat here for convenience of reference what I said on the occasion in question :—

'I cannot divulge the secrets of these arrangements, but I can assure my Hon'ble friend that I drove good bargains and that we are not throwing away money. Of course he will understand that when you get an agreement for say five years with a country to take a certain amount of opium from you year by year, you naturally give it at a reduction in price as compared with what might be obtained at auction sales to-day, but which might not be obtained in another year.'

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[*Sir William Meyer; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy;
Sir William Vincent; Mr. Kamini
Kumar Chanda.*]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

(e) and (f) I do not know to what expert opinion the Hon'ble Member refers. We naturally do not consult dealers in fixing the upset price of opium to be sold by auction; for as they are the persons who are primarily affected by our sales we could hardly expect their advice to be disinterested. I may say, however, that before we make any change in our opium arrangements we consider the circumstances very fully and consult confidentially with those whom we think best capable of giving us disinterested advice."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy asked :—

ment of judges to high executive office.

45. "(a) Has the question of the appointment of a judge to a high executive office or of a high executive officer as a judge been considered by Government from time to time, and has it formed the subject of correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India?"

(b) If so, will the papers relating to the subject be laid on the table?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The whole question has been considered by the Government of India and has not been overlooked whenever it has been pertinent. The question of the appointment of judges to high executive office formed the subject of correspondence with the Secretary of State in 1910-11, the result of which is briefly summarised in the replies given in Parliament to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's questions of March 14, 1911, copies of which will be supplied to the Honourable Member should he so desire. There has been no correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State in regard to the question of the appointment of high executive officers to judgeships."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

asked for by the Punjab Chiefs' Association.

46. "(a) Has the Chiefs' Association of the Punjab submitted any representation to Government asking among other things (1) that India should be given her proper place in any scheme of Imperial Federation, and (2) that commissions in the Indian Army should be granted to Indians?"

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what classes of people in the Punjab are represented by the said Association, and whether such classes include what are known as the Military classes?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) It is understood that this Association has at present 161 members of whom 77 are Sikhs, 53 Muhammadans and 31 Hindus. The members belong almost exclusively to the land-owning aristocracy of the Punjab, though they include a member of Sikh and Muhammadan religious leaders. A number of the numbers are representatives of houses which once enjoyed sovereign powers and several of them are of high education. About 20 or 30 belong to families which have or till recently had representatives in the Army. The Association also numbers among its members practically all the leaders of the Jat Sikhs, the Dogras and the Punjabi Muhammadans, who form a large proportion of our fighting forces."

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[The Vice-President ; Mr. Krishna Sahay ; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy.]

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—“ Further discussion on the motion by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent that leave be given to introduce a Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain will be continued.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Sahay:—“ The Usury Bill has been introduced into this Council none too soon and I welcome it. The Hon'ble the Home Member has instanced the province of Bihar and Orissa as furnishing cases of usurious loans. It is unfortunately too true that the evil exists there, and as a very flagrant instance of it I may mention a case in which for the principal sum of Rs. 25,000 the creditor put in a claim before one of the subordinate Courts at Patna for the recovery of 2 crores, 98 lakhs and some odd thousand rupees! However surprising it may appear, it is a fact, and this huge figure of the claim was arrived at because there was a stipulation in the bond in suit for the interest to run at 5 per cent. and the interest at the end of each month to be consolidated with the principal, and interest of 5 per cent. to run on that consolidated sum. The creditor took good care to institute the suit very many years after the execution of the bond. Happily this case was compromised in the Court of First Instance; but cases have cropped up before the Patna High Court in which interest at the rate of 75 per cent. per annum has been claimed and actually allowed by the High Court, on the ground ‘that the Court is not competent to rip up a contract merely because it considers the rate of interest high and unconscionable, and the debtor in such a case cannot be relieved except by showing that it comes within the four corners of sec. 16 of the Indian Contract Act,’ that is, unless undue influence is proved. This was a case from Bihar. In another case from Orissa the High Court has allowed interest at 37 per cent. taking the same view of the law and holding further ‘that the Indian law does not recognise the English principle of equity which gives relief to the rate of interest unduly high.’ These two are reported cases to be found in the Patna Law Weekly and I invite the attention of the Hon'ble the Home Member to the facts of those cases. They illustrate, in my opinion, the sheer inability of the Courts to give relief under the existing law or under the existing law as it is interpreted by them—their sheer inability, I say, to grant relief to debtors even in admitted cases of hard and unconscionable bargains.

“ It seems to me that the remedy for such a state of things must be elastic in its nature, must not only be a restriction on the amount of interest or the rate of interest, but a remedy which may be applied to all cases of vicious contracts and extortionate demands. I think the Bill under discussion goes far enough in that direction and for that reason I support the principle underlying it.”

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy:—“ Sir, as one of the representatives of the Central Provinces where this evil, if not widely prevalent, is by no means small, I rise to accord my whole-hearted support to this Bill. I may at the outset state that this Bill was long overdue. For the last 25 years people working in the law courts and administrators have all felt the propriety and the justice of some sort of legislation to cope with the growing evil of usury. Unfortunately there have been numerous difficulties in the way of Government in the matter of bringing forward legislation of this nature which would satisfy the requirements of all parties and which would meet the requirements of the whole of India generally; and I must congratulate the Government on this occasion and specially my friend, Sir William Vincent, for the manner in which he has grappled with the situation. His long judicial experience as well as his administrative knowledge have greatly helped him in framing a Bill which will meet the requirements of the present situation. In my province this evil is not rampant, but I know several instances in which it has been felt that some steps should be immediately taken for the suppression of the evil. My friend, Sir William Vincent, in his very exhaustive and illuminating speech the other day quoted instance after instance showing the prevalence of this great evil, and I can multiply these numerous cases by giving several examples to which I have been an eye-witness in my thirty years' practice at the bar. I shall not detain the Council by quoting any of those illustrations, but I will content myself with referring to one instance in which I had the misfortune to appear for the creditor and got a decree to my great sorrow, because the courts were helpless in giving any relief to the debtor. In that case a loan of Rs. 50, which had been kept alive under section 20 of the Limitation Act for a period of 41 years, was ultimately enforced against the third generation; and the grandsons had to pay the money to the wily creditor who made them parties from time to time when the adjustment took place of the previous bonds. The difficulty in the present situation which the courts have to encounter is how to deal with bonds which have been previously settled. Under the ordinary law a settled account cannot be re-opened except on the ground of fraud, and though our courts of law have always been anxious to grant relief, they find themselves in a helpless predicament by the mere fact of the debtor having signed previous agreements, and made it almost impossible for the courts to re-open those transactions. This power which has been given now, will, therefore, be a very useful one. So far as the present Bill is concerned, I must state that it is not a perfect Bill, and it is almost impossible to have a perfect Bill in a matter of this sort. However, the provisions which have been made and the lines on which the Bill proceeds show that wide and comprehensive powers are to be given to our courts; and I have no doubt the hands of our courts will be considerably strengthened by the wide discretion allowed to them. I know in many cases there will be numerous difficulties. I know that the result of this Bill will be to prolong the duration of cases in many instances. There will be difficulties, but on consideration I do think that the balance of advantages outweigh the disadvantages in the present case. I have heard it contended often that the rule of damdapat which prevails in Berar and many other provinces would be a safe rule for legislation to go upon, and that a codified law in that direction might be introduced. There are advantages in this, but as this Council knows there are many cases in which the creditor has to wait at the request of the debtor and give him time. It will be unjust and unfair to the creditor in those cases that the rule of damdapat should be strictly enforced. It would cause hardship and in many cases severe injustice. I think, therefore, it is much better to allow our law courts wide and comprehensive discretion and leave them unfettered in the matter of opening up transactions and reviewing the situation from all points of view. This is not the time to discuss at length the details of the Bill. I shall have another opportunity of doing so; and in the meanwhile I shall content myself with giving this Bill my wholehearted support."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—"Sir, as a representative of the landholders of the Central Provinces, a community which has already suffered much from the evils of usury, I rise to accord my support to this Bill and I trust that there is none here in this Council who will not accord a hearty welcome to this most urgent measure. In fact, my own feeling is that it has come not a day too soon, rather the evils of usury have run on their unchecked course far too long. And we must not shut our eyes to the fact that even when we have placed this measure on the Statute Book, as I hope we will do, it is merely the fringe of the question of general indebtedness that will be touched. For, the redemption of the masses, from their general indebtedness including both agriculturists and artizans, constructive and comprehensive measures of an altogether different kind will be needed. Measures such as restrictions of the powers of alienation of land, the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act and the present bill, howsoever good so far as they go, will never appreciably remedy the state of affairs that I have just indicated. Even in the matter of the prevention of usury this piece of legislation, I am afraid, will go but a small way towards the mitigation of the evil. As the statement of objects and reasons so modestly points out, the Bill, when passed into law, will chiefly prevent the civil courts from being used, hereafter, for the purpose of enforcing harsh and unconscionable loans carrying interests at usurious rates. But Sir, there will still remain a vast mass of usury, which will never come within the cognizance of the law courts. So long as capital is scarce and the needs of the small borrowers remain insistent and pressing and so long as the co-operative movement has not made sufficient progress, quite commensurate with the needs and requirements of the vast population of this country, till then, I am afraid, usury cannot be eradicated from the land. Yet, an attempt by the Government to do what is legislatively possible to check the evil, is what we welcome most.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul ; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandru Nandi.]

"Sir, as one connected with the co-operative movement of my Province for a long time and having had to do a lot with the co-operative societies there, I may be permitted to point out that in my dealings with them, I have met with a number of cases, where the necessity for such a measure has been keenly felt and with regard to which, I am sure, the enactment of this Bill would produce beneficent results. In our enquiries we often had occasions to deal with the question of old debts of the society members. It has been our experience that even when the amount of the principal originally borrowed had been repaid many times over, the creditors were still unwilling to come to any terms and would not agree to any reasonable debt conciliation proceedings. Under the present circumstances the creditors are fully conscious of the fact that if their cases are taken to courts, the courts would be bound to decree the full amount found due according to the terms of the contract. But, henceforth, especially so far as future transactions are concerned, the co-operators, whenever they want to compound the old debts of the members of the co-operative societies, will, I feel sure, be able to bring such unconscionable creditors to terms, as they will be now under the wholesome fear of the courts being able to re-open all transactions and go behind the bonds. And I have every reason to hope that this fear will make them take a more reasonable and sympathetic view of the case.

"I am glad, Sir, that provision has been made in the Bill to cover cases of loans of grain as well as money, since, in most parts of the country loans in grain are made on terms as exorbitant and even more than those in cases where money alone is advanced. With these few remarks I beg to support this Bill."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi:—

"Sir, I don't want to inflict a speech on the Council on the Usurious Loans Bill at this stage. I have the fullest sympathy with the principle underlying this measure. I have, therefore, no objection whatever to leave being given to Sir William Vincent to introduce it into the Council today. If the large bulk of the agricultural, and lower middle-class population of India and in some provinces, as in Bengal, the landed aristocracy, deserve any protection at the hands of the Government against any class of men, it is certainly against the money-lenders and the class of men commonly known all over the country as the Mahajans and Sowcars. I will not repeat before the Council any stories of their cruelty or their inhuman exactions. Their usurious contracts and their treatment of the people who come into their grip have passed into a tradition of infamy and a byword of reproach. It is one of the highest duties of the State to save large classes of indigent population from running from poverty into distress and from distress into blank hopelessness. I, therefore, congratulate the Government on the step which they are about to take in protecting Indian poorer classes from what has now become perhaps the greatest trouble of their lives. But, at the same time, I think it my duty to utter a word of caution to the Government. In trying to protect one class of people, the Government ought not to be hard upon another. In preventing the Civil courts being used for the purpose of enforcing harsh and unconscionable loans carrying interest at usurious rates, the Government must be careful not to make money-lending a most discouraging business in the land. There can be no doubt that money will be always wanted by the Indian cultivators and artisans, and if the money-lender will not feel tempted to make any advances to them on account of the risks of law, the cultivator and the artisan will suffer more, and with them, the entire agricultural and other industries of India, than the money-lenders themselves. Say what we may, we cannot ignore the fact that the money-lender is only a necessary evil in the economy of Indian life. We cannot suppress him without paralysing and upsetting our entire social, industrial and commercial organisations, nor would it be wise or prudent to make his occupation impossible so long as facilities for popular banking or co-operative financing are not established all over the country. I would, therefore, very much ask the Government to define what excessive interest and unfair transactions should mean and to lay down a maximum rate of interest for all loans in cash or kind, and not to leave creditors entirely at the mercy of the Civil courts. All that I beg to suggest is that the discretionary powers of the Courts should be limited by law so far as possible. This done, the money-lender and the cultivator will know where they stand and how the land lies before them. This will also establish an uniformity of procedure and a common rate of interest in the different parts of the country and make for a civilised standard of living. If these safeguards are attached to this bill, the abuses of the sowear and the mahajan will disappear in no time, and no grievance will be felt in any quarter if the courts will then investigate into the attendant and antecedent circumstances of the transactions in question and use their discretion so far as will be still left to them under the law."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"Sir, speaking for Assam and specially the Surma Valley Division of the Province from which I come, I respectfully submit that the Bill has not been introduced a day too soon. The state of things in Assam is not a bit better than the description which the Hon'ble the Home Member gave the other day. There is this difference only that, whereas my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sahay speaks of crores and my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru speaks of lakhs of rupees, the figures would be unintelligible in Assam which is a poor province; otherwise the proportion of profit is the same. Any practising lawyer will be able to quote any number of instances which are as startling as those given by Dr. Sapru and Mr. Sahay. We heard from the Hon'ble the Home Member that Local Governments were consulted in the matter in 1913, Government did me the honour of asking my opinion and in the note which I submitted I quoted a number of cases from my own experience. I will not trouble the Council by repeating these cases, I will however mention one case only. A man lent Rs. 18 and the rate of interest was Rs. 1 per Rupee a day in a few months the man ran a case for Rs. 3,000 after foregoing his claim to Rs. 1,000 or so, I confess to my shame that I was in the same boat as the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy in this matter and like him so assisted the man in getting a decree. Mr. Anderson now a Reader in the Cambridge University was the Judge and most reluctantly passed a decree. Such cases are not rare even now. After my election to this Council I received numerous communications from a public Association in my Province called the Surma Valley Musalman Zemindars Association in which they urged me to bring this matter to the notice of Government and suggested that a maximum rate of interest should be fixed by law. There can be no manner of doubt that this is a crying evil and that something should be done at once—the question is what would be the best remedy. The Hon'ble the Home Member told us the other day that three alternative suggestions are made for the consideration of Government; in the first place the maximum rate of interest might be fixed by law; in the second place the maximum amount of interest to be realised might be fixed something on the lines of the law against Dandapat whereby no Hindu in the Presidency towns can recover interest more than the principal; thirdly the courts might be empowered to go behind any transaction in which interest or profit claimed appears to be unreasonable and extortionate, and after an investigation of the circumstances, antecedent and attendant, the courts might be given discretion to revise the transaction between the parties and if necessary to reduce the sum which would be recoverable as interest. Sir, the case is one of extreme difficulty although in the Note I submitted to Government in 1913, I accepted the third alternative which is the principle adopted in the Bill, empowering, in accordance with the English practice the courts to go behind any transaction, I confess that I am not free from doubt in this matter. There was a suggestion that the rate of interest might be fixed and I have heard from gentlemen whose opinions are entitled to great weight that this would be a far better alternative than to leave the whole question to the discretion of the court.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda ; Raja Sir Rampal Singh.]

" But Sir, it would be an extremely arbitrary thing to fix a maximum rate of interest. What would be a moderate rate of interest, in one case and in one part of the country might be very excessive in another ; and there is the fear that if a maximum rate of interest was fixed by law all interest would tend to rise to that maximum. I submit, Sir, in my humble view, taking everything into consideration the alternative provided in the Bill seems to be the least objectionable of course, we cannot deny that a very large discretion is going to be vested in the Courts. It is a melancholy fact that as seen by experience where discretion is vested in a body of people in a large number of cases the discretion is mis-exercised, and it is also a fact to be borne in mind that the courts who are to go behind the transactions and reopen past ones will often be courts of the lowest grade and their decisions would not always be open to the supervision of the higher courts because cases below thousand rupees may be decided in the courts of small causes and there is no appeal there nor any right of revision by the High Court either, in such cases it being a pure question of fact. But still it will not be a mere matter of caprice but judicial discretion, and the Courts will have to take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, the risk which the money-lender took and the circumstance that the debtor perfectly understood the transaction and knowing the circumstances much better than the Court can possibly do agreed to pay the interest and after making due allowance for all circumstances the Courts will consider what would be a reasonable sum to allow. With these few remarks, Sir, I give my humble support to the introduction of this Bill."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh :—" Sir, though I am not prepared to receive the Usurious Loans Bill with that unqualified approval with which it has been received by some of my Hon'ble Colleagues, yet the observations which I am about to make are not prompted by any hostile spirit to its main principle. It is undeniable that a decade or two before, the practice of usury was prevalent in most parts of India to an alarming extent and numerous families especially of land owning and agricultural classes fell victims to it. And even now it cannot be said that the evil has disappeared to an appreciable extent and there are not still good many black sheep amongst the money-lending classes whose over greediness for exorbitant rates of interest over their loans knows no bounds and whose cupidity and squeezing propensity for profits on the capital thus invested are not allowed to have free play only to be regulated by the present and future capacity of the debtor and his heirs to repay them. But, My Lord, as far as my knowledge and experience go I can confidently assert that there is marked improvement in the mitigation of the evil as compared with former times and this is due to the diminishing potency of the causes that were at work then in sustaining and maintaining the evil practice. The extent to which those causes have become less operative, the evil has diminished in proportion. So, My Lord, while providing a measure for the relief of the debtors from this evil, its causes should not be lost sight of, if its wholesale eradication is to be aimed at. The long delays which the money-lenders have to face in the recovery of their loans through the agency of courts, the enormous expenses—a good many of which being irrecoverable from the debtors—which they have to incur in that process, the risks and losses which they have to run and sustain in Mahajani transactions, the insufficiency of facilities for obtaining credit by needy persons whose proportion is always very large, want of regular Banks and co-operative societies to serve this purpose and above all the illiteracy and the general poverty of the people are all stimulating the practice of usury and taken advantage of by the money-lenders in pursuance of their self interest. If the above-mentioned causes disappear the evil is sure to die a natural death. The extension of the co-operative system and the establishment of Land Banks and joint stock companies all over the country are sure to have a very salutary effect over the suppression of the evil. While fully sympathizing with the debtor class it is but just to be fair to the money-lenders as well. It is a matter of common knowledge that the agriculturists do not fully avail themselves of the system of Taqavi advances made by the Government for agricultural purposes. The main cause of this reluctance on their part is that the Government demands for repayment are peremptory and cannot be evaded or shirked while the Mahajan's demands are evaded and even shirked and sometimes with impunity. Such an attitude on the part of the debtor by itself serves the purpose of the money-lenders in the accumulation of the principal and interest to an enormous size and makes the debtor's position insolvent. Having all these considerations in mind I venture to observe that the provisions of the present Bill may affect injuriously the credit system of the country and unless some other machinery is provided to supply credit to the people, especially the agriculturists, no great relief will be afforded to them by it. I also fear that its provisions may make capital invested in such loans shy or may lead money-lenders to search loopholes to practice usury on simple minded persons in even more objectionable manner than at present. The wide discretion which the Bill provides to the courts to go behind any transaction and to award indemnity to the debtors is liable to cause an enormous increase of harassing litigation and to produce a state of things calculated to do more harm than the present evil to the benefit of third persons and at the cost of the parties involved. To a layman like myself it is unaccountable why the definition of usury has been left undetermined in the Bill to be evolved by courts afterwards. This want in the Bill will also make matters worse. Therefore I am of opinion that its provisions may be made more definite and explicit so that the money-lenders and their clients may know their positions for certain. By the above remarks I am not to be understood that I have little confidence in the courts to whom an additional discretionary power is being provided by the Bill. On the contrary I have implicit confidence in their sense of justice and I would not grudge any such power being given to them. All I desire to press is that no law is worth the name which stimulates litigation abnormally."

The Hon'ble Sir G. M. Chitnavis :—" Sir, I beg to support the Bill. The evil of usury is not so rampant in the Central Provinces as it is, we are told, in other provinces of India. In the Central Provinces the provisions embodied in the Bill are already in a way given effect to in many of the Courts. Sometime ago Arbitration Courts were appointed by the Local Government to compound debts of agriculturists. The people there gladly agreed to arbitration and were quite willing to compound their debts. Much good has come out of the action of Government. The intentions of Government are good, but a great deal will largely depend upon the personnel of the Courts which will have to adjudicate and decide such cases. There are many risks, as pointed out by my friend the Hon'ble Raja Rampal Singh, in respect of the discretion given to the Courts, which will have to be guarded against, but we all hope that the advantages will very largely outweigh the disadvantages. The Co-operative Credit movement which has made good progress in this country will put a stop to many of the evils in the case of agriculturists. I am sure the Bill will put a stop to the evil outside that class. With these few words I beg to support the Bill."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Sir, I heartily support the principle of the Bill. It is a humane principle and if the Bill which is based on it is properly framed and worked, it will certainly lead to much good to the great mass of the people. But I think Sir, the bill requires to be examined very carefully. The entire circumstances connected with the situation of banking and credit as it is found in India require to be gone into before the measure is passed into law in order that the humane objects which the Government have in view may be fully realized.

There can be no valid objection raised against the principle of restricting the rate of interest in this country. That principle is as old as India is. Ages ago

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

the sage Vashishtha laid it down that no man ought to take more than 15 per cent per annum on the amount he advanced. The ancient law-giver Manu said :— 'Let a money-lender take in addition to the principal the interest fixed by Vashishtha, viz., an eightieth part of a hundred in every month.' This meant  $1\frac{1}{8}$  per cent by the month or 15 per cent per annum. Vyasa explained later on that this was to be the rate where a pledge was given : a sixtieth part was to be paid if there was only a security, and if there was neither pledge nor security two in the hundred might be taken, which meant 24 per cent per annum. In a subsequent sloka it was provided that in certain circumstances interest might run even at a higher rate. Narada lays down in great detail how in varying circumstances the rates of interest ought to be varied. But the approved rule was  $1\frac{1}{8}$  per cent per mensem or 15 per cent per annum as the maximum, and in certain cases 24 per cent. It was laid down that the man who contented himself with that rate of interest 'would not be guilty of the crime of covetousness.' In commercial transactions the entire circumstances were to be considered and it was provided that in certain circumstances interest might be higher than the rate mentioned above. The rule of damdapat also has been in force in this country for a very long time.

"I should not be supposed to be in favour of the high rates of interest mentioned above which were regarded as reasonable ages ago. I am in favour of a much lower rate. I have mentioned these facts to show that the principle of the Bill, that the award of interest should be restricted by law, is a time honoured principle in this country and that it cannot be reasonably objected to. I do not know whether the exacting of exorbitant interest was so much in vogue a hundred years ago as it is now. Perhaps in certain parts of the country it was, but whether it was so generally is a matter open to doubt. The evil seems to have grown enormously in recent years. This seems to be due to the fact that when the Usury laws were abolished and even when the Money Lenders Act was passed in England the Indian Legislature did not enact a measure like the one which is now brought before the Council. The result was that English Judges and other Judges of our High Courts took their law from the English law and practice and they felt themselves bound to allow interest without any limit according to the stipulations between the parties. We have heard from the Hon'ble Home Member that in some cases over 200 per cent has been allowed. The Madras High Court I believe allowed 228 per cent in one case, the Calcutta High Court 75 per cent and so on. And it has long been necessary to provide against this state of things by law. The Government have not moved in this matter one day too soon. But the question remains whether the object about which we are all agreed can best be obtained by the measure in the form in which it has been proposed. We should remember that the Money Lenders Act of 1900, the main provision of which the Bill before us has copied, did not succeed in limiting interest even in England to the extent that it was hoped it would, for I find that in a number of cases even after the passing of that Act interest was allowed at very high rates, for instance, at the rate of 60 per cent per annum in the case of Michaelson v. Nichols, in the case of Carringtons, Ltd. v. Smith (1906) at the rate of 30 per cent, in the case of Oakes v. Green (1907) at 40 per cent, in Wolfe v. Batters (1909) at 25 per cent, in King v. Barnett (1908) at 60 per cent, in Jackson v. Price (1909) at 50 per cent, in Fortescue Ltd. v. Bradshaw (1911) at 50 per cent, and so on. So that there is no assurance that even when the present Bill is passed into law, the measure of relief which is desirable, which every man who has the right feeling for his fellowmen would desire to ensure by limiting interest to what would be regarded as a humane standard, will be given. For good reasons the bill does not lay down a standard rate of interest. It does not seek to define what excessive interest would mean. It leaves it to be determined by the Court after weighing all the circumstances surrounding a case, the risks involved, the poverty of the borrower, his inability to furnish security and so on and so forth. It naturally gives a large discretion to the Court. But, Sir, for that very reason the matter requires to be carefully looked into to find out what would best meet the special circumstances in which we are placed, to see whether the particular form of legislation which has been suggested and which as I have said before is a copy of the main provisions of the Money Lenders Act of England should be enacted as the law here, or whether the object can be attained by any other procedure, for instance by an amendment of section 74 of the Contract Act. If on careful examination it is found to be necessary, in order to meet the evil of exorbitant interest, to enact a measure which gives powers to the Court to the extent that this Bill proposes to do I shall certainly not oppose it. But I plead for a careful consideration of the matter as it seems to me to be of very great importance.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"I agree with my Hon'ble friend Raja Sir Rampal Singh that in the circumstances in which the country is placed the restriction of facilities for borrowing, the restriction of credit, will be a serious evil, which should be guarded against. My remarks relate only to the form of the measure. I have no alternative at present to suggest, but I hope that when the Bill is laid before the public it will be carefully considered whether the best way of dealing with the evil is to arm the Courts with the large discretion which is proposed by the bill or whether the object can be secured by any less drastic measure.

"There is one other point to which I must draw attention, and that is that we ought to remember what the root of the evil we are trying to contend against is. I agree with my Hon'ble friend Raja Sir Rampal Singh that the root of the evil is to be found in the poverty of the people and in the want of credit which prevails among the mass of the people. And I think, Sir, anxious as I am sure every member of the Government and every Member of this Council is to reduce this evil, the Government ought to find a solution for it in a larger measure than has yet been attempted in improving the circumstances under which people are constrained to borrow money at a high rate of interest. We have mainly three classes of persons to think of. There is the agriculturist. In his case much of the evil arises from the fact that the ancient system of payment in kind has given place to the system of payment in cash. There have not been wanting English and Indian statesmen who have urged that the system of payment in kind ought yet to be revived. The matter is worth considering. Much of the trouble of the agriculturist is due to the fact that when the time for the payment of rent or revenue comes he has to obtain money on what terms he can. He dare not delay payment, and he must pay in cash, and it is therefore that he is driven to the door of the village sower who is often described in very uncomplimentary terms.

"Secondly, there is the landholder. The landholders are a large body and they deserve well of the Government. But in many cases they too have to borrow money at high rates of interest in order to pay revenue. They have also to borrow for other purposes.

"As has been suggested by my friend there is a great need for hypothec banks, banks for land mortgages as exist in Japan and in Egypt. Hypothec banks, such as those in Egypt and Japan, would reduce to a minimum the necessity of the landowner going to the village sower and borrowing at high rates of interest.

"The third class is the commercial class. They cannot get on without borrowing money, and they must borrow at what rate they can. Where the water is scanty and the thirsty many each must try to have a portion of it at price he must if he can in order to sustain life. So also in the case of the industrialist. There are no Industrial Banks in the country. The need for them is great. Here too Japan has shown us an example. Germany has done so too, but I will not speak of Germany at present. Japan has its Industrial Banks. If industrial banks are established in different parts of the country a number of people who at present are forced to go to the money-lender would have no need for doing so and the attainment of the object which this Bill has in view would be much surer.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"I hope Sir, I have made my meaning clear, I think that the need of the situation is that, while we should undoubtedly pass a humane measure like this which will prevent the ruin of thousands of families and individuals, which will ensure a fair dealing between those who are in need of money and those who are able to help them in their need, while we should pass a measure like that, the Government ought to take steps early to promote the banking facilities of the country. As we know to our great regret, the general banking facilities here are very poor. The Government of Japan found in 1868 that they had to improve their system of banking. They asked a gentleman, I believe, it was Mr. Shand, who was recently a Director of the Paris Bank—to go to Japan and educate the Japanese in the art of banking. It was thus that they developed their banking business and it is a pleasure to see their financial annual now, which shows a tremendous growth of banking facilities and of credit. I submit, Sir, that that is the improvement which is needed in order to reduce this evil of usury.

"I will draw attention to one other matter—the need for improving and developing the growth of co-operative credit societies. Government deserve credit and we are grateful to them for having started and encouraged the system of co-operative credit societies. The system has been growing, but what has been done is very small compared to what needs to be done in this matter, and I cannot do better than draw the attention of the Council and of Government to certain observations of Sir Daniel Hamilton who was the commercial member of Lord Curzon's Legislative Council. In an article reproduced in New India of August 1916, Sir Daniel Hamilton writing under the heading of India. Her present and her future wrote as follows:—'One hundred and forty years ago the finger of Adam Smith pointed to the weak spot in British rule and the finger of Sir Edward Maclagan points to the same danger spot today.' In 1775 Adam Smith wrote: 'In Bengal money is frequently lent to farmers at 40, 50 and 60 per cent and the succeeding crop is mortgaged for the payment..... Such enormous usury must in its turn eat up the greater part of the profits.' In 1915 Sir Edward Maclagan wrote: 'The money lenders' rates we have found in many places to be as much as 38, 48 and 60 per cent per annum'. Financially, the people stand where they did at the commencement of British rule. Is it wise to leave them standing there any longer? The great industry of four-fifths of the Empire still without a banking system, 250,000,000 of people without credit or cash. The sowcar's reef is the rock on which India lies stranded, and until the ship of State with its huge living freight is afloat on the silver sea of Credit, India will never reach the haven of peace and plenty and power. We have given the people a railway system which removes their surplus crops, but we have not yet given them a banking system to bring back the price. The world takes the surplus crops, the sowcar and the trader take the money, and the devil takes the people.'

"In another portion of this article Sir Daniel Hamilton said: 'The want of credit among the masses is, I believe, a chief cause of unemployment and unrest among the classes. Multiply credit among the masses and you multiply employment and peace for all. Credit is purchasing power, and an increase in the purchasing power of 315 millions of people will start the greatest trade boom the world has ever seen, and create employment for man and beast.'

"I commend the whole article, Sir, to the attention of the Hon'ble the Home Member, the Hon'ble the Finance Member and the Hon'ble the Member for Commerce and Industry. The writer has drawn an instructive comparison between what has been done in the matter of co-operative credit societies in India and Russia. I will not take up time by quoting all that he has said on that point, though it is very helpful, but I will quote one portion where, after showing how India lags behind Russia in this matter, he says: 'If India is to catch up and keep abreast of the world SEE AND GO must be her motto. 'Where there is no vision the people perish.' For what is India waiting? Is it money from Whitehall? If Whitehall could not find money enough for India's needs in the green tree, when it was plentiful and cheap, how will she find it in the dry, when it is so scarce and dear? To look to Whitehall for money is to lean on a broken reed. India must develop her own financial system, and the only sound way to do so is to develop the finances of the people—to build from the foundation upwards. The way is plain. It only wants men. In Sir Edward MacLagan's report he gives the number of men employed on Co-operative Credit work as 267. Applying this figure to India's 750,000 villages, at least 10,000 men are wanted. Here is a grant outlet for the pick of India's youth. Will Government give the young men the chance? .....

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—“ I would suggest to the Hon'ble Member that he is travelling rather far from the subject. The question before the Council is whether this Bill to deal with usurious loans should be introduced or not. We are not dealing with the whole question of the co-operative credit movement.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—“ I bow to your ruling, Sir. I have only tried to show how usury can be combated effectively. So long as cheap credit is not provided for the great mass of the people, they will have to borrow at the high rates of interest which they do. I have quoted the views of an experienced ex-member of the Government to show that in addition to the efforts to introduce the present Bill or to bring in an enactment in some form or another like the Bill suggested, the great need of the situation is to develop the banking system and the co-operative credit system. Without some attempt to promote banking facilities, the efforts of the Government will fail to the regret of those who desire really and truly that the great mass of the people should be saved from the hardship of paying high rates of interest. In that view I urge that while promoting the measure before us the Government should be pleased to do all that lies in their power to further promote the co-operative credit system and to develop the banking system. If this is done, the Bill before us and the measures which I have suggested will usher in a new era of prosperity for India and will earn the deep gratitude of the people for the Government.”

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan :—“ Sir, on behalf of the Punjab landowners I give my emphatic support to the measure which is now before the Council. I have no hesitation in saying that this Bill will be a great boon to the agricultural classes all over the country and that it will afford the greatest relief to them. Instances of atrocious rates of interest have been adduced by practical lawyers and others and I need not adduce any more instances in support of them. All these instances afford us a realisation of the causes which led to the unkind treatment which the mild Jew received in the middle ages. I think in this country also the same fate might have befallen those who charge such exorbitant rates of interest had it not been for the just and merciful hand of Government which suppresses any outbreak of violence. Sir, historical houses and men worthy of honour from every point of view have been ruined on account of such rates of interest, and people whose deeds are described in histories and who rolled in wealth have been reduced to beggary. The miserable end which has overtaken them is an instance of the adverse fate which the continuance of this state of affairs might indefinitely threaten people. But the measure which the Hon'ble the Home Member has introduced I believe will save those unhappy people from such a miserable end. Sir, the question is whether the agricultural classes who suffer most from these calamities, and for whom Government has from time to time adopted measures of relief, are to be protected or not. I think there can be no controversy as to the urgency of this question. In the Punjab I have had personal experience of these agricultural classes, who suffered from the calamities I allude to before the Land Alienation Bill was passed. When Government passed that Bill, great relief was afforded to them and I have no doubt that the measure before us will come as a great boon in the Punjab.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan; Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur.]

"Sir, the rural classes, who are the backbone of the country and who have sacrificed so much in the service of the Empire, must be protected, and their self-respect and solvency maintained at any cost. It is not altogether devoid of interest that whereas any former Ruler would have made this measure a means of self-glorification—and stories of such merciful acts on the part of those Rulers would have resounded throughout the land—the Hon'ble the Home Member very quietly introduces this measure in a remarkably unobtrusive manner and certainly without any flourish or any idea of self-aggrandisement. These are civilised methods no doubt, and are characteristic of the present Government which works in the interests of the masses who suffer from the rapacious ways of the money lenders."

The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"Sir, in the face of the general support which the Bill before us has received at the hands of most of the Hon'ble Members of this Council, it might seem somewhat of an anomaly that I should not be able to give my unqualified support to a measure apparently so full of benevolent intentions, breathing sentiments of sympathy for a class of a people called debtors. I must state at the outset that I am not opposed to the principle of the Bill. I am opposed to the Bill in its present form. But I must not be misunderstood. In order to avoid misconception, I may be permitted to state that I have every sympathy with debtors whose intentions are good and who honestly endeavour, by all reasonable and legitimate means, to pay off their just debts. I am not opposed to any measure intended to give relief to honest debtors, any measure intended to protect debtors from unconscionable bargains or unfair contracts, any measure intended to relieve them from the payment of usurious rates of interest.

"If it is intended for the benefit of debtors to revive the Usury Law, I shall be only too glad to give my humble support to it. If it is intended to enact the law of Damdapat in some form or other please say so plainly. What I beg to say is that whatever your intentions are, please state them in plain definite and unequivocal words so that creditors may not be left in the dark, so that they may readily understand and realise their position and where they stand. It is, I say, hardly proper to pick up a few isolated cases of extremely unconscionable bargains from here and there and then, on the strength of these few stray cases, to proceed to frame a law which would be highly prejudicial to them. I may as well cite thousands and thousands of cases in which debtors have taken advantage of every possible flaw, every technicality, have in fact adopted every possible means, however dishonest, to avoid their just obligations.

"The Bill in its present form is somewhat vague and indefinite, in as much as instead of indicating what its intentions are and what it wants, instead of formulating any rule or instead of laying down a standard or criterion by which a court may judge whether a transaction or contract is fair or unconscionable, whether the amount claimed is excessive or moderate, whether a rate of interest is usurious or not, it has left everything to the discretion or rather to the idiosyncracies of the presiding officers of the different courts of law and the probability is that even on the same point different courts may, according to the temperaments of presiding officers, arrive at different conclusions, one court holding the rate of interest at 10 or 12 per cent per annum as fair and another court holding the same rate as excessive. Here everything has been left to the discretion or rather to the sweet will of the court. If the court is to have the power of revoking contracts or agreements entered of free will, of reopening past transactions and taking a fresh account between parties, of unsettling all settled accounts settled, say, a decade or two ago, and, above all, if the court is to be invested with the power even to order the creditor to repay any sum which the court may consider to have been paid in excess, why, it will give so many handles to the debtor to evade payment of just debts, to harass his creditors for an indefinite period till he is coerced to forego a goodly portion of his dues.

"If old accounts settled long ago are to be reopened there would be no finality and a heavy onus or burden would be thrown on the creditor which it will not be very easy for him to discharge.

USURIOUS LOANS BILL.

[*Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur ; Rao Bahadur
B. N. Sarma.*]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"It was very aptly said by Sir Barnes Peacock that the troubles of a decree-holder begin after the decree. But if the present Bill is passed into law then I may say that the troubles of a creditor will begin as soon as he will enter the threshold of a court of law to obtain relief against his debtor.

"The Bill if passed in its present form, will not only be prejudicial to the interests of money-lenders, but will be likewise detrimental to the interests of debtors. It will go to restrict and hamper loan-transactions and thereby hamper business. It will go to accelerate the ruin of the debtor, for the creditor, for fear of his claim being considered excessive, would never give time or shew any indulgence or undue leniency to his debtor and would rather prematurely resort to a court of law for recovery of his money.

"Sir, in this connection it would be proper to consider what effect the proposed legislation would have on the inland trade of the country which is entirely financed by Indian capitalists.

"In conclusion I beg to urge another objection against this Bill. It has always been understood and acted upon that no contentious measure should be introduced or brought up for discussion in any council. The present Bill is I must say a highly contentious measure which is sure to foment agitation in the country. Then why throw this apple of discord in our midst?

"This is not an opportune moment for discussing a Bill like this."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, on behalf of Madras I cordially welcome this measure. I feel sure that the Government will follow up this measure by others intended to organise the capital of the country and to strengthen its banking facilities. I welcome it from the large national point of view because I have felt for a long time that the facilities afforded by law to money-lenders precluded them from bestowing their attention on the immense industrial possibilities of this country. Once those facilities are curtailed in a reasonable manner, I feel sure that money-lenders, who are some of the shrewdest men in the country, will devote their energies towards improving her manufacturing industries. The genius of the Hindu and Muhammadan laws, as has already been pointed out, are behind the Government in this measure. Some of my Hon'ble friends seem to have forgotten that this measure will be introduced only into areas where the Local Governments feel the necessity for such introduction. It is no doubt a Government of India Act, but if there be no grave evil in any part of the country I feel sure the Local Governments would not ask for its introduction and would not introduce it. But at the same time it is clear that we have gone in advance of the Money-lenders Act in England. The Act there is confined to habitual money-lenders; but I think it would not perhaps be possible here for the purposes of this Act to classify money-lenders in the way they have done in England; because if that distinction were drawn here, I feel sure that a large number of people especially cultivators would not be able to obtain the benefit of the Act. I know intimately some of the conditions of rural Madras; and the poor ryot who cannot obtain credit, especially in the matter of seed-grain, once he gets into the hands, it need not be of a money-lender, but of a rich opulent ryot, can never extricate himself, and ultimately his little holding passes into the hands of the richer ryot. In all these cases courts will be in a position to do justice between party and party. There is no doubt that the amount of discretion vested in the courts is somewhat large; but I do not think that it can be helped. Courts have exercised their discretion in the past rightly, and I feel sure that all classes of people have ample confidence in justice being meted out by the law courts. So far as Madras is concerned, the legislature there has anticipated us by the introduction of a somewhat similar measure confined to the Agency Tracts of Madras. I shall not quote any instances of hardship from my experience at the bar at this stage of the discussion, but I am sure that Madras as well as other provinces are labouring under the evil sought to be remedied. In fairness to the Judges of Madras it must be said that they have not allowed this evil to assume such large proportions as seems to be the case in other provinces. With these few words I welcome the measure."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—

"Sir, I did not come into this Council chamber with any intention of interfering in the discussion on the Bill which the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has introduced. But the speech of my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Sitath Ray Bahadur, has compelled me to say a few words. Two main arguments have been adduced by him in opposition to the motion which is now before the Council. One was that accounts settled ought not to be allowed to be reopened, for it would be unfair and unjust. Well, Sir, those of us who are familiar with what goes on between the money-lenders and their ignorant debtors with reference to the manner in which accounts are kept by these money-lenders and the manner in which the periodical settlements of these accounts are made can well judge of the validity of the argument which has been adduced by my Hon'ble friend. In 99 cases out of 100—I might have said in 999 cases out of 1,000—the accounts are kept in a language absolutely unknown to the debtor. He himself cannot read the Hindi words in which the accounts are written. When the money-lender and the debtor sit down, what is it that happens? The money-lender himself, after going through all the items as entered by himself in his own account book in a language which is unknown to the debtor, says 'Well, there you are; on this account, so much is due by you. Will you therefore, put your thumb-mark in acknowledgment of the amount which you, owe to me?' The poor ignorant debtor has no option but to put his thumb-mark by way of acknowledgment of the correctness of the account—an account the nature of which he has probably no knowledge whatsoever. During my somewhat extensive experience in the Punjab extending over 25 years and more, I have come across hundreds and hundreds of cases between money-lenders and agricultural debtors in which this sort of thing goes on. I wish to give to Hon'ble Members one instance. It is quite true that this instance is of the worst possible description, but it will at any rate illustrate the length to which some money-lenders can go. I was engaged in appeal in a case in which the Munsif had given a decree in favour of the money-lender for his claim in full. When I read the judgment I told my client that he had no case for appeal. The Munsif has stated that there was the account book, the sworn testimony of the money-lender was there, he had also produced one or two witnesses in support of one or two of the principal items, and there was the final balance struck to which the debtor had put his thumb-mark. But the client insisted on my lodging the appeal and I did so. When two days before the hearing of the appeal I looked at the account book in which the various items had been entered and in which the balance had been struck, I was surprised how any court could have given a decree without re-opening the account, nay, according to general principles of law that suit ought to have been dismissed.

"I found that in almost every single case the item as entered in the original had been tampered with and altered before the striking of the balance; it so happened that the entries were in Urdu, a language with which probably the debtor's friends were somewhat familiar. At the time of making the original entry the money-lender had entered one item and at time of the settlement when the balance was struck, the thumb-impression of the poor, ignorant zamindar was taken one or two days before, the original items had been tampered with. It is easy to alter 5 into 15, 1 into 10 and so on." When I pointed out to the Appellate Court what had been done the Court was compelled to dismiss the suit altogether because of material alterations made by the creditor. I do not think it is necessary for me at this stage to discuss either the principles or the details of this Bill. I quite agree with my friend Dr. Sapru and my friend Mr. Malaviya that the Bill does not go sufficiently far to eradicate the evil, it undoubtedly is a crying evil, which prevails in almost every province of India and particularly in the Punjab. This is a matter with which Hon'ble Members will be able to deal when the Bill is returned to this Council after publication and after the opinions of Local Governments and the public have been obtained. On behalf of the Moslem community of the Punjab whom I have the honour to represent in this Council I offer my sincere congratulations to Government for having at last made up its mind to tackle this crying evil."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, before the debate concludes I should like to express my gratitude to the Council for the very sympathetic manner in which they have received this Bill. Indeed I think that the support that has been accorded to it is sufficient to show that it can scarcely be called with any show of justice a controversial measure. I will not attempt to deal with the various criticisms of the Bill at this stage, far less do I think it necessary to enter into the large questions referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya as they appear to me to be very indirectly relevant to the discussion; it is also not within my province to deal with the question which he has raised nor am I competent to do so. The Bill will now be circulated to all Local Governments and I think I may say that it will be carefully examined, as is the wish of the Hon'ble Pundit. The Council will also be given ample opportunity of discussing the general principles of the Bill on the motion to refer it to Select Committee and they will, if I may say so, then be in a better position to judge of its merits or demerits in the light of the opinions that have been received. I only ask the Council at present for leave to introduce the Bill with a view to its publication and circulation."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I introduce the Bill and move that the Bill together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit."

The motion was put and agreed to.

GOVERNMENT SAVINGS BANKS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Government Savings Banks Act, 1873. The object of the Bill is set out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons and it is difficult for me to add to what is there said. The object is to increase the limit of Savings Banks deposits which may be paid to the heirs of deceased depositors without the formality of obtaining probate, letters, of administration or succession certificates. The only operative clause of the Bill is the second which provides that in section 4 and section 8 of the Government Savings Banks Act, 1873, for the words 'one thousand rupees' the words 'three thousand rupees' shall be substituted. Under section 4 of the Government Savings Banks Act, 1873, only Rs. 1,000 could be paid over without the production of Probate or Letters of Administration. It is now proposed to increase the amount from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 3,000. In the same way under section 8 of the same Act, a Savings Bank deposit which did not exceed Rs. 1,000 was excluded in computing the fees chargeable on Probate or Letters of Administration. It is now proposed to extend this exemption from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 3,000. It is believed that the latter figure of Rs. 3,000 will cover a very large proportion of the Savings Bank deposits and the result of this Bill when passed into law will, I hope, be a great convenience to the families of deceased depositors."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, I introduce the Bill and move that it together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS (AMENDMENT) BILL; REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL.

[*Sir William Vincent; Rao Bahadur
B. N. Sarma; Mr. A. P. Muddiman.*]

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, the Bill which I now seek to introduce relates to the amendment of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. The Bill is of a simple character and is not I hope likely to evoke criticism—it may be explained in a few words. Under section 7 of the Act the only persons eligible at present for appointment of the office of Chief Judge of a Presidency Small Cause Court are advocates of a High Court. In 1916 the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, a non-official member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, sought leave to introduce a Bill in that Council providing that vakils and attorneys who are eligible for appointment as Judges of these Courts should also be eligible for the office of Chief Judge. He pointed out that vakils were already eligible to be High Court Judges and there was no reason why they should not be Judges of the Small Cause Courts. He also stated that the restriction to which I have referred had in fact prevented the appointment of a vakil, who was otherwise suitable. The principle of the Bill was accepted by the Local Government and forwarded to the Government of India, who, in consultation with other Local Governments, found that the amendment proposed for Bombay was equally desirable in the other Presidencies. The Bill I now seek to introduce is based on Mr. Patel's Bill and it is proposed to remove the anomaly in the three Presidencies. As pointed out there is no reason why a vakil or attorney, if he is the most suitable person, should be excluded from the office of Chief Judge and the Government do not think it can be suggested that persons who are eligible for appointment as High Court Judges are not suitable for this appointment."

"At the same time I wish to point out that it is not intended to modify the provisions of the law which provide that one-third of the Judges shall be Advocates of the High Court. I have told the Council that the authorities whom we have consulted on this Bill are unanimous in favour of the amendment and I hope that it will commend itself to this Council. If I am correct in my anticipation, it is my intention, at a future meeting of this session, to move that the Bill be taken into consideration and passed."

I now move, Sir, for leave to introduce the Bill."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, on behalf of the Vakils of Madras and the Vakils in general, I wish to thank the Hon'ble Member for introducing this Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman:—"Sir, I move for leave to introduce the Bill to amend certain enactments and to repeal certain other enactments. The Bill, as will be seen, is a formal one, and I need not detain the Council with any lengthy remarks beyond saying that the operative part of the Bill is contained in the Schedules. The first schedule repeals certain spent or useless matter in the Statute Book and the second Schedule makes a few formal or unimportant amendments which are for the most part rendered necessary by recent legislation. The reasons for the proposed changes are explained in the notes in the last column of the schedules."

The motion was put and agreed to.

REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL; SIR CURRIMBHOY EBRAHIM BARONETCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Mr. A. P. Muddiman; Mr. Kincaid.]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman :—"Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

SIR CURRIMBHOY EBRAHIM BARONETCY (AMEND- MENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. Kincaid :—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce the Bill to amend the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Act, 1913. Sir, this Council, even including the Hon'ble gentleman who is sitting just below me, will probably admit that this is a non-contentious Bill; and as a statement of the facts underlying the Bill which I have the honour to introduce is given in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill, it will suffice for me briefly to recapitulate those facts. In the year 1911 His Majesty was pleased to confer on Sir Currimbhoy the honour of a Baronetcy. Now there are a good many Baronetcies in Bombay and a custom has grown up there that if any gentleman becomes the recipient of such an honour, he, in consultation with Government, settles a considerable property, so that the income of it may be enjoyed by his successors and the honour and dignity conferred on him properly kept up. It was in accordance with this custom that Sir Currimbhoy wished to set aside as a trust in perpetuity for himself and his successors considerable properties in Poona and Bombay valued at 20 lakhs. He desired that the bulk of the income of that property should be enjoyed by himself and his successors. But he also wished to create, by a somewhat complicated system of finance, two other properties to be known as the 'Sinking Fund' and the 'Repairs Fund.' In order to make the Sinking Fund Sir Currimbhoy desired that annually 00·61 per cent of 20 lacs during the period of 60 years should be invested in British and Indian Government stock at 3 per cent. It was calculated by the Actuaries consulted that if this was done for 60 years the property known as the 'Sinking Fund,' would amount to 20 lacs. The second property, namely the 'Repairs Fund' was to amount to 2 lacs and was to be created by putting aside 3·72 per cent of 2 lacs during a period of 20 years. The wishes of the Baronet were communicated to his Solicitors who prepared a draft Bill and that draft Bill was submitted to this Council and the Bill became law in 1913.

"Well, Sir, it might have been thought that at this point Sir Currimbhoy's cup of happiness was full and that he could look forward to a long period of ease and dignity for himself and afterwards to a long line of wealthy worthy and titled successors. Unfortunately, just after the Bill became law it was discovered that his Solicitors had made an extraordinary error in drafting the Bill. Instead of putting in sections 7 and 14 that Sir Currimbhoy's trustees were to pay annually the amount of Rs. 12,200 which represented 00·61 of 20 lacs and Rs. 7,440 which represented 3·72 per cent of 2 lacs, they had put in the draft sections that Sir Currimbhoy's trustees were to pay these two sums every six months. The trustees and Sir Currimbhoy took counsel together with the result that they took upon themselves the responsibility of only paying this sum annually until they could get the error corrected. Sir Currimbhoy approached the Government of Bombay. The Government of Bombay placed the matter before this Government. This Government in the interests of the remainder men thought that an enquiry should be held. It was held by the Advocate General of Bombay who came to the conclusion that the representations of Sir Currimbhoy were well founded. It is, therefore, now decided to introduce this Bill. Section 2 (1) is introduced with a view to make the correction, and section 2 (2) is enacted so as to cover the act of the trustees when they took upon themselves the responsibility of making the payments annually and not every six months."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. Kincaid :—"Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN REGISTRATION (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Sir, I beg to move that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Registration Act, 1908, be taken into consideration. It is hardly necessary for me to explain at length again the reason for the proposed legislation as I fully did so when I asked for leave to introduce the Bill. Hon'ble Members will remember that in the case of Jambu Prasad vs. Aftab Ali Khan, their Lordships of the Privy Council decided that where the person who presented a document on behalf of the man who advanced the money for registration did not possess a power-of-attorney executed and authenticated in the manner laid down in section 33 of the Registration Act, the document had not been duly presented, and the document not having been presented according to law the Registering Officer did not have any authority to register the document and the registration effected by him was ineffective. In that view the claims of mortgagees to recover the amounts which they had secured by mortgages of property which had been registered on presentation by the agent of the creditor who did not hold a power-of-attorney as required by section 33 of the Registration Act, were defeated. This meant a manifest-injustice to the creditor. And it was to remedy this injustice that the Bill was introduced. The original draft of the Bill suggested that notwithstanding anything contained in the Registration Act, the registration of a document registered before or after the commencement of this Act, shall not be deemed to be invalid by reason only of the fact that the document was presented for registration by an agent not duly authorised by a power-of-attorney executed and attested or authenticated under the provisions of any enactment in force. But it was pointed out that there were other courses in which the remedy needed might be provided. One of these courses was that the legislature may provide that a document which has been improperly admitted to registration in disregard of section 33 may be registered again on production of a proper power-of-attorney or on presentation by the parties themselves within a prescribed limit of time. After having considered the various suggestions the Select Committee arrived at the conclusion that the last course that I have mentioned was the most appropriate one to adopt in the circumstances of the case. This would not interfere at all with the general provisions of s. 33 of the Act, and it would provide relief in all cases excepting those in which a suit based on a document which had been improperly accepted for registration has already been decided. The bill as amended by the Select Committee seeks to embody that provision. It seeks to lay down that notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Registration Act, if in any case a document requiring registration has been accepted for registration by a Registrar or Sub-Registrar from a person not duly empowered to present the same, and has been registered, any person claiming under such document may, within four months from his first becoming aware that the registration of such document is invalid, present such document or cause the same to be presented, in accordance with the provisions of Part VI for re-registration in the office of the Registrar of the district in which the document was originally registered; and upon the Registrar being satisfied that the document was so accepted for registration from a person not duly empowered to present the same, he shall proceed to the re-registration of the document as if it had not been previously registered, and as if such presentation for re-registration was a presentation for registration made within the time allowed there for under Part IV, and all the provisions of the Registration Act, as to registration of documents, shall apply to such re-registration; and such documents, if duly re-registered in accordance with the provisions of this section, shall be deemed to have been duly registered for all purposes from the date of its original registration; provided that within three months from the day of the passing of this Bill any person claiming under a document to which this section applies may present the same or cause the same to be presented for re-registration in accordance with this section, whatever may have been the time when he first became aware that the registration of the document was invalid.

"Hon'ble Members will see that the proposed law will not only fully meet the difficulties of those whose documents improperly registered before the Act comes into force have not yet been adjudicated upon, but it also provides for the rectification of any similar mistake in registration in the future. In all such cases the claims of justice will be fully met by the Bill.

"There was another provision in the Bill which sought to give retrospective effect to the measure of relief which was proposed to be enacted, in suits which had been dismissed by reason of such mistakes in registration in the United Provinces. But the Committee had no information before them as to the number of cases which might be involved and as to the desirability of reopening proceedings in them. Nor had they any information as to whether such cases had occurred in any other Province. They thought therefore that it might appropriately be left to the Government of the United Provinces themselves to deal with this question of retrospective effect being given to the provisions of the Bill and if they think it proper on the information they possessed, to introduce legislation to that effect."

I move that the Report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"In the draft of the Bill before the Council, the date of the passing of the Act will, of course, be inserted later on. I beg to move that the Bill as amended be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"Sir, I move that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to establish and incorporate a University at Patna be taken into consideration. The Report of the Committee contains full information. It sets out the changes made in the Bill as originally introduced. I do not propose to detain the Council with any observations at this stage. I will only mention that the Select Committee contained all the Non-Official Members coming from the Province of Bihar and Orissa, all the official members coming from that Province and the representatives of the other Universities, and we have come to a unanimous conclusion on the questions which were under discussion."

I move now, that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, I beg to move the first amendment which stands against my name, and that is to substitute the words 'shall be elected by the Senate' for the words 'shall be appointed by the Local Government' in clause 6, sub-clause (1). The clause as it stands reads:—"The Vice-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Local Government." As sought to be amended by me, it would read:—"The Vice-Chancellor shall be elected by the Senate."

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

"At the outset I may be permitted to explain my position in moving these amendments to the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee after the support of the members who formed the Select Committee, subject to certain conditions which are embodied in the Select Committee's Report. I have no desire to make this Bill a controversial measure. I heartily welcome this measure on behalf of the country and am deeply grateful to the Government as well as the members of the Select Committee and the Education Member in particular for making it so little contentious except in one or two important matters and for the large improvements which have been effected in the original Bill. We hope that the Council will see its way to accept these amendments which are not of a radical nature and do not substantially alter the principles of the Bill. I may also be permitted to state that the Bihar Provincial Conference adopted a resolution on the lines on which I have moved the amendments. They have also approved of the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee, but they hope to be able to see further improvements and have sent an appeal to the Government. It is in that spirit that I bring forward these amendments. Now the object of this amendment is to make the constitution of the University in Bihar at Patna, which is an advance in some respects on the Universities of the old model, more self-contained and less dependent on the Government, especially in view of the acceptance of the principle of election in its composition. We are grateful that the Select Committee has been able to make a large section of the members of the Senate elected members, and now the question is whether there are any valid reasons for denying them the privilege of electing their own Chairman. Of course the election of the Chancellor is out of the question. He corresponds to the visitor in other places; he represents His Majesty's Government and consequently we cannot take up the question as to whether the Chancellor of this University should be elected or not. He does not take any part in the discussions. The person most vitally concerned in the University is the Vice-Chancellor. The question is: are there any valid reasons why we should deny this largely elected body representing the educated Indians of Bihar and Orissa and consisting of the nominees of the Government, the power of choosing its own Vice-Chancellor? If we look to precedents in the United Kingdom I find authority for my position. The acts of 1858 and 1889 dealing with the Universities of Scotland make ample provision for that purpose.

"The practice obtaining in Oxford and Cambridge with regard to corresponding offices is the same. With regard to London Lord Haldane's report proposes that the Chancellor should be elected by the Convocation, that the Pro-Chancellor should be elected by the Court and that the Senate should elect the Vice-Chancellor. Therefore the precedent and the practice of the Universities in the United Kingdom amply support and justify the amendment which I place before you. Of course, when representative institutions are asked for in India, the general answer is that the vast majority of the people are not fitted for them. That, however, is a controversial question and I shall not go into it. But at any rate, so far as educated Indians are concerned, so far as the University composition is concerned, the objection cannot be urged the principle has been conceded and it cannot be said that we have an ignorant electorate. Therefore, Sir, I say that there is absolutely no danger whatsoever, but ample justification, in asking that the corporate body should be self-contained. There is a prejudice in the popular mind against higher education being made a department of the Government. The existing Universities are considered mere departments of the Government and, rightly or wrongly, are supposed to work at the will and pleasure of the Government. Here, in this measure, we see a substantial concession in favour of the people. Then, is there any danger in pushing that to its logical conclusion and making the University more independent? I respectfully submit that there are absolutely no valid reasons. If you say that the working of this act should be watched before the power of electing the Vice-Chancellor is given, my submission is that there is no necessity for it. Let us take the composition of the electorate of the Senate

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

as it is. It contains a large majority of educationists. All sections of the community, the educated section, the teaching staff, Government servants, etc., are strongly represented therein, and it cannot be contended for a moment that such an eminent body will go wrong in choosing their Vice-Chancellor. I hope, therefore, that the Government will raise no objections whatsoever, but make the scheme of the University complete, perfect, and self-contained.

"With these remarks I beg to move my amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—"Sir, I am unable to accept this amendment. I am glad to accept the assurance of the Hon'ble Member that he does not wish to make the Bill a controversial measure. He thinks apparently that his amendment would make only a very slight change; I do not agree with him there. It is a very radical proposition which he has put forward. He thinks that the Vice-Chancellor is only a chairman of a meeting. That is not the case. The Vice-Chancellor has various duties to perform. He is an officer and servant of the University. He is the man to appoint and control every officer and servant of the University whose emoluments do not exceed Rs. 200 per mensem. He is also an officer who is entitled to inspect the colleges. He is not, therefore, simply a chairman of a meeting. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, instead of going into the precedents in India itself, goes to Scotland and to England for precedents. He forgets that in all the other Universities in India the Vice-Chancellor is not elected by the Senate. The fact that the majority of the members of the Senates are elected in this University and that this bill (thus) marks a great advance is not a reason, as he puts it, for going further in that direction. The Senate is a new body; they are elected under new conditions, and we have to wait and see how the Senate works before we entrust them with further powers. In these circumstances, Sir, I am not prepared to accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"Just a word, Sir. The precedent of London may not be altogether appropriate but still the proposed Vice-Chancellor under Lord Haldane's scheme is a permanent official and the chief administrative officer of the University. Therefore, he has to discharge functions almost akin to, if not wholly the same as, those of the Vice-Chancellor of our proposed University. The Commissioners had sufficient confidence in the Senate of the London University to give them the power of electing their Vice-Chancellor. I do not think, therefore, that argument has much force."

"In regard to the other Indian Universities, we have been asking for a similar privilege in respect of these Universities, and the fact that the Government has not been able to confer the privilege hitherto is no reason for saying that we should not concede the privilege to the Patna University now."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"Sir, the amendment which stands against my name runs as follows :—

"The first Vice-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Local Government and shall hold office for three years from the date of his appointment, but his successors shall be elected by the Senate subject to such regulations as may be framed by the Senate and shall hold office for three years from the date of election. Such appointment shall be subject to approval by the Local Government."

"It will be noticed that the amendment which I have the honour to put before the Council practically covers the same ground as that which has just been negatived, with this difference only that my amendment is much more moderate than the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma was. I move this amendment in no spirit of hostility. I am perfectly alive to the fact that the Bill as it stands now is a very much more liberal measure than it was when it was originally introduced. But I see absolutely no reason why in a measure like this the Government should not be prepared to extend the principle of election which they have recognised in the Bill itself in the constitution of the Senate and which they have so willingly recognised in the case of the Benares Hindu University. It will be further noticed that the proviso which I have added to my amendment has been taken bodily from the Hindu University Act, so that there can be absolutely no danger of the Senate going wrong without being corrected.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy.]

"Now, Sir, my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has quoted examples of foreign Universities. I will not quote similar examples; I shall content myself by referring to the latest opinion which has been expressed on the subject in the Haldane Commission's report. Even there it is recommended that the Vice-Chancellor should be appointed by the Senate. Now, Sir, so far as public opinion in Bihar is concerned, I am strongly persuaded that it strongly supports my amendment, and it is no reflection upon the members of the Select Committee that I, belonging to the United Provinces, should undertake to move an amendment which I know for a fact represents the general feeling in Bihar.

"I am afraid the task of my friends, the members of the Select Committee, was none too easy and I appreciate the spirit of compromise in which they have accepted the provisions of the Bill, as it stands at present. But with all due respect to my friends, the members of the Select Committee, and with every desire on my part to co-operate with them in the successful termination of this measure, I see absolutely no reason why opinion in Bihar as it has been expressed from time to time should not be put forward before this Council.

"Sir, I was just looking into the first schedule which has been supplied to us and I find that out of the 75 names there 33 are Europeans; I have not been able to calculate the number of officials. I venture to think that in future too the number of officials in the Senate and the number of English Professors would be sufficiently large to safeguard against any apprehension of the Indian members of the Senate going wrong. I therefore do not see any valid reason for denying this privilege to the Senate. If you will not trust a body of cultured and educated men like the members of the Senate with the privilege of exercising the right of election of the Vice-Chancellor, I for one cannot see which other electorate can safely be entrusted with the privilege of electing any officer to preside over its deliberations. It has been said that other Universities—the official Universities—have never had such a privilege given to them. Unfortunately this is too true; but I hope the day is not far distant when the other Universities will come into line with the Benares University. When you can entrust a non-official University like the Benares University with the right of electing a Vice-Chancellor, I see no reason why in a measure like this, hemmed in by so many safeguards and with a Senate so full of the official element, the same privilege should not be willingly accorded to the members of the Senate of the Bihar University. On those grounds I put my amendment before you."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy:—"Sir, I should have supported this amendment of my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru but for the fact that, as the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair has just mentioned, it seeks to introduce a new principle in University matters. The older Universities of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras have not this privilege up to date, and I think in the case of a new University which we are just establishing and sanctioning, it would not be right and proper that this innovation should be introduced. I do admit and acknowledge very freely that there is a great deal of truth in what the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru has stated; but this Council have not had the opportunity of discussing the matter and also of taking the opinion of their constituents. Dr. Sapru was present when the Bill was introduced, and I remember he made a very strong speech criticising the Bill when it was introduced."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"Sir, may I rise to a point of order? My Hon'ble friend is not right in saying that I made a speech opposing the Bill. I welcomed it."

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL

[The Vice-President ; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Mr. H. Sharp.]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"The Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy only says that the Hon'ble Member made a strong speech. My own recollection coincides with that of the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"Sir, I understood Mr. Dadabhoy to say that I made a strong speech opposing the Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy :—"No, the Hon'ble Member is under a misapprehension. There is still another point. The University Commission which has been appointed by His Excellency Lord Chelmsford will begin its deliberations very soon. This is a matter which we should leave to the serious consideration of the University Commission, and I have no doubt it will be considered very carefully by the Commission. If among the other reforms which the Commission suggests, this reform is recommended, I shall be very glad to welcome it and give it my support ; and I have no doubt that in that case Government would bring in a Bill introducing such a reform. On the eve of such a Commission sitting in India, and considering that the change which my Hon'ble friend wishes to introduce is a very radical and a very important one, pregnant with many possibilities, I think it is advisable that it should not be introduced at this stage, especially in the case of a new University like the Patna University. For these reasons I request my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru to withdraw his amendment, and I hope he will see the propriety of not introducing it at this juncture."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Sir, I support the motion which has been introduced by my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru. I fully appreciate the position in which we are at present, and I must say we owe gratitude to the Hon'ble Sir Edward Gait and the Hon'ble the Education Member—and I should like to add to the Director of Public Instruction in Bihar and Orissa—for the very liberal spirit in which they have received the suggestions of the public in regard to the constitution of the University."

"The Bill now before the Council is a very different measure from the Bill in its original form, and our thanks are due to these gentlemen no less than to the Members of the Select Committee, for what has been done. But that very fact supplies a strong reason for desiring that they would see their way to accept the suggestion put forward by my Hon'ble friend. It is a suggestion which is in entire conformity with the spirit of the times, with the most up-to-date recommendations which have been made by the University Commission presided over by such a distinguished educationalist as Lord Haldane. It is, I repeat, a suggestion in entire conformity with the spirit of the times for educational reforms and I feel certain—as certain as I am standing here—that within a short time in this very Council a Bill will be introduced which will seek to make the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor of every Indian University an elective appointment requiring that he should be elected by the Senate. I submit, Sir, that there can be no electorate more qualified, more competent, to decide who should preside over the deliberations of the University, than the Senate of the University ; and I am glad to find—and here again I offer my thanks and congratulations to all concerned particularly to Sir Edward Gait, the Hon'ble the Education Member and Mr. Jennings—from the excellent Schedules to the Bill that the composition of the first Senate and Syndicate leaves nothing to be desired. And that fact furnishes a strong reason why this suggestion further to liberalise the constitution of the University ought to be accepted. I hope the Hon'ble the Education Member will consider the matter favourably."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. Sharp :—"Sir, I rise to deal with a minor point which has cropped up in the speeches of the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur Sarma and the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru. Both of them referred to Lord Haldane's Commission on the London University in support of their proposals. I should like to point out that I fear this is an example of the confusion which arises out of the use of terms without fully explaining their meaning. It is perfectly true

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. H. Sharp; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

that under the Haldane Commission's proposals for the London University, the Senate will elect the Vice-Chancellor. But the Senate which is proposed for that University will be as different from the Senate which is proposed for the Patna University as chalk from cheese.

"The two terms do not mean at all the same. The Senate of the Patna University will answer more nearly to the Court of the London University. The Senate as proposed in the Haldane Commission's Report for the London University will be a very small and very select body consisting—if I remember rightly—of not more than 15 persons, 5 of whom will be appointed by the crown.

"The election of the Vice-Chancellor by such a body is of course a totally different thing from his election by a large and heterogeneous body such as the Court of the proposed London University or the Senate of the proposed Patna University."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, the ground of the distinction is this: Taking for granted that the Court there corresponds to our Senate, the recommendation is that the Pro-Chancellor who is to preside over the Court is to be an elected member. Therefore, even if there is a distinction in the office, I think the recommendation is in our favour."

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"Sir, I oppose this amendment. My friends still seem to be under the impression that the main function of the Vice-Chancellor is to preside over the deliberations of the Senate. That is not his main function. He has other duties to perform.

"As to the case of the Benares Hindu University the reference is misleading. It is a denominational university, whereas the Vice-Chancellor in this case will have to deal with Government officials and with Government colleges and mission colleges. So we cannot go to Benares for an analogy. No doubt my friend's amendment is moderate compared to the one which was put forward by Mr. Sarma; but it is open to the same objection. It is also open to this further objection, that he is dealing with a matter which is to come three years afterwards. There is ample time before us, if this new experiment is justified, for him to come before the legislature again. As I have already pointed out, the fact that the Senate as now constituted is very different from the Senates of other universities and that the Bill is progressive in that respect is not a reason for now going much further, but is rather a reason for watching the results of the experiment before we make any further advance."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"Sir, I shall deal with some of the important points raised by the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair. He says that I am dealing with a matter which will arise three years hence. I can only say that I am following his own example. He did it in the case of the Benares Hindu University. Under the Hindu University Act the first Vice-Chancellor has been appointed by the Government. His successor will be appointed by election, so that I am not unique in this; I was only following the example set by Government.

"The second point was that we had misunderstood the functions of the Vice-Chancellor. The Hon'ble Member said that the Vice-Chancellor's function was not only that of a Chairman. As a member of the Allahabad University I know it too well. It is perfectly true that he has not got merely to preside over meetings, but has got to decide many things without coming into the meeting. Then he said that the Vice-Chancellor will have to deal with Government colleges and with officials. I fail to see how a man ceases to be effective by the mere fact that he is elected, when the very same man might have been entrusted with those duties if he had been nominated by the Government. Take any official in the Senate. He might be elected if he has got the confidence of the majority of the Senate. How will he cease to be effective if he is elected, and how will he be more effective merely because he has been nominated by the Government ?

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; The Vice-President.]

"Sir, then with regard to the argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp that the analogy of the London University will not hold good in the case of the Patna University, I do not rest my case wholly on that. Whether the Vice-Chancellor there has got to preside over a body like the Senate of the Bihar University or a very much smaller body, the fact remains that he is going to be elected, and a Commission like that of Lord Haldane did not consider it necessary that he should be nominated by the Government in order that he might be really effective. So that, it seems to me, Sir, that the arguments which have been advanced in opposition to my amendment are not, with all due respect to Sir Sankaran Nair and the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, convincing."

The amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I request you to permit me to deal with all these alternative amendments in one speech so as to save time and not try the patience of the Council unduly."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I must warn the Hon'ble Member that he has got only a quarter of an hour left, and I doubt if within that time we should be able to deal with all these amendments. I suggest, therefore, that he should take them up in the order in which they appear on the paper."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, the first amendment which I move is that sub-clause (5) of clause 7 be omitted. The scheme of the clause is to make the Senate supreme in the management and superintendence of all the affairs and concerns and property of the University, and it is to have residuary jurisdiction in all matters not otherwise provided for. This is provided for by sub-clause 4. Now a limitation is imposed upon those powers in certain cases which are specified in sub-clause 5. The question is as to whether there are any valid reasons for restricting this supremacy of the Senate, the complete control of the Senate, over the Syndicate in any manner whatsoever, as is provided for in sub-clause (5). Hon'ble Members will see that even in sub-clause (5) the jurisdiction of the Senate has not been altogether ousted, but is partially restricted in the manner suggested therein, that a minority of six Syndics disagreeing with the opinion of the majority shall have the right to move the Senate for an expression of its opinion which shall decide the question at issue between the minority and the majority. Now, the point at issue on this amendment of mine is as to whether there is any reason for restricting the powers of the Senate in the manner suggested by this Bill. I rely in this particular case upon the existing practice which obtains in the older universities. The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill quoted a precedent on a former occasion with some effect, and I hope I shall have equal good fortune on this occasion in appealing to the same precedent. These universities have been working with the supremacy of the Senate over the Syndicate for over fifty years without any friction whatsoever between the Senate and the Syndicate. The question is as to whether there is any valid reason for depriving the Senate of the powers which they have been competently and satisfactorily discharging during the last fifty years. If anything, we are trying to make the Senate more representative, more elective, and consequently any difficulties in the matter of cliques or minorities joining together because they have been nominated in a particular way would disappear under the new scheme.

"One answer may be forthcoming, that is that in the matters referred to in clause 7 it would be preferable to introduce a smaller body because a smaller body would be more competent to deal with such matters satisfactorily. I know that in Lord Haldane's recommendations he deprecates the unlimited review of the Senate in certain matters. There is a difference between the composition of the bodies suggested in the Report whose authority has been evoked in this respect and the composition of the Senate and Syndicate under Patna University Bill.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.]

We have not created any body exclusively academic competent to discharge functions which are specifically educational in character, but we have created two bodies which consist of administrative officers and educational officers. In the Senate the educationists can be supreme because out of 50, 20 are to be elected by the teaching Staff, there are 6 ex-officio educationists and other members who might be elected by other bodies, that is registered graduates and associations. It stands to reason that in the composition of the Senate you will have a large preponderating educational element. In the Syndicate you have the educational element giving a majority because under section 8 there must be at least 10 educationists out of 18; in the Syndicate you have a body in which there are 10 educationists and 8 non-educationists you have a large number of educationists, possibly a majority. Thus the two bodies are composed of practically similar lines; therefore it does not seem to me that there would be any danger in giving the right of review to the Senate. It is only in extreme cases where there was a feeling that the Syndicate was exercising its authority incorrectly that action proposed would be taken. In my view there is no reason for deviation from existing procedure. I would therefore ask the Council to take into consideration my amendment for the deletion of the clause."

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"Sir, I am unable to accept the amendment, this and the succeeding amendments refer to the relations between the Syndicate and the Senate. My friend has strongly relied upon the existing law, the Act of 1904, according to which the Syndicate acts under the directions of the Senate which has a power of review. As a matter of fact under the existing Act of 1904 the graduates elect only 10 per cent of the total number of the members of the Senate, with the result that the elected members are not really represented by the Syndicate; the senate is composed of only 10 per cent of really elected members, naturally therefore the elected members desire that all the actions of the Syndicate should be subject to the criticism of the Senate, though they could scarcely hope to over-rule the actions of the Syndicate. Thus the criticism in the Senate is the only check so far as popular opinion is concerned to which the Syndicate is subject.

"I can therefore well understand the desire of the general public that the resolutions of the Syndicate on every question should be subject to consideration by the Senate. But what do we find here; we have got in the Senate a substantial majority of elected members, they elect the Syndicate, therefore the Syndicate really represents the elected members of the Senate also; If competent members are elected by the Senate, the occasions for interference must be very few. Further if the Syndicate members are found unsatisfactory the Senate need not elect those members again but might elect members who will carry out their behests. My friend also seems to assume that the Syndicate are independent. As a matter of fact the Syndicate can only act subject to the regulations of the Senate; whether the latter think fit to give latitude to the Syndicate or whether they wish to restrict them they can do either. Again, it is the Senate that passes the Budget, therefore in all those questions in which the finances are involved, the Syndicate is subject to the control of the Senate. The Select Committee have recognised the broad distinction that in all legislative questions, in all questions dealing with general principles, the Senate should have supreme control; in questions of executive government relating to academic matters only, a good deal of freedom is left to the Syndicate; the difference can be seen if Hon'ble Members will look at the matters left to the Syndicate for disposal and compare them with those left to the Senate alone for decision for instance, the courses of study are determined by the Senate, but the arrangement for teaching, etc., are left to the Syndicate. My friend has correctly stated that the Senate will interfere only in extreme cases. For such cases there is a provision in the Bill which enables six members of the Syndicate to bring before the Senate in appeal any decision of the Syndicate, therefore that so far as effective control in the management of the university is concerned, the Senate will have much larger powers than under the present Act of 1904.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; The Vice-President.]

[12TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"For these reasons I am unable to accept this amendment. I trust that my friend will withdraw not only this amendment but also the others. The alternatives which my friend has suggested were considered by the Select Committee who came to the conclusion that the provisions in the bill contained the best solution in the circumstances."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"I shall not take up the time of the Council with regard to this amendment. I shall only point out that Lord Haldane speaks of the danger of giving the Senate supreme authority. Speaking of the danger of giving Senates supreme authority, the Royal Commission on University Education in London said in their report 'It is not to be supposed that a minority on the Senate would always appeal to the Court against the majority when the views of the Academic Council were disregarded, but the power to appeal would remove some of the dangers which we are aware beset the small and powerful growing governing bodies of American Universities and would we hope, afford a means of settlement from within for those controversies as to policy which seem from time to time to invade all Universities.' It is for this reason, Sir, that I wanted to keep the power of the Senate supreme inasmuch as the Hon'ble Member said that there would be no danger in practice of the Senate misusing the powers."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I understand the Hon'ble Member wishes to withdraw his amendment."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"Sir, I have a point to make, and that is this. The Hon'ble the Education Member does not agree to the amendment....."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I understand the Hon'ble Member will withdraw if the Hon'ble the Education Member opposes it."

APPENDIX E.

Memorandum by the Government of Bengal, dated the 5th April 1917, on the production of salt in that Province.

1. The question of the revival of the manufacture of salt has from time to time been brought to the attention of this Government. It was last considered in the year 1908 when the Lieutenant-Governor of that time came to the conclusion that it would be useless to attempt to revive the industry that had at one time existed in the province.

2. Salt was at one time largely manufactured on parts of the sea-board of Bengal as constituted prior to 1912. It was of two kinds: Panga produced by a process of boiling from brine, and Karkatch produced from solar evaporation and confined only to the neighbourhood of the Chilka Lake in Puri. The manufacture was at outset under a system of Government monopoly. This system prevailed till 1863 when it was abandoned and the trade was left to private enterprise under a system of excise. This latter system never took root, except in Orissa and the 24-Parganas. The effect of the importation of Madras salt began to be felt in the years 1879-80 to 1882-83. This, combined with the costliness of the manufacture due to the expensiveness of fuel—an essential necessity for Panga manufacture—and the extent of land kept out of cultivation, as well as the competition of Liverpool salt, made it clear that the manufacture of Panga salt could only be carried on in the expectation of recoupment from smuggling, which could not of course be permitted. It was consequently abandoned, first in the 24-Parganas in 1882-83 and then in 1888-89 in Orissa, where the salt administration was then under the Madras Government. Karkatch salt alone continued to be manufactured in the Chilka Lake; but the season of 1891 was the last in which the excise licensees were allowed to work on the old lines, which had proved a failure. Then followed a direct or monopoly system under which two Government factories were opened, one at Tua in Puri and the other at Sartha in Balasore. A third factory was soon after opened at Gurubai in the Puri district with a view to ameliorate the condition of the Parikud Rajah's raiyats, and also to secure his help and co-operation which were considered essential for the successful working of the system just inaugurated on the Chilka Lake. But the manufacture of Karkatch salt was doomed to failure, owing to climatic conditions and other reasons. The early nor'westers, which appear in Bengal and the northern parts of Orissa in March and April, were found fatal to Karkatch manufacture. Moreover, Madras salt, which is made under more favourable climatic conditions, was gradually but steadily ousting Chilka Lake salt, and when the East Coast Railway was opened, it drove the local salt out of the market. The Sartha factory had to be closed in 1893. The Tua and Gurubai factories, which struggled on for a few years more, were closed in 1897-98.

In 1901 in the interests of the people of Orissa, to whom salt manufacture was at one time a source of employment and advantage, the question was again raised of reviving the excise or license system of manufacture, as apart from direct management by Government, but after careful consideration by the Board of Revenue and Government, such revival was held to be impracticable. And the same conclusion was arrived at when the question was again examined in 1908.

3. A scheme for manufacturing salt on a large scale presupposes that brine of good quality and fuel could be brought together at a reasonable cost, and that only the installation of a vacuum plant is required to ensure the genesis of a successful industry. The Governor in Council entertains grave doubts whether such facilities for the supply of brine and fuel exist in Bengal. Along the Bengal littoral the only source for the supply of natural brine is the sea. Salt earth is found in scattered patches, but it is doubtful whether in any one locality there is a sufficient quantity to yield a continuous supply of brine of appreciable volume for an appreciable length of time. The water in the Sunderbans and at the head of the Bay of Bengal, regarded as brine, is weak. Its density is largely reduced by the enormous volume of fresh water discharged into the Bay by the large rivers which form the Ganges delta. It is charged with silt, more or less heavily according to season, but at no time is it even clear sea water. In this respect it differs largely from the strong pure Cheshire brine, and it follows that much more evaporation, to say nothing of cleansing, would be required than at Liverpool, and the quantity of fuel required would be much greater. Bengal thus stands in an unfavourable position as regards the supply of good brine. It is equally at a disadvantage in respect of the facilities for manufacturing salt from the existing supply inasmuch as no sea water exists within easy reach of any industrial centre in Bengal, nor indeed at any place nearer a railway terminus than 40 miles. Close connection with a railway terminus is essential, not only owing to the necessity for easy access from the coalfields but also to lessen the lead and keep down the expenditure in bringing the manufactured article to the chief markets, and under existing conditions it would therefore be necessary for the re-establishment of the industry either to construct a railway to the sea or to bring the sea water by pipes to the vicinity of the existing railways—a distance of at least 40 miles—and as a consequence to set up a large pumping plant. Both these alternatives are out of the question. Even as a temporary measure to meet existing conditions it would not be practicable to construct a railway within reasonable time, while the greater part of the plant would have to be imported, and it is not likely that a new factory could be established within any reasonable time. And the re-establishment of the industry on a permanent basis in Bengal cannot be looked on as full of promise. The considerations which have been urged show that from an economic point of view it would not be a success, and it is clear that salt could not be manufactured except at a price which would be far higher than that at which it is imported or is manufactured elsewhere in India. The Governor in Council moreover sees no necessity for re-establishing the salt industry in Bengal in order to provide for the requirements of India. The end aimed at could be attained with greater success in the Madras Presidency where salt is already manufactured to a considerable extent. The nearest existing supply of salt to Calcutta is the salt factory at Huma in the Ganjam district, which is only 352 miles from Calcutta, and there are in fact two or three factories close to one another on the northern Ganjam coast which, if extended, would be capable of supplying the greater part, if not the whole, of Bengal with all the salt that it is likely to require.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER
THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915,
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Viceregal Lodge, Simla, on Thursday, the 13th September, 1917.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble Mr. G. R. LOWNDES, Vice-President, presiding, and 55 Members, of whom 49 were additional Members.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—“ Sir, the reason why I gave notice of the amendments standing against my name Nos. 17, 18 and 19, namely :—

“ That in clause 7 (5) for the words “ six members ” the words “ three members ” be substituted. ”

“ That in clause 7 (5) after the word “ Syndicate ” where it first occurs, the words “ or ten members of the Senate ” be inserted. ”

“ That after clause 7 (5) the following sub-clause be inserted :—

“(6) Where no reference is made to it by not less than six members of the Syndicate, as required by sub-section (5), it shall be competent for the Senate to review any acts referred to therein on a motion made by not less than ten members of the Senate, and where there is a difference of opinion between the Syndicate and the Senate the matter shall be referred to the Chancellor, whose decision shall be final.”

was to try if possible to induce the Council to make it more easy for members of the Syndicate or Senate, who differ from the position of the Syndicate, to appeal to the Senate in all matters provided for in clause 7 (5). And with regard to the reduction of the number from 6 to 3, I thought I had a good case inasmuch as the minimum administrative members provided for by the Act is 3, and following the precedent of the United Kingdom, that provision should be made for all the administrative members if possible to appeal to higher authority against any decision of the Syndicate composed of a majority of educationists. But having regard to the peculiar position we are in and the attitude of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, I do not think any good purpose will be served by moving these amendments and so I beg to withdraw them.”

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—“ I understand the Hon'ble Member's proposal to withdraw is with reference to items 17, 18 and 19. The amendments are by leave withdrawn.”

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[*Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Rao Bahadur
B. N. Sarma.*]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—“ Sir, I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name that in clause 9 (1) (a) for the words “to such privileges” the words “as a college” be substituted. It is only a question of drafting. You will find in clause 9 (1) (a) ‘the admission of the institution to such privileges.’ I move the omission of the words ‘to such privileges’ and the substitution of the words ‘as a college’ instead. The words ‘to such privileges’ as they stand now are unmeaning and make no sense. The mistake arose in this way. In the section as it originally stood in the Bill which was introduced by me the words in section 9 were ‘to any privileges of the University.’ Those words have now been omitted and the Council will find in section 9 ‘as a college’ printed in italics substituted. But after omitting those words in that clause by an oversight we did not omit them in clauses (a) and (b) and this is a motion now to rectify that error, I move accordingly that the words ‘as a college’ be substituted in section 9, clause (a).”

The amendment was put and agreed to.

Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—“ For the same reason I move that the words ‘as a college’ be substituted for ‘such privileges’ in clause (b).”

The amendment was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—“ Sir, I beg to move the omission of sub-clause 3 (a) in clause 9. The sub-clause reads thus :—

‘No educational institution shall be admitted as a college of the University, unless the following conditions are complied with, namely :—

(a) in the case of an educational institution teaching to a degree standard, the buildings of the institution are situate in one of the following towns, namely :—Muzaffarpur, Bhagalpur, Cuttack, or Hazaribagh :

Provided that this condition may be dispensed with in any particular case if the Governor-General in Council so directs.

“The reason why I felt it necessary to give notice of this amendment was because I thought, and I still think, that the inclusion of such a provision in the Statute would be highly detrimental to the future extension of higher education in the Bihar Province, and is calculated to confirm a large section of my country men who, rightly or wrongly, believe that the Government are not favourably disposed towards the extension of higher education in their view. In these days of educational development when ideals have changed so rapidly and when the position is that almost every young man who is qualified by his brains is entitled at the hands of the State to facilities for the highest development of his faculties which the Universities can give him, in these days it seems to be somewhat sad that these restrictive provisions, unless they are absolutely justified by the necessities of the case, should find a place in the Statute Book. The position of Bihar is admittedly not very satisfactory from the standpoint of higher education. The population numbers 34 million, and including the feudatory states 38, and yet the number of students in the colleges is about one-seventh or eighth of what obtains in Bengal, whose population is only a third or fourth more than that of Bihar and Orissa. There are a large number of districts, 29, and we make provision that there must be colleges in only 6 places and no other colleges can be started anywhere else except with the explicit permission of the Government of India.

“One reason why the University Court in the London University was recommended to be composed of representatives of all classes was that, even in such a civilised country as the United Kingdom, it was felt that it was absolutely necessary to enlist the sympathies of all classes in the interests of higher education in order that there may be a more satisfactory rate of advance than prevailed heretofore. If that was the condition of things in London three years ago, I must say that it is the interest of us all to see that all the people of Bihar and Orissa should have their patriotic interests roused, that local patriotism should if possible be stimulated, and that every one of them—every wealthy man—should be induced to give of his best for the purpose of starting colleges in the centres in which he is interested. We have only six at present and there is an omission, an unfortunate omission of large places in which I may say the whole of India is interested. For instance, a first grade college at a place like Puri which is resorted to by pilgrims from all over India and where alone caste distinctions are not observed, is a place which would appeal to the instincts of all Hindus. Gya is similarly situated. Darbhunga, the seat of a large and wealthy zemindar, is another place of that description. I have been told that the whole of Tirhoot is practically unrepresented. In such a condition of things I should imagine that this provision should be relaxed and that it should be enacted only when there is an absolute necessity for it.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

“It might be said ‘you can obtain the sanction of the Government of India in a proper case.’ Sir, I respectfully submit that the energies of the Government of India might be utilized in various directions more useful than in considering as to whether a first grade college should be located or permitted to be located in a corner of Bihar and Orissa when the people are anxious that it should be located. We are all talking about decentralisation, and surely the educated people of Bihar and Orissa, can be trusted to safeguard the interests of existing colleges and higher education therein and to see that no unhealthy institution should be located in a place where the interests of higher education would be jeopardised. I can understand one reason which possibly actuated those who are anxious for this restriction upon location, and that is this. They might have thought that it would induce the promotion of better academic surroundings if a number of colleges could be located in one centre instead of being dissipated over a large number of centres. That is the only possible justification for a restriction of this description. You have some restrictions with regard to the large educational centre, i.e., Patna and that provision is enough to meet the requirements of a residential college. With regard to other places, the present Bill should encourage local patriotism and enable people to start as many external colleges as possible. That seems to be the first desideratum. In Scotland with 4 millions of people you can afford to have 4 Universities in four distinct places. Surely with a population of 34 millions and a vast area rivalling that of the United Kingdom you can certainly afford to have first grade colleges at all the larger centres.

“It is because, Sir, I felt that the position of the Government might be misunderstood and we should do all that lies in our power to remove such a wrong impression and it is because I felt that the interests of the people of Bihar and Orissa would not be sufficiently protected if these restrictions be enacted that I have ventured to bring before you this amendment. I hope it will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“Sir, I strongly support the amendment which has been moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. It seems to me rather surprising that at this era of the world's progress there should be any desire on the part of any educational or administrative authority to demarcate a line beyond which educational institutions should not be established. In America they have 134 Universities, or rather had a few years ago. I wonder if they have not added to that number during the last few years.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

In England they had 9 Universities up to the sixties ; now they have 18, if not more. In Italy they have 21 Universities ; in Germany, 22. Now in this country for a large Province like Bihar and Orissa with its extensive area and its large population, it seems rather surprising, as I said, that the Government should desire to limit the area within which or the places where colleges of the first grade should be established. If Bankipore were a particularly healthy place, which I am sorry to say it is not, even then it would not be desirable to say to anyone who might be willing to make an endowment to establish a college at any other place, that he shall not be allowed to do so. Gya is one of the most healthy districts in Bihar. Monghyr was known for a long time as a sanitarium and used to attract lots of people ; there is Arrah ; there is Chapra. These are all big districts with many lakhs of population. Is it not time, in this twentieth century, that every one of these districts should be encouraged to establish a first rate college within their limits ? Is it consistent with the desire of the Government to promote education by the establishment of a University in Bihar and Orissa that they should say to the people that they may establish colleges of the first class only at four centres in the province ? For other purposes, for revenue purposes, for administrative purposes, these districts are regarded as large enough to require a full fledged district administration. Why not then for educational institutions also ? I submit that there is very great reason why the Government should reconsider its decision on this matter. It is not right that, Canute like, they should say 'thus far and no further,' in regard to educational institutions. Wherever there is a desire among the people to make an endowment for a college, it ought to be encouraged. Who knows that among the rich men who visit Gya year after year there will be none who will be actuated by a desire to endow a first grade college there. Will it do anyone any harm that a college should be established there ? You have got your rules and regulations with the stringent requirements of which an external college must comply before it can be admitted to any privileges of the University. Why then take this further power to restrict the growth of colleges within limited centres ?

"It may be said that the restriction is meant not to check the progress of higher education but to ensure that it shall be efficient. I hope, Sir, we shall not hear much of efficiency in education now until we have a little more real efficiency in the administration. The cry for educational efficiency has been responsible for the sacrifice of a great deal of educational progress. I fear that many a young man who might have been receiving high education has been hampered and impeded by this fetish of educational efficiency. If the Americans are free to choose any locality they like for establishing a college, wherever they find a suitable healthy site and wherever any monied man is willing to endow a college, why should not His Majesty's subjects in Bihar and Orissa be equally free to do so. I do not think the proposed restriction can be defended, and I hope the Hon'ble the Education Member, and the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction of Bihar will see their way to agree to accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"Sir, I am afraid my friends forget that under the existing law a College in Bihar and Orissa can be affiliated only with the consent of the Chancellor. What is done now by this Bill is that that power is withdrawn from the Chancellor or the Governor-General and delegated to the Local Government in the case of Colleges that may be established at these four places, i.e. Muzzuffarpur, Bhagalpur, Cuttack and Hazaribagh.

"In other places if a first-rate college is to be started and affiliated to this University, then the consent of the Governor-General in Council has to be obtained. No new restriction therefore is imposed by this Bill. What restriction there is already exists. Moreover there is no reason for all these apprehensions of my Hon'ble friends, because there is no reason to fear that if the necessity arises for the institution of colleges at these places, the Governor General will refuse his consent. I submit to the Council therefore that there is no necessity to go further."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" I know that the Governor General as the Chancellor of the Calcutta University administers the present Patna Colleges ; but, Sir, we have now made a division of duties and hereafter the Lieutenant-Governor is to be Chancellor. So I do not think the Government of India have surrendered very much when they say that a college can be started at the instance of the Local Government. Bengal too is shortly to have its own Governor as Chancellor of the Calcutta University. The point is not that the Governor General in Council will refuse his permission where there is a keen desire to open a college and all the preliminaries have been satisfied. My contention is cannot you trust the Senate ? Cannot you trust the Syndicate and the local people ? Why should people be made to apprehend that Government is against higher education, as they would apprehend if this clause were retained. That in itself would dissuade a lot of people from coming forward and opening new colleges. And for that reason I still hope that the Council will consider whether my amendment is not worthy of their acceptance."

The amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, I beg leave to withdraw amendment No. 23 that in clause 9 (3) (a) the word ' or ' before the word ' Hazaribagh ' be omitted and the words ' Patna, Gya, Arrah, Chapra, or Monghyr ' be inserted after the word ' Hazaribagh."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" Amendment No. 23 is by leave withdrawn."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" I beg to move, Sir, that to clause 11 of the Bill the following further proviso be added ; I will read it in the form in which I have modified it and of which I have informed you. I hope I have your permission to do so. It runs as follows :—

Provided further that nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Benares Hindu University to admit to its admission examination, students of any school in Bihar and Orissa which has been recognised for the purpose."

The reason for this amendment is this. The Benares Hindu University is not allowed to affiliate colleges situated outside Benares, but it is allowed to recognise schools, i.e., to admit students of schools which have been recognised for the purpose to its admission examination. Under the regulations of the Benares Hindu University, it can admit to its admission examination either a pupil of a recognised school or a private candidate. A recognised school is a school which has been recognised for the purpose of sending up students to the admission examination of the Benares Hindu University, by the Local Government of the Province or of the Native State where it is situated.

" Section 11 as it stands at present says that ' notwithstanding anything in any other law for the time being in force, no University in British India other than the Patna University shall, after the commencement of this Act, admit any educational institution in the province of Bihar and Orissa to any privileges whatever.....'

" Under the regulations of the Benares University, which were framed by order of the Governor General in Council and which are therefore law, the Local Government of Bihar can recognise a school for the Benares University in order that the students of that school may go up for the admission examination of the University. But if the section 11 should remain as it is, laying down that no other University shall admit any educational institution in Bihar to any privileges, it will deprive

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Pandit M. M. Malaviya; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.] [13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

a school in the province of Bihar, even if it is recognised by the Local Government of Bihar and Orissa, for the Benares University of the privilege of sending up students for the admission examination of the Benares University. The language used being what it is, viz., that 'no University.....shall admit any educational institution in Bihar and Orissa to any privileges whatever,' if the section stands, the result will be that while the Local Government of Bihar and Orissa may recognise a school for the admission examination of the Benares University, the Benares University will not have the power to admit any student of such a school to its admission examination. I am sure this is not contemplated. I am sure it is due to an omission to take note of the Regulations of the Benares University and I hope the Hon'ble the Education Member will be pleased to accept my amendment.

"I wish to mention one thing more, that as the Council is aware, the Benares Hindu University is an All-India University, in the sense that it has its Patrons and its supporters all over the country. His Excellency the Viceroy is the Lord Rector, and the Governors of every Province are ex-officio Patrons of the University. Many of the Ruling Princes in different parts of India are also its Patrons. They have subscribed to its funds. The general public in all parts of India have also subscribed to its funds. It was in view of these facts that the Government were pleased to recognise that though they could not allow the University to affiliate colleges outside Benares, they should allow it to admit pupils from schools in whatever part of India they may be situated, if they have been recognised for the purpose by the Government of the place where they may be situated, and I hope, Sir, that that privilege will be allowed to stand untouched, unaffected by this Bill. If my amendment is accepted, that object will be secured."

The Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair:—"I fully sympathise with the purpose which the Hon'ble Member has in view. It is not the intention of the Government to deprive the Benares University of any of the privileges which it now has in the province of Bihar and Orissa, and if the words in the Bill did deprive the University of such privileges, I would have agreed to this amendment. But I think—and I am advised, that this amendment is unnecessary, because the words in the Bill have not that effect. The Benares University will have the same privileges in the province of Bihar and Orissa as it has elsewhere in India. The Bill itself only deals with the admission of any educational institution to certain privileges. They do not deprive any University of its right to admit any students to examinations. If afterwards it is found that those words are construed to deprive the Benares University of the privileges which they enjoy the act may then be amended. But, as I have said, I do not think that the words in the Bill have any such effect and therefore I think this amendment is unnecessary. On that ground I oppose it."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Sir, I am very thankful to the Hon'ble the Education Member for expressing sympathy with my amendment and for giving an assurance to the Council that it is not intended that the section as it stands should deprive the Hindu University of any privileges which it enjoys under the Benares Hindu University Act and its regulations. But I submit, Sir, that as the Hon'ble Member has seen that there are two opinions about this matter, and as he says that if there is any difficulty felt in the future there will be no objection to an amendment being brought forward to remove that difficulty, I most respectfully submit that it is much better to accept this amendment, to which no exception has been taken on the merits, now, rather than to make it necessary later on, if it should eventually prove necessary, that there should be another Bill introduced to rectify this matter....."

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Pandit M. M. Malaviya; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy.]

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" Will you allow me, Sir, to explain that this amendment is put in as a proviso to a section and as it deals with a matter not dealt with in the section it is undesirable to insert the proviso."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" I shall not, Sir, press this to a vote; I accept the assurance of the Hon'ble the Education Member."

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, my friend, the Hon'ble the Raja of Kanika, who is most interested in the matter, is under a vow of silence. The clause as it stands might possibly be considered to include the provision, and I do not therefore propose to move my amendment that in sub-clause (b) of clause 14 (1) (i) the following words be inserted at the end :—

'and the minimum number of persons to be so included.'

With your permission, Sir, I shall withdraw it."

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" I move, Sir, that the Schedule printed on the notice of amendment be substituted for the First Schedule to the Bill. It contains the names of the members of the Senate. I may say that the list has been accepted by the Local Government, by the non-official members coming from those provinces and by the official members."

The amendment was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" I move, Sir, that the Second Schedule printed on the notice of amendment be substituted for the Schedule as it now stands, which contains no names. This Schedule contains the names of the members of the Syndicate. It was framed by the Local Government and the non-official members have accepted that Schedule. It submit, therefore, that we might safely accept it."

The amendment was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" I now move, Sir, that this Bill to establish and incorporate a University at Patna, as amended, be passed. It may be that the Bill does not satisfy the extreme advocates of efficiency or those who think that the representatives of popular opinion and sentiment have not obtained full control. That, perhaps, is in itself a recommendation. I move, Sir, that the Bill be passed."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy :—" Sir, I do not propose to detain the Council more than a minute or two at this stage. As one who took some part in criticising the original Bill when it was presented last September in this Council, I think it my duty to express my satisfaction and gratitude to the Hon'ble Member for Education for the manner in which he received the many important suggestions that were placed before him by the public as well as by the members of the Select Committee, and the spirit of compromise which he showed in accepting those suggestions. In the Bill as it stands many important alterations and changes have been made. We all welcome the changes regarding the inclusion of the Diamond Jubilee College, Monghyr, among the external Colleges. Again, the reduction of the term of the Vice-Chancellor's appointment from five to three years as well as the provision for the adequate representation on the Senate of all the Faculties of the University and of persons permanently resident in the Orissa Division are necessary and desirable changes. The Bill, to my mind, though it meets many requirements and satisfies many demands, is still not an ideal one. However, as the Select Committee's Report shows, it is a compromise which has been accepted by the Bihar and Orissa Members and that fact makes criticism by representatives of other provinces very difficult. The Bill is a considerable improvement on the former Bill.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. M. B. Dadabhoi; Raja of Kanika;
Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

There is a healthy change in the policy as well. But the Bill is still open to criticism in two important matters. Firstly, in respect of the powers given to the Chancellor and, secondly, in respect of the powers of independent action given to the Syndicate. The powers given to the Chancellor in the Patna University are the same as those given under the Benares Hindu University Act. But, to my mind, the difference in the conditions of management of the two universities makes the application of one uniform rule to both wrong in principle and inexpedient in practice. However, as the Bihar representatives have accepted these changes I do not think it necessary to state anything further on the points. It now remains for all of us to wish this university a brilliant and prosperous career. Let us all hope and wish that it will grow from year to year in usefulness and importance, and in the fulness of time it will produce generations of scholars well-equipped and qualified to discharge the duties of citizenship of this great Empire and to hold their own against the best products of other universities, and who will be respected as much for their character and attainments as for their steadfast devotion and loyalty to the Crown."

The Hon'ble the Raja of Kanika :—" Sir, I heartily support the motion which has been put before the Council. As one associated with this question from its very early stage, it gives me no little pleasure to help at its conclusion. I offer my thanks to the Government of India for introducing this Bill at a time when the attention of Government is engaged with the pre-occupations of the war. I also thank the Government of my province for suggesting some of the liberal provisions contained in this Bill. Our thanks are also due to the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill for the tact and sympathy with which he piloted this Bill. We all know the opposition which the draft Bill raised throughout India and also in this Council before it was referred to the Select Committee. Had it not been for the sympathetic attitude of the Hon'ble Member in dealing with the different questions, probably this Bill would have been wrecked, and Bihar and Orissa would have gone at least for some years without a University. The Bill was only acceptable to the people after it was materially changed by the Select Committee. Though there is still room for improvement, I think it has been a satisfactory compromise and in some respects an improvement over the existing University Acts. I hope the University which will be created by this Bill will gradually grow in usefulness and vigour and will prove a source of benefit to the people of my province whose education has been rather neglected in the past. I must express my gratification at the fact that the interests of Orissa are safeguarded by the provisions that a certain number of fellows to be determined by the regulations shall be persons permanently resident therein, and that at least one member of the Syndicate, in addition to the Principal of the Ravenshaw College who sits as an ex-officio member, shall be a person permanently resident in Orissa.

" At the same time I might mention here without being misunderstood that the people of Orissa will no doubt be placed at some disadvantage until they have a university of their own but until that time comes I hope and trust that the Ravenshaw College, the only college in Orissa, will be so equipped as to teach up to the higher standard. With these few words, I beg to support the motion."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay :—" Sir, I am glad that all controversy about the Patna University Bill is now hushed into silence and that it is going to be passed into law to-day. I have no doubt that the news will be received with satisfaction throughout the province of Bihar and Orissa. The Patna University Bill has had an eventful career, a career which was perhaps as eventful as any measure of policy that has emanated from the Government of India and passed through this Council. The controversy which raged round some of its provisions, the heat that was introduced into that controversy

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. Krishna Sahay ; Mr. K.K. Chanda ; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

by critics taking opposite views with regard to them, threatened its progress and even jeopardised its existence. I am happy to think that the Government of India kept steadily in view one fact which stood above all, in connection with this Bill, the one fact which was of paramount importance and above all controversy, and that fact was that the Province of Bihar and Orissa after its separation from Bengal and its own constitution into a separate administrative unit needed a university of its own, that moreover it was the intense desire of the people of Bihar and Orissa to possess a university of their own. I believe, Sir, that in this matter the aspirations of the people of Bihar and Orissa were in complete accord with the wishes of the Local Government. Now that we are going to have a university of our own I have no hesitation in saying that it will usher in a new era of educational progress in the Province and lead to its fuller self-development which we all have so much at heart. It is now my pleasant duty to offer on behalf of the people of my Province the deep debt of gratitude they owe to the Government of India for having undertaken legislation to endow the Province with a university of its own even in these anxious times on account of the war, our gratitude is to them all the greater and more profound for that reason. Our thanks are no less due to the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair for having piloted the Bill through its successive stages, sometimes difficult and delicate stages, with that consummate ability and skill which we have learned to associate with his name; and last though not least our thanks are due to the Local Government for the calm, judicious and conciliatory attitude which they adopted from the beginning towards this Bill and which has contributed so much towards its success and so greatly facilitated its passage through the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—" Sir, in giving my support to the motion before the Council, relating to the Patna University Bill, as amended, I shall say only one word. I not only associate myself with the reservation which my hon'ble friends Mr. Basu and Mr. Sastri made in the Report of the Select Committee, namely, that the provision in this Bill regarding the relations between the Senate and the Syndicate shall not be applicable to other universities but I go further and submit that this Bill should be considered as having been passed in very peculiar circumstances and applicable to a particular province only, and that it is not to be regarded as a model for the remodelling of existing universities or the founding of other new university. The Bill as amended by the Select Committee is admitted to be a very great improvement on the original Bill; it is a matter for satisfaction that it has made a notable advance upon existing universities in the matter of the composition of the Senate. I would wish that the Bill as revised by the Select Committee had gone further in the direction of providing for the election of the Vice-Chancellor. I am in agreement with the amendments of my hon'ble friends Mr. Sarma and Dr. Sapru in this matter but, understanding that my colleagues from the Province of Bihar and Orissa who are most affected by the Bill, are satisfied with its provisions, I thought it would be out of the way on the part of other provinces to propose other amendments in the Bill. With these few words Sir, I support the motion and wish the new university a most brilliant and prosperous career."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" Sir, it would be a pity if this Bill were allowed to pass into law without a statement made as to some of the features of the measure which have not clearly emerged from the discussion. It has been said that this Bill is a compromise. Perhaps, however, the most important respect in which it is a compromise is not sufficiently realised. It is a compromise between two types of universities; the first is the federal or affiliating university and the other is the unitary or residential university. This Bill, starting perhaps as a residential university, has slowly expanded into what is partially a residential and partly an affiliating university. Naturally therefore

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

it does not satisfy the extreme exponents of either type, and there are many moderate exponents on either side who fear that it may be dogged by the defects of both types, while it may but partially realise the excellences of either. We have internal colleges provided for in this Bill and external colleges, and our university authorities will have their attention directed to two types of functions, the first with reference to the internal and the other with reference to the external colleges. I take it, Sir, that there is a strong desire that the teaching functions of the university should not be swamped by the affiliating functions. If there were a large number of colleges scattered over a wide province the university authorities would find their hands full of their affairs, and may not find time and energy for the development of the teaching aspect of the university. That, I believe, is the strongest argument for restricting the areas where colleges might grow up. We must not forget the genesis of the university. It arose out of the desire of the new Province, both Government and people, to have a university of their own and not be subject any longer to the control of the Calcutta University which for one reason or another it is now the fashion to denounce. In this desire, as I said, both Government and the people participate, therefore while it was considered desirable to have a unitary type of University in Bankipore, it was at the same time considered a pity that the other colleges should have to continue under the control of the Calcutta University, and it was for that reason, I think, decided to allow the first grade colleges in the province to be affiliated to this new University. If in this respect it is a compromise there are some satisfactory features in this Bill to which I shall now refer. It represents, Sir, I am glad to acknowledge, a considerable advance on the constitution of the older universities in India. In this University as it is proposed, the Senate would be largely composed of elected Fellows. Out of about 90 Fellows, we shall have ex-officio and ordinary, about 50 will be elected. That represents a proportion far in excess of the one-fifth elected element that we have in the older universities. It is not only in respect of the proportion that one is bound to express gratification, but the manner in which this elective element is worked out is also very satisfactory. We have in the first place a certain proportion of this elective element to be supplied by the teachers from the various colleges. I well remember, Sir, when the old Universities Act was passed in 1904, strong attempts were made by non-official people to get the teachers direct representation on the Senate. But it was then considered too much of an advance; however, it is now satisfactory to find that the views of Government have changed and they have constituted the best electorate possible out of the teaching element in the colleges.

"I am also glad to acknowledge that the schools that will have relation with this new University are likewise to have a certain amount of representation. In my own province of Madras, I well remember taking part in an agitation for getting the school masters, at any rate the Head Masters, representation on the University. The authorities of my University were always very severe on our schools and they said what has a school master got to do with the University. It is very gratifying that at present in the Patna University the Head Masters will find representation to the number of five.

"There is also, Sir, another principle of considerable importance recognised in this Bill, to which I wish to draw the attention of the Council. It has been somewhat of a weakness in other Universities that the first grade colleges, although affiliated, have not been given the importance due to them. It has been left for example to the Chancellor from time to time to nominate the Principal even of a first grade college, and I know of a case in which the Principal of one of the largest colleges in our presidency teaching up to the B. A. standard was not given a seat on the Senate. Many attempts were made to get him on the Senate, but for some reason or another we found it till recently impossible. This Bill recognises the right of Principals of colleges teaching

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

up to the B.A. standard to sit ex-officio on the Senate, and that, I think, is a principle of very great importance. It is not only with regard to the constitution of the Senate, but I must say also that the constitution of the Syndicate is a good deal better than the constitution of the syndicates of the older Universities. We have, Sir, in the first instance the number of syndics expanded from 15, which represents the maximum of the older universities, to 18, and out of these 4 ought to sit ex-officio, and these 4, two are Principals of important colleges who should not be left to the chances of an election.

“Then, Sir, I am very glad to draw the attention of the Council to another feature of great importance marking a constitutional step in advance of the older Universities. In the older universities the work of affiliation and disaffiliation of colleges, which might be said to be the principal work of the University, is not a function of the Senate at all. The present rule is that, when the authorities of a college which is proposed to be started make an application for affiliation, the syndicate after making due enquiries record an opinion, yes or no. The Senate after making further enquiries if they like, record another opinion yes or no. The two opinions are forwarded together to Government who decide the matter. Legally, therefore, the act of affiliation or the act of refusal of affiliation is an act of the Government and not an act of the University. In this Bill we make a great step in advance. The Government cannot affiliate a college unless such affiliation is already recommended by the Senate. That, I think, gives the Senate a power and dignity not enjoyed by the Senates of the older universities. I do not say that this is altogether the ideal to be reached, but it marks a step in advance, for which we ought to be grateful.

“There is another feature in this Bill to which I should like to draw the attention of this Council, and that is with regard to the discrimination which universities always make between purely legislative and administrative functions. The Senate is usually charged with the legislative functions. The administrative or executive duties are always left more or less to the initiative of the Syndicate. We allow as a matter of practice in the older universities almost complete freedom to the Syndicates in all administrative matters. Their action in these respects comes before the Senate only upon appeal. That appeal in this Bill is somewhat restricted, and that is a feature which critics have disapproved as marking a decline in the progress of university constitution, I should like to point out that no university hitherto, to my knowledge, has exercised its revisional power over the acts of its syndicate in purely administrative matters. The Bill before us attempts to lay down this broad distinction and specify some functions under each head. This must be very helpful in the actual working of the Patna University, and marks another respect in which it would differ for the better from the existing Universities. Let me say a word on the question whether the right of appeal is unnecessarily restricted. In my opinion it would have been more satisfactory if the right of appeal were allowed upon three members of the Syndicate representing that a decision should be revised. But we have it here as 6. Well, 6 is a number which it would be very difficult to get on the Syndicate of the new University which is just starting its life. However as time goes on it may be possible to amend this Bill and I will not, while congratulating ourselves on the passage of this Bill, dwell too much on that aspect of the question.

“Now, Sir, I come to the last point, one which I consider as the most important aspect of any university constitution. We have got to find how far the University enjoys freedom from external control in its daily function. Analysing the Bill, I find that the Local Government, and in that expression I include the

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

Chancellor for the purposes of this criticism, the Local Government have ten different ways in which they may exercise control over the administration of the University.

"I will enumerate them, Sir, rapidly. In the first place the Chancellor has the right of inspection, which in the older universities, omitting Benares, he has not, and he has also the right of annulling any provision or any act which in his opinion contravenes the provisions of the Act. Then he appoints the Vice-Chancellor. Then there are the ex-officio Fellows, the Director of Public Instruction and the Vice-Chancellor besides the members of the Executive Council of the Local Government. Then there are as many as 25 Ordinary Fellows whom the Chancellor nominates, and who therefore exercise a sort of internal control over the proceedings of the University. Then the Chancellor nominates associations or public bodies which in their turn have the right of appointing a certain number of Fellows to the Senate. Then we have got as many as four members ex-officio on the Syndicate, one of whom is the Director and the other is the Vice-Chancellor while the other two are Principals of Government colleges. Then the Chancellor has to approve in every case of a proposal for the conferment of an Honorary Degree. Then, what we do not find in the older Act, there is the provision that the Chancellor himself, on the recommendations of the Senate, has to make the appointment of all the members of the University staff. Then he has to approve of the affiliation or disaffiliation of colleges, and finally any regulations which the University may pass cannot take effect unless they have received the previous sanction of the Government. Now this long catalogue in my opinion represents, Sir, an excessive amount of control over the University. If any body, under the supreme Legislature, has the right of attaining as much as possible to self-government, in my opinion it is the University. The University deals with matters with which experts alone are competent to deal. Except when matters rise to capital importance and have political aspects, it is not desirable that the Government should seek to control the functions of a University. I should therefore like in course of time that certain of these forms of control should be taken away and the Universities should be left with what after all is the essence of their life, namely, freedom. You read books on Universities and you will find both Professors and others interested in their development constantly crying out for internal freedom. Now the constitution that we devise for our Universities may be never so perfect, we may fill our laboratories with apparatus which is up-to-date, we may fill our libraries and weight the shelves with heavy tomes, but after all the efficiency of a university depends on the quality of the professors, on the perfect cordiality which prevails between the learner and the teacher, on the academic atmosphere that prevails, on the freedom to apply themselves without fear to the pursuit of truth and knowledge. Political subordination, liability to control in small matters from outside, these sap that freedom, and I therefore appeal to those who may have it in their power to govern this University hereafter, to the official representatives of Bihar and Orissa here, and to non-official representatives, and through them also to the local Government that their management should allow as much as is possible under this constitution of this spirit of complete internal freedom. Bihar, Sir, is a young Province; its educational opportunities have not been ample. It is still undeveloped, if one may say so, educationally, and it is therefore of the utmost importance that this University should be administered with the greatest possible sympathy and with the desire to promote and not in any way restrict—as somebody has given expression to his apprehension to-day—not in any way to restrict the facilities of the people for higher education.

"I have nothing to add, Sir, but to express my wish, as I am sure it is the wish of this Council, that this University should start with every opportunity for full development and under the most favourable auspices.

PATNA UNIVERSITY BILL.

[Mr. J. G. Jennings ; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

The Hon'ble Mr. J. G. Jennings :—" Sir, I rise to support the Bill. I have travelled over the length and breadth of the Province of Bihar and Orissa and I have found everywhere that the Bill as it now stands is very welcome and that the University as it is outlined in the present Bill is eagerly looked forward to. I have consulted persons of all sorts and conditions, leading politicians and private men, and educationists of all ranks, and I am convinced that the great bulk of the province are whole-heartedly in favour of the Bill as it now stands. There has been give and take in the formation of the Bill under the hands of the Select Committee, which was of a thoroughly representative character. In the Select Committee each side showed a genuine desire to meet the views of the other and to come to an agreement acceptable to all. The Bill as it stands represents such an agreement. It is acceptable to that large moderate party which is composed happily of Indians and Europeans, of officials and non-officials alike. I earnestly advocate that the Bill be now passed, and I can assure the Council, as one who is acquainted with every part of the Province, that the people of Bihar and Orissa will be deeply grateful to them if they receive their University in this form."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—" Sir, I entirely associate myself with those of my friends who have congratulated the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair and the other members of the Government on the success of this measure. I think it is also fair that we should acknowledge the services, I might say the signal services, rendered to the Province of Bihar by the members of the Select Committee. As I said yesterday, the task of the non-official members was by no means a very easy one and I am free to recognise that the task of the official members was perhaps equally difficult. Happily, however, a compromise has been arrived at which is satisfactory not only to the Province of Bihar but to the rest of the Indian community at large.

"My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has in his very luminous and exhaustive speech brought out the salient features of this measure and I do not propose to dwell on them over again. There is no doubt that the Bill as it stands to-day is a very much more liberal and progressive measure than it was when it was first introduced. I remember that when it was introduced many of us felt despair and I also remember that it gave rise to a storm of agitation in Bihar, which was sympathised with in other parts of India. It is equally gratifying to our feelings to-day that public opinion has triumphed and that the Government have seen their way to offer such a recognition to that public opinion as it was entitled to, and that the measure as it is now going to be passed is one which will be very acceptable to the people of Bihar.

"Sir, the constitution of the Senate I am free to admit is in some respects much more liberal than the constitution of the Senate of which I happen to be a member. Similarly I am free to admit that the constitution of the Syndicate too is in some respects more liberal than the constitution of the Syndicates of the older Universities. It is equally gratifying that the powers of affiliation and disaffiliation, which at one time seemed to give rise to grave apprehension, have been revised and that they stand now on a very satisfactory footing. Sir, all this and perhaps much more may be claimed for this Bill, but I am afraid sometimes people and I might include in that word the Government put too much faith in Acts of Parliament. You can no more make a people learned by Act of Parliament than you can make them moral or temperate. After all the problem of education in India is not a problem of legislation, of Acts or Statutes. It seems to me that the real problem of education in India is the problem of the teacher or the professor. It has been, Sir, a reproach to our University education in India that, while the Universities have been turning out graduates every year by hundreds, very few scholars have been produced, and that the present system of education has not been able to rekindle that originality of mind and of thought which at one time distinguished India among the civilised nations of the world. In fact as one critic has said in the words of Tennyson 'knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.' But I doubt, Sir, if even true knowledge has been given by the present-day Universities in India.

"I am one of those men, Sir, who believe in the efficiency of education, but my conception of efficiency, if I may be permitted to say so with all respect, is very different from the official conception of efficiency. I do not believe in the multiplication of rules and regulations and disciplinary measures. I believe very few of these are really wanted. To raise the standard of education you cannot raise it merely by raising the number of marks or stiffening the examination or by making it altogether more difficult for a student to pass the examination. You can only raise the standard when you endow your university with professors who would be an honour to the University, and who would dominate the intellectual and moral existence of their pupils. Unfortunately, one's experience of Indian Universities has been that, while there is always too much care for efficiency, the real problem of the professor and the student is ignored. I sincerely hope and trust that, when the Bihar University is started, we shall be presented with the new and salutary example of existence of cordial relations between students and professors, professors who will command the confidence of their pupils and who will give an entirely different tone to their character and to their thought. Sir, it is with these hopes that I have ventured to rise to support this measure. I sincerely hope and trust that the measure which we are passing to-day will revive the faded glories of Bihar and once again restore Patna, the modern substitute of Pataliputra, to its ancient glories. With these hopes, Sir, I cordially support this measure."

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh :—"I strongly support the Bill. I will not detain the Council but would like on behalf of my Province to thank the members of this Council for the support which they have given to the Patna University Bill.

"It is not necessary for me to refer to the various points in which the Patna University will differ from the older existing Universities. They are fully stated in the Report of the Select Committee, and have been very fully and clearly reviewed by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri.

"I will merely refer to two points in which the present Bill constitutes a very marked liberal advance on the present Universities, namely the provision of an elected majority on the Senate and on the Syndicate, and to the fully representative nature of the first Senate and Syndicate which the Bihar Government has nominated, contained in the two schedules of the Bill.

"I think that everyone will admit that the Government of Bihar and Orissa have agreed to liberal concessions, and have fully provided for the representation of the popular element in the administration of the University, and that the Bill, as it now stands, represents a real advance in the direction of meeting the wishes of the educated classes.

"From the time of the constitution of the Province, both the people and the Government of Bihar and Orissa have desired that the Province should have its own University, and the control of its own education.

"I feel sure that the Bill will be welcomed by the whole Province, and that it will lead materially to the development and prosperity of the Province."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah :—"Sir, my province has not been very articulate in the course of the progress of this Bill and I do not wish, Sir, to remain absolutely silent when this Bill has come to the stage of being passed by this Council. I have very great pleasure in, if I may say so, offering my best blessings to this University which is going to be established in Bihar and Orissa. There are only two or three matters that I think I need refer to briefly. The first is that I have silently watched and certainly have no hesitation in appreciating the attitude of the Government taken up from the very beginning, and what is more their attitude has satisfied the non-official members who were on the Select Committee; and although amendment after amendment was moved in this Council by other members, those non-official members who represent Bihar and Orissa remained absolutely silent. That convinced me of one thing, that certainly Bihar is ready for provincial autonomy, because they maintained a sphinx-like silence just as Government sometimes do. Another thing which I want to refer to is that I think our hearty congratulations are due to the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair, the Educational Member, who has piloted this Bill so successfully and so satisfactorily through this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque :—" Sir, the Patna University Bill has reached the stage when it is going to be placed on the Statute Book of the land. It was the long cherished desire of the people of Bihar to have a University of their own, and with the passing of this Bill into law that desire will be fulfilled. Sir, when this Bill was introduced by my Hon'ble friend, Sir Sankaran Nair, it was received with intense disapproval by the people of Bihar and by the whole country. But now when it has emerged from the Select Committee, it has emerged in a shape in which it can hardly be recognised. Undoubtedly, there are some defects in the Bill; I recognise that myself. But, Sir, where is the human institution about which it can be said that it is perfect. I have no hesitation in saying that in many of its provisions this Bill is a great advance even on the present Act of 1904, and it has been received as such by my province. There were discussions in the Select Committee, and at times we were afraid that we had come to the breaking point and that the whole of this Bill would be wrecked. But it was due to the great tact and sympathy of the Hon'ble the Education Member that that critical stage was passed, and I may say, Sir, that it was greatly due to your own self in the way you presided as the head of this Committee. It would be ungrateful of me not to mention here the conciliatory attitude of my Local Government—of Sir Edward Gait and his Government—and also of the helpful attitude of my Hon'ble colleagues, Messrs. Jennings and Sharp.

"It was their help which made this Bill a possible one. Sir, All these stages have passed and now I hope the Patna University will be conducted in such a way that it will be satisfactory to the people for whom it is designed. As my friend the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru has said, the success or failure of a University depends entirely upon the relations between the students and their professors. I personally do not believe in complicated regulations and statutes and what not. If the professors treat their students properly and with loving-kindness, the University is bound to be a success: otherwise it is sure to be a failure; and it depends upon the Local Government of Bihar what professors they will have in their University. You may have, Sir, any number of elected members on the Senate and the Syndicate but they will not help to make the University a success.

"In conclusion, Sir, I hope that this University will perform the functions for which it has been designed. It is going to the country with the blessings of all the official and non-official members of this Council and I wish it godspeed in its career of usefulness."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Khan Bahadur M. M. Shafi.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—"Sir, I beg to move that—

"This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the legislative and administrative system in the Punjab be assimilated to that of the Province of Bihar and Orissa."

"For purposes of comparison I have selected the province of Bihar and Orissa, not because we in the Punjab envy our brethren of that Province the good things which a bountiful Providence through the agency of a beneficent Government has bestowed upon them, but because, to use the language of one of her prominent citizens, Bihar is 'equipped with almost all the executive and judicial paraphernalia of an advanced administration.' But to appreciate the true significance of the comparison which I am about to make it is necessary for Hon'ble Members to bear in mind two facts. The Punjab is, in its territorial extent, much larger than the province of Bihar and Orissa, and the provincial share of the annual revenues in her case exceeds the revenues of Bihar and Orissa by over 50 per cent. Sir, I do not propose to review the past history of the constitutional and administrative developments which have taken place in the various Indian Provinces in order to demonstrate the undeniable fact that the Punjab has at almost every stage received what I cannot help describing as stepmotherly treatment at the hands of Government. It is sufficient for the object which I have in view today to place before Hon'ble Members the principal points of difference between the legislative and administrative systems of the two Provinces in order to bring home to this Council the need of the reform which I wish to press upon the Government of India.

"Turning first to the domain of legislation, the full statutory strength of the Provincial Legislative Council of Bihar, with an area of 111,829 square miles, is 50 members, while the total statutory strength of the Provincial Legislative Council of the Punjab, with its area of 135,880 square miles, is only 30. At present, the Legislative Council of Bihar consists actually of 44 members, of whom 21—that is to say, almost 50 per cent—are elected; while, thanks to the sympathy of His Honour Sir Michael O'Dwyer, our Provincial Council has already reached its maximum strength—that is to say, it consists of 30 members, of whom only 11 or about 33 per cent are elected. The Provincial Legislative Council of Bihar elects 2 representatives of that Province on the Imperial Legislative Council, while our Provincial Legislative Council elects only 1. The Province of Bihar, in addition, elects 2 members of this Imperial Legislative Council, 1 representing the Moslem community of that Province, the other representing the landholding classes; while in the case of the Punjab the representative of the Moslem community as well as the representative of the landholding classes is nominated by Government instead of being elected by their respective constituencies.

"Coming now to the executive and judicial administration of the two Provinces, I would ask Hon'ble Members to bear in mind the fact that while the provincial share of the revenues of Bihar and Orissa amounts to 3 crores and 17 lakhs of rupees according to the Budget of 1916-17, the provincial share of the revenues of my Province is 4 crores and 80 lakhs. With a revenue then exceeding the revenue of Bihar by over 50 per cent the Punjab does not possess either an Executive Council or a High Court; and even going down to the lower rungs of our executive and judicial ladder, our officials are comparatively underpaid.

"These are the principal points of difference to which I want to-day to invite the attention of this Council, and it is towards the removal of these differences that my Resolution is mainly intended.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA

[Khan Bahadur M. M. Shafi.]

"What is it that lies at the root of these remarkable differences? Is it because it is supposed that the Punjab is an educationally backward province? It will be within the recollection of Hon'ble Members that in reply to a question which I put in this Council this time last year, a statement was furnished showing the number of candidates from Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh and the Punjab who had appeared at the various examinations of the Calcutta, the Allahabad and the Punjab Universities respectively in the years 1915-16.

"It would be, I think, unnecessary for me to-day to take Hon'ble Members through the figures of the two years. I will, for my purpose, confine myself to the state of things revealed by the figures of 1916. In the year 1916, 266 candidates appeared in the Matriculation examination from the province of Bihar and Orissa, while 4,710 candidates appeared in the same examination from the province of the Punjab: 746 candidates appeared in the Intermediate in Arts examination from Bihar and Orissa while 922 appeared from the Punjab; and in the Science Faculty 122 from Bihar as compared with 391 from the Punjab. Coming to the B. A. examination, I find that in that year 346 students appeared from Bihar while 845 appeared from the Punjab. In the B. Sc. examination only 26 students appeared from the province of Bihar and Orissa while 57 appeared from the Punjab. And in the M. A. examination the figures are 18 against 66; while in the M. Sc. examination no candidate appeared in Bihar while there were 16 from the Punjab. In the Bachelor of Teaching examination the figures were 25 against 66; in the Bachelor of Laws examination 32 against 101; and while no student appeared in the Bachelor of Medicine examination from Bihar and Orissa, 15 appeared from the Punjab. In short, the total number of students who took their chance in all the University examinations from the matriculation upwards from the province of Bihar and Orissa was 4,129, while the total number of the Punjab candidates was 7,637. It should be remembered that these figures do not include what are known as the Oriental Faculty examinations of the Punjab University. I have confined myself only to those examinations in which our University stands on the same footing as the other Indian Universities. It is, therefore, I say, impossible to give educational backwardness as a reason for the remarkable difference in the legislative and administrative systems of the two provinces.

"Is it, then, the relative superior political importance of the province of Bihar and Orissa as compared with the province of the Punjab which lies at the basis of this remarkable difference? With reference to this part of my case, I venture to submit that the province of the Punjab is politically of greater importance to the Empire than not only Bihar and Orissa but every other province of India, be it Bombay or Bengal or the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. From the early years of its annexation there never has been any campaign in or beyond the frontiers of India, may even in China or Africa, in which our Government has been involved when the Punjab has not played the lion's part in upholding the honour and glory of England. In this world-war in which the British Empire is at present engaged in fulfilment of sacred obligations arising out of international treaties and in the vindication of the right of smaller kingdoms and smaller nationalities to work out their own regeneration on their own lines, the part which the Punjab has played is one of which we in the Punjab are justly proud. About one-half of the total strength of the Indian Expeditionary Force is drawn from our province, and over half of those who have already shed their life-blood in the service of their King-Emperor or have been wounded on the various battle-fields of the three continents are Punjabi soldiers. Over 64 per cent of the entire number of recruits who have enlisted in the Indian Army since the commencement of this terrible war have been drawn from our province; and the major portion of the various labour corps which have been sent to Mesopotamia or to Flanders have also been recruited in the Punjab. Poor as our province is, it has taken the third place in the Indian War Loan, only coming after Bombay and Bengal, and has subscribed to the loan an amount which at one time it was thought the Punjab would probably not be able to do. When we saw that the Aeroplane was going to play a very important part in this warfare it was the Punjab that took the first step to subscribe a large fund in order to present a fleet of aeroplanes to His Majesty; and in the Imperial Relief Fund and in other funds which have been started in connection with this world-war, the Punjab has played an important part. It seems to me that ready as India is, as no one can have had any ground for doubting, at all times to support the cause of the Empire whole-heartedly and unstintedly the Punjab has contributed more than its share in that support. It is idle to say under those circumstances that there is any reason for treating the Punjab differently from the other provinces in the matter of its legislative and administrative systems.

[Khan Bahadur M. M. Shafi.]

"Now, to take up two or three of the principal points of difference. Our Legislative Council, as I have said, consists of thirty members only. What is the result? The result is this: that all the important interests in the Punjab are not adequately represented. The few electorates that there are are unwieldy. For instance, in one of the municipal groups, which elects one member to the provincial legislative council, you have Lahore, the capital of the province situated in the centre of the central districts of the Punjab and Dehra Ghazi Khan, on the edge of the south-western border, in one constituency. If the number of our members were to be raised, the result would be that the population of the Punjab would be adequately represented on their provincial council, that the distribution and constitution of the electorates would be consistent with sound principles and that there would be no complaint, such as we have heard in the past, of this community at one time and of the other at another time being inadequately represented.

"So far as the question of an executive council for our Province is concerned, I would remind Hon'ble Members that the Punjab Hindu Conference as well as the Punjab Moslem League Conference have for years past, almost every year, been passing Resolutions calling upon the Government to give an executive council and finally last year in our Provincial Legislative Council a Resolution was moved by one of the elected representatives of our Province recommending that an executive council should be given to our Province. H. H. Sir Michael O'Dwyer adopted what was a very correct attitude, if I may venture to say so, in connection with the subject, an attitude which indicated his sympathy with the legitimate aspirations of the people. He allowed the non-official Members to have an absolutely untrammelled say in the matter and the result was that the Resolution was carried by practically the unanimous opinion of all the non-official members, elected as well as nominated.

"Coming to the question of a High Court, some years ago in the Provincial Legislative Council a Resolution was put forward advocating the elevation of the Punjab Chief Court to a High Court. The Local Government recommended to the Government of India that this reform be introduced into our province. The Government of India I believe recommended to the Secretary of State that the claim of the Province should be conceded. I have been told that the elevation of the Chief Court to the status of a High Court will involve additional expenditure and therefore the introduction of the reform has been postponed until after the war. Well, all I can say is that the additional expenditure at the most would amount to one lakh and our province is rich enough to be able to afford that additional expenditure. It seems to me that the postponement of every kind of reform, even a reform that is long overdue, to a period after the war is not only unjustifiable but is calculated to cause great disappointment to the people of my Province.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Khan Bahadur M. M. Shafi ; Sirdar Sundar Singh Majithia.]

"Sir, some Hon'ble Members may have wondered why in the Resolution I have addressed to the Council to-day I have made no reference to larger questions such as the appointment of a Governor in Council, provincial autonomy and so on, which constitute prominent features of the various post-war reforms put forward in this country and in England. In view of the advice given by His Excellency in the memorable pronouncement delivered by him on the opening day of this session which I venture to say with confidence sent a thrill of satisfaction throughout the length and breadth of the country, and in view of the forthcoming visit of the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State in connection with these very post-war reforms, it would be premature as well as ill-advised on my part to discuss these large questions. To-day my sole object is to ventilate the past grievances of my province and to invite the attention of the Government of India to certain points in our provincial administration with reference to which, in my humble judgment, reform has been long overdue. I have no hesitation in saying that whatever may be the nature of the post-war reforms which may eventually be decided upon by the Government, my province will expect absolutely the same treatment which may be extended to the other major provinces of India. I am content to-day to invite the attention of the Government of India to some features of our provincial administration with reference to which reform has in my humble judgment been long overdue. The suggestions I have ventured to make satisfies the three tests laid down by His Excellency the Viceroy in the speech to which I have just referred, they are obviously judicious, in the highest degree practical and unquestionably based on justice and right. With these few words I commend my Resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Sirdar Sundar Singh Majithia :—"Sir, it is close upon seventy years that my province passed under the British Crown and formed part of the great British Empire. Since then it has taken rapid strides in every direction and the improvement has been steady. Canals carry the water of the Punjab rivers to arid plains which are being transformed into green fields adding to the grain store of the world. Railways are spreading their net-work and thus afford a handy agency to transport the produce of the land to different parts of the country in much less time than in bygone days. Educational institutions are springing up everywhere thus carrying the torch of light and learning to the remotest corners of the province. Punjab is enterprising and the restrictions of caste not being so rigidly observed as in other parts of India the sons of the soil are to be found in far off climes and countries thus helping the growth of public opinion which is not confined to the upper classes only. All this we owe to the progressive character of the British Government. I am proud to say that though mine is a younger province but in record of services to the Empire it has surpassed all other provinces of India. The heart of the Punjab is true and brave. The sons of the Punjab ever since the annexation have given their all in the service of the Empire. In this great war our soldiers with their lives stemmed the tide of the enemy forces which was invading the fields of France and Flanders. The history of Neuve-Chapelle and Gallipoli when it is officially published will bear witness to the heroism and the splendid services of the brave sons of the Punjab to the cause of the Empire.

"Though we are comparatively poor we have not done badly in the Indian War Loan securing for our province the third position in the list of subscriptions. Now with such a record of progress in all directions and the services rendered to the Empire, not for any reward, but as a loyal duty to our august Sovereign, it is sad to find that we Punjabis have not been placed on a par with the other major provinces of India, so far as legislative and administrative systems of Government are concerned.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Sirdar Sundar Singh Majithia ; Sir William Vincent.] [13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

" Bihar and Orissa, a new province, which came into existence as a modification of Lord Curzon's partition of Bengal, has been given a higher system of administration while the Punjab is still left in the cold. After nearly seventy years of civilised rule we have a right to be placed on the same footing as other major provinces of India. Surely, Sir, we Punjabis may be considered to have passed through those primitive stages when rough and ready methods of administration were needed and it is time that Government were pleased to give the province a higher status. It is matter of congratulation that we have been promised a High Court and now we may reasonably expect an Executive Council with an equal number of Indian Members and all the other privileges which are conferred on other major provinces of India as the result of Mr. Montagu's consultation which may be suitable to our local conditions. Yesterday I received a telegram from the Secretary of the Indian Association, Lahore, and have also seen some comments in the provincial papers on the subject of the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi's resolution. Our critics seem to think as if we were bent on bartering our birth-right and recklessly mortgaging away our future. I have no hesitation in affirming that neither the representatives of the Punjab nor the Government of India have ever dreamed of such a thing. Indeed, I hold that as the Punjab has been foremost in its services during the war it must also be foremost in the matter of constitutional reforms. The Legislative Council of the province is indeed so small that even important interests of a growing province do not find an adequate representation. In this connection I would beg leave to bring to notice the claims of my community which has supplied the largest number of soldiers to the army and maintained a steady flow of recruits. The Sikhs with less than one per cent of the entire Indian population have furnished in this war twenty per cent of the fighting strength of the total Indian army. I submit that the representation of my community ought to be in the same ratio as the share taken by its members in the war. The principle of special representation for important minorities has been recognised by the Government of Lord Minto ; we Sikhs who are decidedly a minority though an important one—do claim special representation in the Provincial and Imperial Councils. The predominant note in the speeches delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab in his recent recruiting tour in the province was the recognition of the response which the Sikhs had made in this war, and I have every reason to hope that our claims will find a strong advocate in our sympathetic Lieutenant-Governor. We Sikhs look up to His Excellency the Viceroy to give us our due. Our services have been often highly commended, but we hope that His Lordship who believes more in deeds than in words, will grant us substantial recognition. We have no intention to press this point at the present juncture when all our resources in men and money should be at the disposal of the Empire ; but when the proper time comes, we trust and hope that Government will be pleased to give our claims a generous recognition.

" I welcome, Sir, the motion of my Hon'ble friend, and give it my hearty support and trust it will receive favourable consideration of the Government of India. I am sure the wide-awake Lieutenant-Governor of our province whose sympathy, interests and insight are unquestioned will support the claims of our province and forward our cause.

" With these few words I beg to support the motion of my friend, the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, on behalf of the Government of India I gladly and freely admit that the great services which the Punjab has rendered to the Empire during the War, both in men, money and materials, have been such as to entitle it to ask that any reasonable demand which is, supported by public opinion in the province, should receive very sympathetic treatment at the hands of Government. In fighting men not only has the Punjab, and the States connected with it, supplied more than 60 per cent of the total number of combatants enlisted in the Indian Army in the past, but at the present moment efforts have been made further to increase the number of recruits and so successful have those been that in the month of July the total number of men recruited from this province exceeded 16,000 men of whom 14,000 were combatants. The contributions of the province to the war loan which amounted to 445 lakhs are also indicative of the loyalty of the people and their desire to render assistance to Government. Further, the province has given approximately 50 lakhs of rupees to various Funds connected with the war including the Imperial Relief Fund, the Red Cross Fund and the Punjab Aeroplane Fund contributions to which alone amounted to 14½ lakhs. I ought to say, Sir, that these figures are inclusive of contributions made by the rulers and peoples of Native States who have given very generously to funds of this character.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Sir William Vincent.]

“Nor, Sir, has the Local Government been backward in recognising these services, and as is right and proper, this recognition has been primarily directed to the agricultural classes from whom the Indian army is mostly drawn and who have made the greatest sacrifices. Thus, in the matter of land revenue, I am informed, that the recent settlements concluded in the districts which have supplied a large number of recruits have been the most lenient in India, and in many districts the term of settlement has been increased to 30 years as against the normal period of 20 years.

“Similarly, in the large canal colonies special priority and favourable terms are given to the agricultural classes who have rendered good service to Government and the Punjab Government has recently placed at the disposal of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief an area of 190,000 acres of land for allotment to those Punjabi soldiers who have rendered special and meritorious services in the War and to the heirs of those who have lost their lives on service. I am informed further that in view of the urgent demand among the agricultural classes for an extension of primary education, all possible efforts are being made to meet the demand and it is proposed indeed to make such education compulsory where the Local Government can satisfy the Government of India that there is a desire for it, and that with due assistance from the Government the necessary facilities can be provided. In the direction of fostering co-operative credit and of undertaking special measures to secure for the agricultural classes a fair representation in the various departments of Government, I believe also the efforts made in the Punjab have not been equalled, or at any rate exceeded, in any other Province. Nor, Sir, can the recent announcement as to the grant of King's Commissions to Indian officers fail to be of material benefit to the Punjab, from which Province such a large proportion of our fighting men come.

“Sir, the Hon'ble Member now asks us to move in another direction, namely, that of constitutional and administrative changes. He refers in particular to the creation of a High Court, the constitution of an Executive Council, an increase in the numbers of the Provincial Legislative Council, and some change in the representation in the Imperial Council. Finally, he has suggested improvements in the pay of the subordinate judiciary. The Hon'ble Member has compared the position of the Punjab with that of my own Province and he has argued that the Punjab is less favourably treated. Sir, I have shown, I hope I do not wish in any way to depreciate the great services of the Punjab in the war and always to the Empire, but I doubt if it is necessary to make any invidious comparisons between the two Provinces. I think also that I may say

ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF
THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Sir William Vincent]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

that well as the Punjab has done in the way of combatants, the Province will never lack a trumpeter as long as the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shaffi represents it in this Council.

" I think that the simplest method of dealing with the particular proposals which the Hon'ble Member has put forward is to take them seriatim. I begin with that of the question of a High Court. The position is a very simple one. As the result of strong and repeated recommendations of the Local Government, this proposal has been accepted both by the Government of India and by the Secretary of State, and the project is now only delayed by the definite instructions of the Secretary of State that the change in the constitution of the Court is only to be effected subject to financial considerations and after the end of the war. The policy of the Government of India in this matter is therefore declared and they cannot take further action save upon some special and urgent application from the Local Government.

" Turning to the question of an Executive Council, I have read with great interest the report of the recent debate in the Provincial Council and the arguments that were adduced on the proposal. Sir, all I can say is that if the Local Government approach the Government of India in this matter, I will engage that the proposal receives careful and sympathetic consideration. The Hon'ble Member is however aware that the question of an Executive Council for the United Provinces has not been definitely settled nor has the Council for the Province materialised and it is unlikely that during the present financial stringency the Government of India will be willing to incur the additional expenditure which the creation of a Council in the Punjab would involve. There were of course particular reasons for giving an Executive Council to Bihar. At the time of the creation of the Province the people were under Council government and it was thought desirable, when creating the new Province, to retain that form of Government and to avoid making any changes which might excite feeling and resentment.

" There is a subsidiary point to be considered in this connection and that is the constitution of these Councils. I think that the question whether the constitution and numerical strength of the Council in Bihar and Orissa is that which is best suited to meet the administrative requirements of another Province from the point of view both of efficiency and economy is one which will require careful consideration before the Government of India committed themselves to any undertaking on the subject. Similarly, there is the question of expenditure which is a very important factor. The Government of India understand, however, that this question of an Executive Council is engaging the close attention of the Local Government and that they will receive a report from His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor on it soon, and they have no doubt that the considered opinion of the non-official members of the Legislative Council will receive the weight to which it is entitled. I think therefore at present it would be premature for me to say anything more than to undertake carefully to consider any proposal which comes up.

" As to an increase in the numerical strength of the Legislative Council, there appears to be great force in the contentions of the Hon'ble Member and it is prima facie an anomaly that a Province with the revenue, and of the general importance, of the Punjab should have a smaller Legislative Council than Bihar. I might remind the Hon'ble Member, however, that the population of Bihar is approximately 34½ millions as against 20 millions in the Punjab. I only mention this because he has throughout his speech referred to area and not to population. Here, again, however, the real reason for the difference in the strength of the Legislative Council is the fact that when Bihar was constituted it was thought advisable to provide a Council there of the same strength as that of the parent Province. But I must draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to two important points here; in the first place, as he has already pointed out the Punjab Council has already reached the maximum strength provided by the law and no further increase can be effected unless the Government of India Act, 1915, is modified; in the second place, the subject is really very intimately connected with those questions which will be investigated during the visit of the Secretary of State for India to this country, and it would be obviously premature for the Government to make any definite statement on it. I may say further that so far as I am aware—I speak subject to correction—no representation has been made to the Local Government on the subject and I am quite sure that His Honour will afford any suggestion of the kind that is made to him very careful consideration.

“The position as regards the numbers of elected members in the Provincial Council has been explained by the Hon'ble Member. The Government have, however, under consideration a proposal to increase the number of elected members to 14 and to reduce the number of nominated members proportionately. Further, I should like to point out in this connection that in 1909 the number of elected members was only 5, and it has already been increased up to 11. I think that these changes and the proposed further modification to which I have referred indicate the policy of the Local Government, and if the numerical strength of the Council is increased I have no doubt that the policy of increasing the number of elected members will also be considered. I did not quite understand the reference to the Imperial Council. The Hon'ble Member said that three members were elected from Bihar and only one from the Punjab.....”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—

“What I stated, Sir, was that the Legislative Council of Bihar elects two members as its representatives.”

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay:—“It has only one.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—

“I am very sorry for the mistake.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“The position is really very simple. There are three members in the Imperial Council from Bihar and three from the Punjab. The difference is this, that from the Punjab one member only is elected and two are nominated, of whom I believe my Hon'ble friend is one. These two latter members are, as I understand, nominated, in the case of the Muhammadan representatives after consultation with the leading Muhammadan associations in the Province, and in the case of the landholders' representative, after consultation with the Chiefs' association or some similar landholders' association of a representative character. The question of converting the Muhammadan seat into an elected one is however, I believe, under consideration.

“There remains the question of improving the pay of the subordinate judiciary, and here again the first thing really is the question of expense. I am sure the Hon'ble Member will recognise that during the war when additional burdens have been placed on India any additional expenditure is a serious matter, and I do not think he quite appreciates either the extent or the danger of the large increase in recurring expenditure which he proposes. The creation of a High Court will involve a considerable charge on the revenues, the constitution of a Council means further expenditure, and if in addition to this the pay of the judicial officers were increased as he proposes, the cumulative effect on the finance of the province would be very serious.

“I must also remind the Council that the Secretary of State has laid down that, so long as the war lasts, no fresh expenditure of an unremunerative character is to be incurred unless there is an urgent necessity for it. Finally, so far as I am aware, we have not at present under consideration any proposals of the Local Government on this subject of increasing the pay of the judiciary. If, however, we do receive such proposals, and a good case is made out for them, the matter will be carefully considered.

"Sir, I have explained the attitude of the Government towards this Resolution. I am afraid, for the reasons stated, I cannot accept it in its present form ; but I think I have said enough to assure the Hon'ble Member that the subject of his Resolution is entitled to, and will receive, very sympathetic treatment at the hands of the Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay :—"As a member of this Council coming from Bihar, I think it my duty to make my position absolutely clear to my friends from the Punjab. I have every sympathy with the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi in the very modest request that he has put forward before the Council on behalf of his province. In the very able and informing speech which he has just delivered he has unfolded before the Council the statistical, financial, educational, political and military virtues of his province. I am free to admit that the Punjab deservedly occupies a very high place, though not the highest that my friend has claimed for it, as a component part of British India. We are also proud of the very valuable services which have been rendered by the Punjab during these strenuous times of war. Speaking for myself, I have absolutely no objection to the 'assimilation' which my friend claims ; I hope the Council will not also grudge him the 'assimilation' that he claims.

"I am pleased with the reference which my friend has made to the Province of Bihar, and the fact that he has taken that province as his model cannot fail to be flattering to us.

"There was one little inaccuracy in the speech of my Hon'ble friend which has been corrected by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent. That was that he was under the impression that the Bihar Legislative Council sent two members to the Imperial Council as their representatives. I wish it had been so. As regards the numerical strength of the two provinces also, I suppose my friend has an effective answer from the Hon'ble the Home Member. But with all that I think the Punjab has deserved well of the Government and of the country ; and the request that my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi has put forward before the Council comes to this only that his province should have a Legislative Council of a larger size with a non-official majority and that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor there should be assisted by an Executive Council. I do not know whether my Hon'ble friend claims a separate High Court. If he does, I have every sympathy with that. I am very glad that the Hon'ble the Home Member has given such a sympathetic reply to all the grievances that my friend has placed before him as regards his province."

I support the resolution.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishen Dutt Shukul :—"Sir, I rise to support this Resolution. While doing so, I think I should make my position clear as I am afraid that this Resolution has given rise to some misunderstanding in certain quarters. In view of the illuminating speech that has just been delivered by the Hon'ble Mover, I find that the request which he makes will not affect the future fate of the Punjab under the post-war reform scheme. After all, the institution of Council Government in each province is one of the principal features in the memorandum of reforms which many members of this Council have submitted, and I believe we are not doing anything prejudicial to the reform scheme as a whole if we lend support to the principal part of it, with this important modification, however, in the Resolution before us, that the head of the province should invariably be some prominent public man from England.

“It is under these circumstances that I rise to accord my support to this Resolution which has been so ably moved by my Hon'ble friend, and while according support, I would not like to disguise the fact from the Council that it is not altogether from a disinterested motive that I am doing so. What one province gets to-day, I am sure another province will get to-morrow. The Hon'ble the Home Member has already stated in reply to my question that I put yesterday that the Government would be willing to consider the question of giving an Executive Council to our province if public opinion there is sufficiently strong, and this reply encourages me in the belief that at no distant future we will also have the advantage of Council government. Sir, there has always existed a real desire in my province also to have a Council Government, and although it may be that in pressing the demand we may not have shouted sufficiently loud nor have agitated nor have submitted any lengthy representations, but this should not be taken to mean that no real desire exists in our province. Rather the people of my part of the province have always appreciated the benefits of Council Government. And if they have not agitated it is not because the desire did not exist, but because the people of my part of the province are generally by disposition a quiet sort of people. And when the Government has already recognised the advisability of introducing Council Government in other provinces, we expect that the claims of our province will not be overlooked, but rather that the initiative in our case should come from the Government. I therefore support this Resolution which has been moved by my Hon'ble friend with all the earnestness and emphasis that I can command.

“Sir, we are on the eve of a great change in the internal polity of India. Everything points to a great upheaval in popular interest in matters of administration, Government will be more and more subject to popular pressure in various directions from day to day, and unless prominent Indians are associated in a direct and responsible manner in the higher work of government by being made to share the responsibility of Government as colleagues in the Executive Councils of the provincial Governments they will always be lacking in one of the essential elements which will certainly make for considerable strength of the administration. Considerations of expenditure, Sir, need not, I think, stand in the way of carrying out a reform of such vital importance. When the Government have already under consideration the recommendations of the Public Services Commission which involve a heavy increase in the outlay, I do not think it would be a good thing to allow this reform to stand over.

“With these few remarks I beg to support this Resolution and I congratulate the Hon'ble Mover on the sympathetic reply which he has just received from the Hon'ble the Home Member.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah:—“Sir, as the Resolution is worded, I am afraid I cannot give my support to it. I thoroughly sympathise with its object, which is the limited ambition that the legislative and administrative system of the Punjab should be assimilated to the one which prevails in Bihar and Orissa. Sir, this reform is overdue, and I am glad my Hon'ble friend the Mover of this Resolution has at last after such a long time realised that his province was not properly treated. But now that he has aroused himself and brought up this Resolution, unfortunately he has brought it up at a moment which seems to me wholly inopportune. We know that the general question of constitutional reform, which affects the Province of the Punjab as well as the Government of India, is going to be taken up very soon. We have all seen the pronouncement made by the Secretary of State for India and we know that he is coming out to India for that very purpose. I personally, Sir, have held this view, that the Punjab should have a Governor in Council and not a Lieutenant-Governor. The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi however is much more modest in his views and he says he will be quite content to get what Bihar has got. I for one do not agree with him. I think the Punjab should have a Governor in Council like any other Province, like Bombay or Bengal; and I also go further than the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi does in another direction. I think the High Court should be under the control of the Government of India, like the High Court of Calcutta. That is a question of the utmost importance, not only to the Punjab but to every other Province, and the sooner the question is seriously taken up the better. I have no doubt it will be taken up when the general scheme of reform is being discussed. I am therefore unable to support the Resolution in the form in which it has been moved. I may tell you, Sir, I may tell the Council here, that considerable misapprehension has been aroused in the Punjab in view of the form in which the Resolution has been worded and the time at which it is brought before this Council. Several telegrams have reached us in which people have expressed grave apprehension about it. However, the reply which the Hon'ble the Home Member has given to this proposal will I have no doubt satisfy not only the Punjab but the whole of India, namely, that the Government will give it their sympathetic consideration and of course that was the only reply which the Government could have given at this stage. Therefore the question resolves itself into this, that this question of the Punjab must be taken up along with the general question of the constitutional reforms which should be introduced in India after the war. In these circumstances, I am unable to support the Resolution much as I sympathise with its object. I cannot support it, because it ought to have been brought long ago and the present moment is an inopportune one. Further, the form in which it has been put is not satisfactory, because in my opinion the Punjab should have a Governor in Council and a High Court under the control of the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—"Sir, I have been a silent member of this Council for four Simla Sessions because the interests and aspirations of the Punjab were so ably and adequately represented by its non-official members that no intervention on my part was necessary. But to-day's resolution raises issues so closely bound up with the recent history and future progress of the province that I feel constrained to break the cold chain of silence which has hung o'er me so long—in this Council if not outside—and to join in the discussion.

"In the first place I must congratulate the Hon'ble Mover on the eloquence with which he has championed the claims of the Punjab to a broader legislative and administrative system; I congratulate him even more in spite of the criticisms which his Resolution has received on the eminently sane and practical manner in which he has pressed those claims. Eloquence is a common enough quality in India; common sense and sanity of judgment are unfortunately less common; both are essentially Punjab qualities. They are also pre-eminently British qualities, and it is the common possession of those qualities—a heritage perhaps from the parent Aryan stock—that has led, ever since the destinies of the two were united, to mutual comprehension, mutual confidence and mutual co-operation between the British Government and the people of the Punjab. It is the fashion now-a-days in certain quarters to sneer at this mutual co-operation between the Government and the people. It is the fashion to picture the Government and the people as occupying hostile campa, and to substitute agitation for co-operation. My own unhappy country furnishes a sad instance of what that policy has led to elsewhere. It should be a warning to us in India. In opening this session His Excellency the Viceroy appealed for mutual confidence and co-operation between the Government and the people in considering the problems before us. Let us see what that co-operation has already accomplished in the Punjab. Within 70 years it has raised the Punjab from one of the most backward and impoverished provinces of the Empire to one of the most prosperous and progressive. It enabled the Punjab to save India in the mutiny, and in the present war it has enabled the Punjab to achieve those splendid results not only for India but for the British Empire which we have heard recited to-day.

[Sir Michael O'Dwyer.]

“ At the risk of repetition I cannot refrain from going over some of the ground covered by the Hon'ble Mover and the Hon'ble Member in charge, and telling you in a little more detail what the Punjab has done.

“ With less than one-thirteenth of the population of the Indian Empire the Punjab furnishes 60 per cent. of the Indian army recruited in India. Though the drain on its manhood was already considerable at the outbreak of the war, it has responded to the King-Emperor's call with a promptness and a vigour which find no parallel in provinces that claim to be more advanced. Out of the 276,000 combatants recruited in India within the last 3 years, no less than 155,000 or nearly 60 per cent. were drawn from the Punjab—excluding some 40,000 non-combatants—leaving 120,000 from among the remaining 290 millions of the Empire.

“ The Council may be interested to hear how this total of 155,000 is made up, and the point is not without bearing on the resolution. For the claims of the province to a wider legislative and administrative system have been based largely on the services of those men, and it is well that we should know who they are. The composition is roughly as follows :—

Muhammadans ... 70,000—	Punjabi Muhammadans ... 60,000
	Hindustani Muhammadans ... 8,000

And here I may say that the number would have been even greater were it not that many Muhammadans of the East Punjab distinctly object to being enlisted and styled as Hindustani Muhammadans, and I have now made a representation to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that they should be called what they actually are—Punjabi Muhammadans.

Pathans...	...	... 1,000
Kashmiris	...	... 1,000

Sikhs ... 43,000—They form less than one-hundredth of the population of the Empire but furnish one-sixth of the fighting forces.

" These numbers were almost exclusively furnished by the agricultural classes, and this is a point which I wish to emphasise.

The figures are exclusive of the Imperial Service Troops furnished by our Punjab States. The Maharajas of Patiala, Jind, Kapurthala, the Rajas of Sirmur and Faridkot, the Nawabs of Bahawalpur and Maler Kotla have all sent to the various fronts splendidly equipped contingents which are serving with credit to themselves and with honour to their respective States.

" That is what we have already done in the Punjab, we are proud of it but we are not content with it. We are prepared to do as much again and are taking active steps to do so. In June and July the Punjab furnished over 23,000 combatants far more than the rest of the Indian Empire.

" Though the burden is heavy and the sacrifice is severe, with God's help we shall not bend under the burden nor shrink from the sacrifice. But we should be glad if other provinces would show due recognition of our efforts and bear a more equitable share of the burden.

" We should be glad if those who are so fond of basing political claims on the loyalty of India and the sacrifices of the Indian army—which is mainly a Punjab army—would show their loyalty to the King-Emperor and their sympathy for the province which is bearing the burden of sacrifice, not by words, however eloquent, but in some practical form, for instance, by active help in the recruiting campaign in those provinces which have hitherto made such an inadequate response to the King-Emperor's call.....

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—" I rise, Sir, to a point of order. Is His Honour in order in referring to these matters ? "

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—" They appear to me to be relevant to the resolution before the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—" I thank you for your ruling and I am glad to know that I am in order in making this suggestion.

" This we are entitled to ask for but what do we find ? I will quote an extract from a Bengali paper, dated 5th July, contrasting the lofty patriotism of Bengal with the mercenary materialism of the Punjab.

" Colonel Boudier, the recruiting officer in Bengal, has stated that from the Delhi Division alone 2,000 recruits are being secured every week while not 500 are being secured in a month from Bengal. This statement is true in one sense. . . . The class of men from Delhi, the Punjab and the United Provinces who become sepoys accept this service under the stress of hunger. Unless they can become fighting sepoys they come to Bengal and accept service as darwans under the Babus. Furthermore they are without any education and the profession of arms is their sole means of livelihood from generation to generation. There can be no comparison between them and the Bengali lads. . . . The sepoys of the Bengali paltan have not enlisted as sepoys for the sake of wages. . . . By comparing them with the wage-earning sepoy of the North-West, Colonel Boudier has hurt the feelings of the Bengali sepoy and the Bengali people. This comparison is in a large measure humiliating.

"Such is an appreciation from Bengal of the men who are prepared to sacrifice their all in the defence of the Empire including Bengal.

"Again, while our men of the Punjab are rallying in their hundreds of thousands to the service of their King and country, we find politicians in other provinces—I am happy to think we have none such in the Punjab—actually dissuading their fellow-citizens from joining the Indian Defence Force.

"So far the united efforts of prominent politicians have succeeded in raising some 3,600 applicants for the Indian Defence Force. I must correct myself or I shall be again accused of a reprehensible untruth, I should say the efforts of most of the prominent politicians—for from pique or petulance some of them thought fit to stand aloof. ....

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"I rise to a point of order. Has that any relevance to this question? I think on the present resolution it does not arise."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I would suggest to the Hon'ble Member that there is nothing strictly irrelevant in what has been said. If I am to stop every possibly irrelevant remark in this debate, my task will be a very heavy one.

The Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque :—"I only hope, Sir, that we shall not be stopped when we speak like this.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I shall hope to accord to the Hon'ble Member the same license that I am allowing to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer :—"Of these I am glad to find that the Punjab, though it came late into the field, has produced one-fifth. His Excellency the Viceroy at the last meeting commented on the meagre results. They will appear even more meagre when I inform the Council that I could lay my hand on half a dozen gentlemen in the Punjab, none of them claiming to be prominent politicians, but three of them non-official members of my Legislative Council, each of whom has provided over 3,000 combatants since the war began. Sir, consider how the anxieties of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief would be relieved and my work as President of the Punjab Recruiting Board would be lightened if on a personal appeal from His Excellency, the 30 non-official members of the Council—excluding the Punjab—would undertake between now and the end of the war each to produce 3,000 combatants! Could there be any more worthy, more patriotic task?

"Take another aspect of the case. While the Punjab soldier is shedding his blood in three continents in gallant resistance to the King-Emperor's enemies, we find he is receiving with little recognition and little support from many of his fellow countrymen at home. And some of those gentlemen, forgetful of the security they owe to the British Navy and the British Indian Army, regardless of the terrible crisis through which the Empire is passing, callously discussing and even actively preaching the doctrine of passive resistance to the King Emperor's Government. Some of those men have, I believe, taken an oath to be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty the King-Emperor. By what subtle reasoning they reconcile their oath to their practice is a mystery which I will not attempt to solve. Any how that conception of loyalty is not understood by us in the Punjab. The Punjab has no use even for passive loyalty, still less for passive resistance. I only hope that those who preach those pernicious doctrines elsewhere will be guided by the advice given by His Excellency at the last meeting, and at least in their own interests will see fit not to extend their propaganda to a Province where disloyalty under whatever name we may disguise it has never taken and will never take root. ....

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah:—"I rise to a point of order. I want a ruling as to whether the Hon'ble Member is entitled to make these remarks and invidious distinctions comparing his province with other provinces. I want a distinct ruling, Sir.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member shall have a distinct ruling. To-day has been a day of comparisons. Comparisons, we have heard, are odious, but we have had comparisons made in this debate by more than one Member, and I cannot prevent another Member who wishes to reply to them from making further comparisons. I cannot hold that comparisons though odious, are to-day irrelevant."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—"Sir, I crave your indulgence for this digression. But I claim to understand the temper and feelings of the people of the Punjab and in justice to them I feel bound to emphasise the distinction between their genuine and spontaneous loyalty and the sinister attitude of those who would take advantage of the embarrassments of the Empire in her hour of need.

"I need say no more on the question of men. But take our contributions in money.

"The Punjab is not a Province of great wealth though thanks to the combined efforts of the administration and the people it enjoys a high degree of agricultural prosperity based on our wonderful irrigation system. We have little or none of the great industries, of the foreign trade, of the great estates which bulk so large in the wealth of other Provinces; and yet our contributions far exceed those of Provinces to which we are much inferior in wealth and population. In this respect the Punjab has given another instance of its self-sacrifice and loyalty. ....

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah:—"May I point out that the Hon'ble Member has exceeded 15 minutes."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member is at least a minute too soon, and the interruptions which have taken place probably account for at least another minute."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—"Again take the matter of materials. The provision of food-stuffs for our millions of troops in the field and the millions of workers in the United Kingdom has been one of the most serious preoccupations of the war. In this respect India is rendering valuable assistance, but I believe I am within the mark in saying that two-thirds of the food-stuffs exported from India—excluding Burma—are drawn from the Punjab.

'So far I have dwelt on the services of the Punjab rendered in direct connection with the war and I would like to add that in that splendid record the Ruling Princes and Chiefs of the Punjab from His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala have played a great part, a part worthy of their noble traditions. But perhaps the most signal proof the province has given of its practical loyalty is the manner in which it has combated internal disorder and repressed incipient rebellion.

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Sir Michael O'Dwyer.]

"Hon'ble members are doubtless familiar with the serious dangers which menaced the security of the Province during the first two years of the war, the Ghadr conspiracy and other overt and covert movements engineered by the King's enemies within or without India with the object of subverting the Government. But perhaps they are less familiar with the action, the prompt, vigorous and decisive action, taken by the people of the Punjab—Muhammadans, Sikhs and Hindus—to range themselves on the side of law and order and to stamp out sedition and anarchy. There was no hesitation, no sitting on the fence, on mawkish sympathy with red-handed crime, no insincere apologies for so-called misguided youths pursuing noble ideals, no subtle distinctions between evolutionary and revolutionary patriots.

"The Punjabi like the British is perhaps lacking in that mysterious quality known as spirituality. If you were to try and explain to him what it means he would probably shake his head and say no doubt it was an excellent thing, an admirable virtue something like charity and like charity often used to cover a multitude of sins.

"He might even go so far as to compare it in the latter respect with that equally vague term Home Rule, which many of our politicians propound as a legitimate and constitutional ideal while many of our revolutionaries have put it forward as the goal they have in view when attempting to subvert the King's Government by the sword, the pistol and the bomb. If any Hon'ble Member doubts the accuracy of this statement which I repeat with a full sense of responsibility, I would refer him to the evidence and the judicial findings in the various Punjab Conspiracy Cases, I would refer him to the files of the Ghadr newspaper and I would also ask him to verify his facts before recklessly launching an accusation of reprehensible untruth against the author of the statement. If any such accusation has been made whether in ignorance of the facts or otherwise, it would be honourable to withdraw it.

"I fear I may have spoken at undue length of the services of my Province to which His Excellency the Viceroy paid an eloquent tribute at his recent visit to Lahore. But this is my first and perhaps my last opportunity of bearing witness in this Council to the great qualities of the people I have known and loved for over 30 years. From what I have said it follows that I welcome most heartily the assurances given to-day that their steady loyalty and manly services are appreciated at their true value by the Government of India and are receiving and will continue to receive full and suitable recognition.

"Some of the forms which that recognition might take are indicated in the speeches of the Hon'ble Mover and the Hon'ble Member for the Home Department. The joint representation of the Local Government and the Government of India have already obtained the Secretary of State's sanction to the High Court at the end of the war if financial conditions allow, and I am happy to be in a position to say that I anticipate no difficulty on that score. The attitude of the Local Government and of the Government of India towards the question of an Executive Council has already been explained, and I need only repeat that the question is receiving close and sympathetic consideration from my Government which will endeavour to base its recommendation on the true interests of the Province as a whole. The same principle will govern our attitude in regard to the strength and constitution of the Legislative Council when the question is raised.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF
THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Sir Michael O'Dwyer.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"I would here explain that in the matter of Legislative Council we are on a rather different footing from other large Provinces as we were much later in making a start. The first Legislative Council was not established till 1897 and was entirely nominated. The system of election, which is still regarded with disfavour by the majority of the rural population, was of slow growth in the Punjab and was first introduced under the Council Regulations of 1909. Even then only 5 seats were open to election. The number has since then been steadily increased at the instance of the Local Government, as experience was gained and suitable constituencies were forthcoming, and our Council now consists of 11 elected members, 11 official members and 6 nominated non-official members besides 2 seats for experts. In connection with the general scheme of political reform the Punjab Government will be quite willing to consider the question of increasing the total strength of the Council (though having regard to population the present number compares favourably with other large provinces) and also of further increasing the proportion of elected members. But here I might say that there is no Province where special arrangements to secure due representation of races, religions, classes and interests are more necessary. All provinces have their Hindu-Muhammadian problem, we have the very important Sikh interests to consider as well. Of our population 55 per cent. is Muhammadian, 33 per cent. Hindu and 11 per cent. Sikh. In 1909 all three seats then open to election were carried by Muhammadans. In 1912 out of 6 seats 4 were won by Hindus, 1 by a Sikh and only 1 by a Muhammadian. Last year of 11 elected seats, 5 fell to Hindus, 5 to Muhammadans, 1 to a European and none to a Sikh.

"In the past it has therefore been necessary to rectify these anomalous results by resort to nomination and in the future we must continue to adjust matters by the same method or by a system of minority representation—most probably by both combined.

"I have covered the main points in which the Hon'ble Mover would assimilate our legislative and administrative system to that of Bihar and Orissa and I am glad to find that though we may differ as to details, there is no difference in principle between us. The other matters to which he has referred are matters relating to the improvement of the pay and prospects of the various services. They will come under consideration in connection with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and I think the Hon'ble Mover hardly needs an assurance from me that as far as the Provincial Government is concerned—I cannot naturally bind the Cerberus who watches with such vigilance over the Treasure House of the Government of India—they will be considered in no carping or niggardly spirit.

"And now, Sir, I would invite the consideration of the Council to a broader aspect of the matter.

"Bihar and Orissa has been selected for comparison with the Punjab. But as the Hon'ble Mover and his supporters would be the first to admit, we in the Punjab have our own proud traditions which we desire to retain, our own aspirations which we hope to realise. We desire that our future development, whether political, social or economical, should not slavishly copy, that of other provinces with which we may have little in common, but should follow the genius and aptitude of our people.

"Take one cardinal feature of the province. We have no great territorial aristocracy like other provinces, but we have what is perhaps even more valuable. We have over most of the province a large class of landed gentry or prosperous yeomen living on the land, in close touch with the rural masses of whom they are usually the recognized leaders, and an invaluable support to the administration. Over all the province we have that splendid body of stalwart peasant proprietors, Muhammadans, Hindus, Sikhs—whose energy and enterprise guided by a Government in which they have never lost confidence, have built up the prosperity of the Punjab—and whose loyalty and sturdy valour have built up the fabric of the Indian Army. These are the two classes to which the Punjab Government has looked and never looked in vain in times of stress and difficulty, those are the two classes to which we owe almost exclusively the magnificent contributions which the province is now making in men and materials. In recognising the services of the province during the war it is only just and reasonable that those classes should receive first consideration.

“ The political and administrative reforms already discussed and others which may follow in due course will appeal primarily to the educated urban class, which is in the best position to appreciate and profit by them: but they will leave the vast majority of the two classes in question cold.

“ The question, then has been asked by the Hon'ble Sardar what then have we done or what are we going to do to show our gratitude to those who have so strong a claim on us? I am glad to think that we have already a good record on the credit side. The great improvement in the pay, pensions and allowances of the Indian Army has already given a powerful stimulus to the fighting classes, the ear-marking of 180,000 acres of colony land for allotment to men who have rendered distinguished services in the field is a further encouragement, while the recent announcement in regard to the grant of commissions will specially appeal to the landed gentry.

“ Again the classes in question are almost exclusively land-holders and there is no part of the world where the ownership of land is so highly prized and so jealously guarded as in the Punjab.

“ At one time under our rigid law of contract and in the absence of any restriction on usury (a defect which we now have reason to hope will soon be remedied) the sturdy peasantry of the Punjab were being rapidly expropriated by the money-lending and commercial classes eager to acquire land both for the profits and the social status attaching to it. The Government of the Punjab was faced 20 years ago with a serious political and economic problem. It had the courage—whatever defects it may have, the Punjab Government I think like the Punjab people has never been lacking in courage—in spite of much agitation and opposition from the moneyed classes and even from those who posed as leaders of the people, to face the problem and to tackle it effectively by passing into law the Punjab Land Alienation Act of 1900. That Act about which there were so many misgivings and head shakings at the time supplemented by the beneficent system of co-operative credit, is now regarded by the Punjab zamindars as their Magna Charta. It is to it we owe the fact that we are appealing to-day not to a sullen, discontented and half expropriated peasantry, eager perhaps for a change which might restore them to their own, but to a loyal and contented body of men who realise that the Government has stood and still stands between them and ruin and who consequently rally in their tens of thousands to its support.

“ But we have not only done what legislative and administrative measures could do to maintain the zamindars in possession of their paternal acres, we have also relieved congestion and increased their prosperity by opening up to them several millions of acres in the great canal colonies. In allotting those lands we have invariably given them priority, seeking not so much the profit of Government as the advantage of the rural population.

ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF
THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA

[*Sir Michael O'Dwyer ; Pandit Madan
Mohan Malaviya.*]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

" In the older colonies we have allowed the colonists who came in as Government tenants to purchase for Rs. 12-8-0 per acre, or even less, land which they could sell next day for Rs. 200 to Rs. 300 per acre ; and even in the more recent colonies they are allowed to purchase the proprietary right, which has a present average value of Rs. 250 per acre, for a sum which must not exceed Rs. 100 per acre—the payment being spread over 30 years. We have also made large grants, I would draw the attention of the Hon'ble Sardar to this, covering some hundreds of thousands of acres in the various colonies, to the landed gentry and yeomen of the Province, on the same lenient conditions thereby restoring the prosperity of many an ancient and loyal family. We have other great projects of canal extension and colonization in contemplation and the knowledge that they will further promote the prosperity of our landed classes will be one of our strongest arguments in pressing them to realisation.

" Again, take the question of land revenue settlements. The Punjab Government has long accepted it as a principle of revenue administration that the peasant proprietors, especially in those districts from which the Indian Army is largely drawn, shall receive special favour in assessment. The re-assessment of all the rich districts of the Central Punjab has been completed within the last 5 or 6 years, and I am in a position to say that Government has really imposed a demand above half of the half net rental which is supposed to be the standard of assessment in the Province. At the same time where agricultural conditions are fairly stable and fully developed it has raised the term of settlement from 20 to 30 years. The result of this leniency is to appreciate enormously the value of proprietary rights which 50 years ago sold at from 5 to 10 times but now sell at an average of 170 times the land revenue demand, a figure which excites the envy and admiration of other Provinces, even those under permanent settlement.

" All these things are done in the interests of our zamindars and especially of those tribes and classes which enlist so freely in the Indian Army.

" To take a concrete case. A few weeks ago I had to decide on the term of settlement of a district in the North Punjab. The previous terms had always been 20 years or less and there were several arguments for adhering to that term. But the district is essentially one of small peasant proprietors and is among the first four or five in India in providing men for the Army. That fact turned the scale, and the Punjab Government readily sanctioned a thirty years term outside the tracts now coming for the first time under canal irrigation. I could multiply such instances but I think I have said enough to establish my claim that the Punjab Government is not forgetful of those who have deserved so well of the State.

" But Sir, we are not content with this ; we want to do more and we are taking practical steps to do more for the progress and prosperity of the people and especially of the rural population to whom we owe so much. What are the evils from which they chiefly suffer ? The most obvious are ignorance, disease, crime, abuse of office and corruption by those in authority, and finally excessive litigation and the law's delay.

" Some people tell us that the panacea for these and all other evils is self-government and that it should be granted at once or within a definite period. While sceptical about its being a panacea, I readily admit that self-government within the Empire in a form suitable to the traditions and aptitudes of the various component parts is a legitimate and an accepted ideal.....

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:— " I again rise to a point of order, Sir. Are we to hear an address on self-government ? "

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[The Vice-President ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Sir Michael O'Dwyer ; Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Does the Hon'ble Member really wish me to answer the question?"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I submit it is not relevant."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—"I confess, Sir, that I am trying to establish the fact that we want to better the position of the Punjab and its people. But I would remind those who press for it that the ideal can only be realised when the three indispensable conditions, laid down not by any bureaucrat eager to retain power but by so high an authority and so great champion of popular rights as Mill, are fulfilled. Those are—

- (1) That the great majority of the people shall desire it.
- (2) That they shall be capable of exercising it.
- (3) That they shall be able and willing to undertake the responsibilities—among them external and internal defence—which it entails.

"His Excellency at the opening meeting of this session made took on behalf of the Government of India the responsibility of assisting the people to reach the goal, and indicated the three main lines of advance towards it. But speaking of my own Province while I would welcome speedy progress I may say that those conditions are not likely to be fulfilled for many a long day....."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah:—"I would ask the Vice-President if there is any time limit to the speech of His Honour?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"His Honour has exceeded the ordinary time limit with my permission."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer:—"Meantime—while the people with the aid of Government are fitting themselves for self-government the meaning and responsibilities of which at present but few understand—it is our duty to do what we can to ensure to them good Government which all desire and which all have a right to expect, for it was guaranteed to them in the most solemn manner by the Queen's Proclamation of 1858. This I venture to assert we in the Punjab are doing. I refer to these matters because it has been said that the Punjab has been treated in a stepmotherly way by Government and I want to show what Government has done and proposes to do for the Punjab.

"Take the common evils affecting the masses which I have already mentioned. We hope to combat ignorance and disease and at the same time promote local self-government by conferring larger powers on local bodies which will enable them with support and financial assistance from Government to extend widely the facilities for primary education, sanitation and medical relief. Among other measures a Bill is now being drafted by my Government which will enable Local Bodies to make primary education free and compulsory in areas where the majority of the people clearly desire it and where adequate school facilities are provided.

"Again, at the risk of being considered reactionary by advanced politicians, I venture still to hold the old fashioned view that the protection of the lives and property of the people is the first duty of a civilised Government and must have priority over all others. With the active co-operation of the great mass of the people we are waging a successful campaign against crime. Last year the reduction in serious crime was 16 per cent., and this year it promises to be even greater as the co-operation between the people and the police is steadily growing closer.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB TO THAT OF
THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[Sir Michael O'Dwyer; the Vice President.]

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"A more difficult problem is the struggle against official corruption and abuse of power because it is one in which the assistance of an oriental people long accustomed to view these as necessary evils is not readily forthcoming. But here too we have boldly undertaken the task. The people already realise that the Government, while it will show no mercy to the false accuser, is actively on their side in exposing the bribe-taker and the extortioner; and many such even in high places have been already brought to justice.

"To find an effective remedy for the abuse of litigation and the law's delay is the most difficult task of all for we are dealing with people who regard the law courts as providing the interest and amusement which western countries find in the theatre, the race-course, the football ground and the boxing ring. We have tried many palliatives but I confess so far with indifferent success.

"But we do not despair, and by the codification of the customary law governing the civil rights of the rural population which we have now undertaken, we hope to attain ultimately a measure of precision and certainty which will reduce frivolous litigation and speed up the slow processes of the law.

"I fear I have wearied the Council with this long narrative of what we have done, are doing and propose to do to honour the claims which have been established by the people of the Punjab, and especially the rural population. The measures are practical and substantial rather than showy and will perhaps appeal but little to the impatient politician. But in these days when we are in danger of being deafened by political harangues, of being blinded by the shower of political manifestoes, it is well occasionally to return to mother earth, to clear our minds of shams and illusions, and to ask ourselves what will all this noise and talk do for the man on the sod, the man behind the plough, the man whose life is a long drawn question between a crop and a crop. It is on him after all that the burden of empire mainly rests. In the Punjab I hope we have not been forgetful of him.

"I will endeavour to sum up my arguments in a few propositions—

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I would suggest to His Honour that the time has come to adjourn the Council and possibly it may be desirable to postpone the remainder of this discussion."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer :—"I have just finished, Sir, if you will give me one minute.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"Certainly."

The Hon'ble Sir Michael O'Dwyer :—"(1) The traditional good understanding and co-operation between the people of the Punjab and their Government have enabled the Province not only to overcome every attack on internal order and security but also to contribute out of all proportion to its population and resources to the defence of the Empire in this mighty struggle.

(2) The Province has thereby established prima facie its claim to the wider legislative and administrative developments indicated in the resolution the principle of which as modified by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has my complete support.

(3) But neither in the Punjab nor elsewhere can man live by politics alone, nor even by the political reforms now foreshadowed, and we have to look round for more direct and practical methods of recognising the services of the Punjab and especially of its fighting classes.

RESOLUTION re ASSIMILATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND

THE PROVINCE OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

[13TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[*Sir Michael O'Dwyer ; Pandit Madan
Mohan Malaviya ; the Vice-President.*]

(4) I have indicated the substantial recognition already given by Government, and I have attempted to outline some of the further measures which are proposed.

(5) I am confident that to-day's discussion will enable the Government of India and this Council to realise what they owe to the splendid loyalty and the virile manhood of the Punjab, that it will stimulate other provinces to similar if not equal sacrifices and that we in the Punjab can rely on the practical support of the Government of India and of this Council in honouring the debt.

"One word more while claiming no exclusive merits for our administration in the Punjab, I hope we have kept before us the lofty ideal set forth in Queen Victoria's Proclamation of 1858:—

'It is our earnest desire to administer its (i.e., the Indian) Government for the benefit of all Our subjects resident therein. In their prosperity will be Our strength; in their contentment Our security; and in their gratitude Our best reward.'

"I claim that the august words of Her Majesty of blessed memory have been substantially fulfilled in the Punjab of to-day and that with the same mutual confidence and co-operation between Government and the people they will continue to be realised in the Punjab of the future."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Council will now adjourn till Wednesday the 19th September."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Mr. Vice-President, before we adjourn I have one request to make."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member will have the opportunity of speaking when the Council re-assembles."

The Council adjourned till Wednesday, the 19th September 1917.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday,
15th September 1917.

Burma.—The rainfall during the week was general throughout the Province. Thaton reports over 10 inches of rain. In eleven other districts the fall exceeded 5 inches. In the dry zone three districts received over 3 inches of rain and two over 2 inches. In the northern districts and in the Shan States moderate rain fell. The fall in the Upper Chindwin district exceeded 8 inches. Transplantation of winter rice has been almost completed in Lower Burma and in irrigated tracts of Upper Burma. Harvesting of early sesamum and cultivation of juar, beans, and late sesamum are proceeding. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Livestock is healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has fallen further to rupees 79 and is considerably below normal. The market for white rice is dull.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable and generally favourable but more rain is wanted for the transplantation of winter rice in north Kamrup and in the Garo Hills. Harvesting of autumn rice is approaching completion. Cutting of jute, manufacture of tea and transplantation of winter rice continue. Prospects of standing crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The price of common rice is fairly stationary.

Bengal.—During the week the weather has been seasonable almost all over the Province, although more rain is wanted in certain districts for harvesting and steeping of jute as well as for transplantation of winter paddy. Harvesting of jute and other autumn crops still continues. Transplantation of winter rice is also still going on. Cattle disease is reported from nine districts. The average price of common rice has a slight tendency to fall as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week the rainfall was general over the Province, the fall being light to moderate. Harvesting of jute and other autumn crops continues. Transplantation of paddy is still going on in some districts but more rain is wanted in parts of Saran, Darbhanga, Bhagalpur and Purnea. Standing crops are, on the whole, doing well. The price of common rice has risen in two districts, fallen in five and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from thirteen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall during the week was general but still deficient for rice in Azamgarh, Ballia and Buxi. Maize, millets and early rice are being harvested and indigo manufactured. Cotton picking has commenced in places but cotton has been damaged slightly through rain in parts of the Upper Doab. Weeding of summer and preparations for winter crops continue. Standing crops are generally in good condition though they have suffered some injury in a few districts from excessive rain. Prospects are favourable. Cattle disease continues but the condition of agricultural stock is generally satisfactory. Fodder is still scarce in the flooded parts of Ballia but elsewhere it is ample. Prices are stationary.

Punjab.—During the week light to moderate rain was nearly general. In parts of a few districts it was fairly heavy. It is causing more harm than good and is not wanted for the present. The condition of standing crops is average to good but excessive rains have damaged crops especially cotton and maize in several districts. Picking of cotton, reaping of bajra and maize and sowing of gram and oilseeds are in progress. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water for drinking and irrigation purposes are sufficient. Canals are closed in some districts as irrigation is not required owing to heavy rainfall. Stocks of food grains are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary but have risen slightly in some districts. They range generally between normal and warning rates, except those of autumn grains which are in some cases below normal. Price of wheat:—Lahore and Rawalpindi 9½, Lyallpur 9½ and Ambala and Ferozepore 10 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—During the week rain fell throughout the Province. Fodder and water are sufficient. The condition of cattle is good. Prospects of autumn crops are good. Sarshaf and taramira are being sown, rice reaped and cotton and chillies picked in parts of Peshawar. The outturn is average. The Peshawar canal is partly running. The prices of wheat in Peshawar is 9½ and in Dera Ismail Khan 10½ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Heavy rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 12 and maize from 13 to 25 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is fair. There is no cattle disease. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The rainfall during the week was insignificant. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are rising.

Rajputana.—During the week moderate to heavy rain fell throughout Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara. The weather is cloudy. Standing crops are in good condition but have been damaged in most places by excessive rain. Harvesting has commenced. The condition of cattle is fair to good. Water and fodder are ample. Prices are rising slightly.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general. The principal falls were 4 inches in Mehidpur and Dhar, 3 inches in Khargon, Rutlam and Dewas, 2 inches in Garot and Alirajpur and 1 inch in Karnod, Bundelkhand, Jhabua, Jobat and Manpur. The fall was insufficient in the Kukshi pargana of the Dhar State. Sowings have been completed in Gwalior. Autumn crops are being weeded except in Malwa and in some places in Indore where the operations have been stopped owing to rain. Land for spring crops is being prepared in Bundelkhand and in the Southern States. The condition of standing crops is unsatisfactory in Gwalior and Malwa and fair to good elsewhere. Damage by rain is reported from Gwalior, Bhopal, Baghelkhand and Malwa. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are high in Bhopal and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—During the week moderate to heavy rain was received throughout the Provinces. Some damage to autumn crops due to excessive rain is reported in parts of the Nerbudda and Jabulpore divisions. Elsewhere the condition of crops is generally good. A break which seems to have set in will be beneficial. Preparation of land for spring crops and weeding of autumn crops are in progress in places. Fodder is ample. Cattle are healthy. There are no marked variations in prices.

Feudatory States.—Prospects of crops are favourable. Harvesting of rice on light soils has commenced.

Bombay.—Rain fell during the week. The fall was excessive in parts of Sind and good elsewhere. More rain is still needed in the eastern talukas of Nasik and in Ahmednagar, Poona, Satara and Belgaum. Standing crops are in good condition except for slight damage by rats in three talukas of Karachi, by rats and grasshoppers in the desert division and in one taluka of Thar and Parkar, by insects in parts of the Upper Sind Frontier and by continuous rain in three talukas of Sukkur, Larkana, two Prants of Baroda, parts of the Upper Sind Frontier, Thar and Parkar, Kaira and Palanpur. The fodder supply is generally adequate. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Drinking water is adequate. Water for irrigation is deficient in parts of Dharwar. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—The rainfall during the week was heavy. The fall was excessive especially in the Nander, Medak, Nizamabad and Adilabad districts. The average fall was 4 inches 19 cents. The highest fall was 10 inches 68 cents. Autumn crops are in fair to good condition and are being weeded. They suffered by excessive rain in parts. Early rice is in fair to good condition and is being weeded. The crop has suffered by blight in parts of Andol. Sowings of spring crops are progressing. Cattle disease prevails in seven talukas. Prices of grains: wheat 6½, coarse rice 6½ and juar 10½ seers per rupee. The highest price of juar in districts is 7 seers per rupee in Bir, Nander and Bidar and the lowest 17 seers per rupee in Raichur.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was good in Bangalore and Kolar and light to fair elsewhere. The price of rice has fallen in Hassan, Kadur and Shimoga and that of ragi in Kadur. Markets are well supplied. Sowing and transplantation of paddy and ragi are in progress. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Prospects are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 2 inches 4 cents. Agricultural prospects are good. Picking of cardamom continues. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was heavy in Sandur and Madura, good in the Circars except Guntur, Bellary, Anantapur, Cuddapah, Madras, South Arcot, Central Tanjore, Pudukkottai, Ramnad, West Coast except Travancore and the Nilgiris and light to fair elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but rain is required in parts of three districts. The water-supply is insufficient in parts of Ganjam, Bellary, Anantapur, Nellore, South Arcot, Central and South except Tanjore.
